

J O UR N A L  OFA

V O Y A G E

T O

NORTH-AMERICA.

JOURNAL 0 F A

V O Y A G E  T O  NORTH-AMERICA.

Undertaken by Order of the
F R E N C H K ING. CONTAINING

The Geographical Defcription and Natural Hiftory of that Country, particularly
C A N
A D
A.
TOGETHER WITH

An Account of the Customs, Characters, Religion, Manners and Traditions of the original Inhabitants.

In a Series of Letters to the Duchefs of Lesdiguieres. Tranflated from the French of P. de Charlevoix.
V O L. II.

$$
L O N D O N:
$$

Printed for R, and J. Dodsley in Pall-Mall. MDCCLXI.
.

$$
\begin{gathered} \text { U RB } \\
\text { yET8 } \\
\text { y } 2 C^{2} \\
\text { c2 } \\
\text { v.2 } \end{gathered}
$$

THE

C O N T $\quad$ O $\quad$ N T S

> OFTHE

SECOND VOLUME.

LETTER XVII.

1ESCRIPTION of Lake Erie. Voyage as far as Detroit or the Narrows. ProjeEt for a Settlement in this Place. Cause of its Failure. Council called by the Commandant of Fort Pontchartrain, and the Subject of it. Of the Games of the Indians

LETTERXVIII.

Some Particulars relating to the Cbaradter, Cuftoms, and Government of the Indians

LETTER XIX.

Voyage from the Narrows to Michillimakinac. Defcription of the Country. Of the Marriages of the Indians

LETTERLETTER XX.
Voyage to the Bay. Defcription of it, and of theCourfe thitber. Irruption of the Spaniards intothe Country of the Miffouri Indians, and their De-feat. Dances of the Indians59
L E T T ER XXI.
Departure from Michillimakinac. Obfervations onthe Currents in the Lakes. Cbaracter of the In-dians of Canada.: Their good and ill 2ualities 77
L E T TER XXII.
Voyage to the River St. Jofeph. Obfervations withrefpect to the Rivers which fall into Lake Michi-gan on the eafern Side. Of Fatber Marquette'sRiver, and of the Origin of this Name. Of theGames of the Indians. Some particulars of theCbaratter of these Nations93
LETTER XXIII.
Sequel of the Cbaracter of the Indians and of their Manner of living ..... 113
LETTER XXIV.
Of the Religion and Traditions of the Indians of Canada ..... 141
L E T TER XXV.
Sequel of the Traditions of the Indians ..... 165LETTER

C O $\quad \mathbf{N}$ T E N T S. vï

LETTER XXVI.

Departure from the Fort of the River St. Jofeph. Sources of the Theakiki: Wbat paffes at the Death of the Indians; of their Funerals and Tombs. Of their Mourning and Widorvbood. Of the Feftival of the Dead

L E T TER XXVII.

Voyage to Pimitiouy. Of the River of the Illinois; Reception of Prifoners of War amongft that People. Manner of burning them. Some particulars of their Manner of living

197

L E T T ER XXVIII.

Voyage from Pimiteouy to Cafkafquias. Courre of the River of the Illinois. Of the Copper Nines. Of the Miffouri. Of the Mines of the River Marameg. Defcription of Fort Chartres, and of the Mifion of Kafkafquias. Of the Fruittrees of Louifiana. Defcription of the Miffiflippi above the Ilinois. Different tribes of that Na tion. Some Traditions of the Indians. Their Notions about the Stars, Eclipjes and Tbunder. Tbeir Manner of calculating $\mathcal{T}$ ime

L E T TER XXIX.

Of the Colony of the Illinois. Voyage to Akanfas. Defcription of the Country

L E T TER XXX.

Voyage from the Akanfas to the Natchez. Defrription of the Country. Of the River of the Yafous. Of the Cuftoms, Manners, and Religion of the Natchez

LETTER

L.ETTER XXXI.

Voyage from the Natchez to New Orleans. Der fcription of the Country and of Several Indian Villages, weith that of the Capital of Louifiana

275

LE T TER XXXII.

Voyage from New Orleans to the Mouth of the Miffifippi. Defeription of that River to the Sea. Reflections on the Grants

289

LETTER XXXHI.

Defcription of Biloxi. Of the Plant Cafina or Apa-Cacbina. Of Myrtle-wax, of the Mobile, of the Tcbaitas, of the Bay of St. Bernard, Voyage from Biloxi to New Orleans, by the Way of Lake Pontchartrain

LE T TER XXXIV.

Voyoge to the Gulph of Bahama. Shipwreck of the Adour. Return to Louifiana, alonig the Coaft of Florida. Defcription of that Coaft

315

LET TER XXXV.

Voyage from Biloxi to Cape François in St. Domingo

L E T T ER XXXVI.

Defcription of Cape François in St. Domingo. Return to France, and the Author's toucbing in England.

J O U R N A L OFA

V O Y A G E

Made by Order of the French King through

NORTH AMERICA.

L E T TER XVII.

Defcription of Lake Erie. Voyage as far as Detroit or the Narrows. Project for a Settlement in this Place. Cause of its Failure. Council called by the Commandant of Fort Pontchartrain, and the Subjeet of it. Of the Games of the Indians.

Fort Pontchartrain in the Narrows, Fune 8, 1721. Madam,

$T$Set out on the 27 th of laft month from the entrance of lake Erie after fealing my laft letter, and though it was then late I made three leagues farther that day with the advantage of a favourable wind and the fineft weather in the world. The courfe is by coafting along the north fhore amounting to a hundred leagues. The way turning off towards the fouth from Niagara is Vol. II. B much much more agreeable but longer by one half. Lake Erie is a hundred leagues in length from eaft to weft. Its breadth from north to fouth is thirty leagues, or thereabouts. The name it bears is that of an Indian nation of the Huron language, which was furmerly feated on its banks, and who have been entirely deftroyed by the Iroquoife. Erie in that language fignifies Cat, and in fome accounts this nation is called the Cat nation. This name comes probably, from the large quanity of thefe animals formerly found in this country. They are no larger than ours and their fkins are reckoned very valuable. Some modern maps have given lake Erie the name of Conti, but with no better fuccefs thàn the names of Condé, Tracy, and Orleans which have been given to the lakes Huron, Superior and Michigan.

$$
(2)
$$

- On the 28 h I advanced nineteen leagues, and found myfelf oppofite to a river called, La grande Riviere, or the Great River, which runs from the eaftward in 42 deg .15 min . The largeft trees however were not as yet covered with leaves. Excepting this circumftance, the country appeared to me extremely beautiful. We made little way the 29 th, and none at all the 30th. We embarked again on the morrow before funrife, and advanced a good way. The ift. of June being the day of Pentecoft, after having failed up a beautiful river for the fpace of an hour, which has its rife as they fay at a great difance, and runs betwixt two fine meadows; we paffed over a carrying place of about fixty paces in breadth, in order to avoid turning round a point which is called the long Point; it is a very fandy fpot of ground, and naturally bears a great quantity of vines. The following days 1 faw nothing remarkable, buk coafted along a charming country, hid at times by very difagreeable profpects, which however are of no great extent. Wherever I went athore I was quite enchanted by the beauty and variety of a landfcape, which was terminated by the nobleft forefts in the whole world. Add to this, that every part of it fwarms with water fowl; I cannot fay whether the woods afford game in equal profufion; but 1 well know that on the fouth fide there is a prodigious quantity of Buffaloes.

Were we always to fail as I then did, with a ferene fky in a moft charming climate, and on water as clear as that of the pureft fountain; were we fure of finding every where fecure and agreeable places to pafs the night in, where we might enjoy the pleafure of hunting at a fmall expence, breathe at our eafe the pureft air, and enjoy the profpect of the fineft countries in the univerfe, we might poffibly be tempted to travel to the end of our days. I recalled to memory thofe ancient Patriarchs who had no fixed place of abode, who lived in tents, who were in a manner the mafters of all the countries they paffed through, and who enjoyed in peace and tranquillity all their productions, without the plague inevitable in the poffeffion of a real and fixed eftate. How many oaks reprefented to me that of Mamre? how many fountains put me in mind of that of Jacob? each day a new fituation chofen at pleafure; a neat and commodious houfe built and furnifhed with all neceffaries in lefs than a quarter of an - hour, and floored with a pavement of flowers, continually fpringing up on a carpet of the moft beautiful green; on all fides fimple and natural beauties unadulterated and inimitable by any art. B 2

If thefe pleafures fometimes fuffer a fittle interruption, whether by hard weather or fome other unforefeen accident, it is only to render them more fenfibly felt at a fecond enjoyment.

Were I inclined to moralize I might add, that thefe alternatives of pleafure and difappointment, which I have already undergone fince my fetting out, are very proper to make us fenfible that there is no kind of life more capable of placing this maxim conflantly before our eyes, that we are no more than pilgrims on the earth, and that we have no right to ufe but as paffengers, the good things of this world; that the real wants of man are very few in number, that little is fufficient to purchafe contentment, and that we ought to take in good part thofe evils and croffes which furprize us, fince with the fame rapidity they make way for a mixture of better fortune. Laftly, how many things contribute in this way of life to make us fenfible of our dependance on the divine providence, which in order to produce this mixture of good and evil, makes not ufe of the paffions of men but of the viciffitudes of feafons, which may entirely be forefeen, and the caprice of the elements which we ought to look for: and confequently what a multitude of opportunities of meriting by our confidence in, and refignation to the divine will? It is generally faid that long voyages are feldom attended with a large crop of divine grace; nothing however is more proper to produce it than this fort of life.

On the fourth we ftopt a good part of the day on a point which runs north and fouth three leagues, and which is called Pointe Pélé, or Bald Point. It is however well enough wooded on the weft fide, fide, but that of the eaft is a fandy track producing nothing but red cedars, of an indifferent growth and in fmall quantities. The white cedar is of more general ufe than the red, the wood of which is eafly broken, and is only fit for making fmall pieces of furniture. It is a notion in this country that women with child fhould not ufe it in bufks. The leaves of this tree yield no odour but the wood does. Quite the reverfe happens in the white cedar. There are a great number of bears in this country, and more than four hundred of thefe animals were killed laft winter on Pointe Pélée alone.

On the fifth towards four o'clock in the afternoon we perceived the land on the fouth fhore, and two little inlands which lie very near it. Thefe are called Rattlefnake inlands, and we are told they are fo infefted with thefe reptiles that the air is infected with them. We entered the Narrows an hour before funfet, and paffed the night above a very beautiful inland, called L'ifle de Bois Blanc, or White-wood ifland. From Long-point to the Narrows the courfe is always weft; from the entry of the Narrows to the inland of St. Clair, which is five or fix leagues, and thence to Lake Huron it bends fowewhat towards the eaft; inclining to the fouth; thus the whole of the Narrows, which are thirty-two leagues long, lies between 42 degrees 12 or 15 minutes, and 43 degrees and a half north latitude. Above the inland of St. Clair, the Narrows widen and form a lake, which has either received its name from the illand, or given it its own. It is about fix leagues long and as many broad in fome places.

It is pretended that this is the fineft part of all Canada, and really if we may judge by appearances, nature feems to have refufed it nothing that can contribute to make a country delightful; hills, meadows, fields, lofty forefts, rivulets, fountains, rivers, and all of them fo excellent in their kind, and fo happily blended, as to equal the moft romantic wifhes; the lands however are not all equally proper for every fort of grain, but moft are of a wonderful fertility, and I have known fome produce good wheat for eighteen years running without any manure, and befides all of them are proper for fome particular ufe. The iflands feem placed on purpofe for the pleafure of the profpect; the river and lake abound in fifh, the air is pure, and the climate temperate and extremely wholfome.

Before you arrive at the fort, which ftands on the left, a league below the inland of St. Claire, you find on the fame fide two pretty populous villages very near each other ; the firft is inhabited by the Tionnontatez a tribe of the Hurons, and the fame who after having wandered to and fro for a long time, firft fettled at the balls of St. Mary, and at Michillimakinac ; the fecond is inhabited by the Poutewatamie Indians. On the right, fomewhat higher is a third village of the Outawais, infeparable companions of the Hurons from the time that both of them were driven from their country by the Iroquois; there are no chriftians at all among thefe laft, and few if any amongft the Poutewatemies; the Hurons are all chriftians, but have no miffionaries; it is faid they will admit of none, but this is only true of a few of their principal men who have not much religion; and who who do not fuffer the others to be heard, who have been a long time defirous of having miffionaries fent them.
(7)

It is a long time fince the importance of the place, ftill more than the beauty of the country about the Narrows has given ground to wifh, that fome confiderable fettlement were made in this place; this has been tolerably well begun fome fifteen years fince, but certain caufes of which I am not informed, have reduced it almoft to nothing; thofe who are againf it alledge firft, that it would bring the trade for the northern furs too near the Englifh, who as they are able to afford their commodities to the Indians cheaper than are, would draw all that trade into the province of New York. Secondly, that the lands near the Narrows are not fertile, and that the whole furface to the depth of nine or ten inches confifts of fand, below which is hard clay impenetrable to the water; from whence it happens that the plains and interior parts of the woods are always drowned; that every where you fee nothing but diminutive ill-grown oaks, and hard walnut-trees, and that the trees having their roots always under water their fruits ripen very late. Thefe reafons have not been unanfwered; it is true that in the neighbourhood of fort Pontchartrain the lands have a mixture of fand, and that in the neighbouring forefts there are bottoms almoft conftantly under water; however thefe very lands have produced wheat eighteen years fucceffively without the leaft manure, and you have no great way to go to find the fineft foil in the world. With refpect to woods, without geing a great way from the fort, I have feen as I have been walking fuch as may vie with our nobleft forefts.

( 8 )

As for what has been faid that by making a fettlement at the Narrows, we Thould bring the furtrade too much within reach of the Englifh; there is not a man in Canada who does not agree, that we can never fucceed in hindering the Indians from caricing them their commodities, let them be fettled where they will, and with all the precautions we can poffibly take; except by caufing them to find the fame advantage in trading with us, as in the province of New York. I have many more things to acquaint your grace of, but thefe difcuffions would carry me too far; we fhall talk over the matter fome day at our leifure.
. $\sigma_{n}$ the 7 th of June, which was the day after my arrival at the fort, Mons. de Tonti who commands here, affembled the chiefs of the three villages I have juft mentioned, in order to communicate to them the orders he had received from the Marquis de Vaudreuil ; they heard him calmly and without interruption; when he had done fpeaking the orator of the Hurons told him in few words, that they were going to confult about what he had propofed to them, and would give him their anfwer in a fhort time; it is the cuftom of the Indians never to give an immediate anfwer on an affair of any confequence. Two days after they affembled in great numbers at the commandant's, who was defirous that I fhould be prefent at this council, together with the officers of the garrifon. Safteratifi, whom we French call king of the Hurons, and who is in fact hereditary chief of the Tionnontatez, who are the true Hurons was alfo prefent on this occafion; but as he is ftill a minor he came only for form fake; his uncle who governs in his name, and who is called regent, fpoke in quality of orator of the nation; nation; now the honour of fpeaking in the name of the whole is generally given to fome Huron when any of them happens to be of the council. The firft view of thefe affemblies gives you no great idea of the body; imagine to yourfelf madam, half a fcore favages almoft ftark naked with their hair difpofed in as many different manners as their are different perfons in the affembly, and all of them equally ridiculous; fome with laced hats, all with pipes in their mouths and with the moft unthinking faces. It is befides a rare thing to hear any one utter fo much as a fingle word in a quarter of an hour, or to hear any anfwer made even in a monofyllable; not the leaft mark of diftinction, nor any relpect paid to any perfon whatfoever. We fhould however be apt to change our opinion of them upon hearing the refult of their deliberations.

The bufinefs in debate on this occafion, related to two points which the governor general had very much at heart; the firlt was to perfuade the three villages fettled at the Narrows, to agree that no more brandy fhould be fold them, which had been exprefly prohibited by the council of the marine. The fecond was to engage al the nations to unite with the French, to deftroy the Outagamies, commonly called Foxes, who had been favoured with an indemnity fome years before, and who had begun their robberies anew. Monfieur de Tonti firft caufed to be repeated to them by his interpreters in a few words, what he explained more at large in the firft affembly, when the Hu ron orator made anfwer in the name of the three villages; he made no exordium but came at once to the point, he fpoke a great while and with much gravity, paufing at each article to give time to the interpreters to explain in French what he had been faying in his own language.

His mien, the tone of his voice, and the manner of his delivery, though without any geftures or inflections of the body, appeared to me extremely noble and calculated to perfuade, and what he faid muft have been very eloquent, fince after being ftript of all its ornaments in the mouth of the interpreter, who was only a man of common parts, we were all perfectly charmed with it ; and I do affure you, madam, that had he continued to fpeak for two whole hours I could have heard him with the greateft pleafure. A nother proof that the beauty of his difcourfe came not from the interpreter is, that this man never could have dared to take upon him to tell us from himfelf all he faid to us; I was even fomewhat furprized at his boldnefs in repeating fo faithfully as he did certain points which could not fail to be difagreeable to the commandant. When the $\mathrm{Hu}-$ ron orator had ended, Onanguicé chief and orator of the Poutewatemies fpoke in a few words, and after a very ingenious manner, to all that the other had more largely expatiated upon, concluding to the fame purpofe, as he had done; the Outawais fpoke not at all, but feemed to approve of what had been faid by the others.

The refult was that the French might ufe their pleafure with refpect to the felling of brandy to the Indians; but they had done well had they never fupplied them with any; and it is impofible to imagine any thing ftronger than what the Hur n orator faid whilt he was laying open the diforders occafioned by this beverage, and the mifchiefs it had done to all the Indian nations in ge-have faid more; he added however that they were now fo much accuitomed to it that they could no longer be without it; by which it was eafy to guefs that fhould the French refue them, they would certainly have recourfe to the Englifh: that with refpect to the war with the Outegamies nothing could be determined, except in a general council of all the nations who acknowledge Ononthio, (fo the Indians call the French king) for their tather; that no doubt they would all agree in thinking the war neceflary, but that they would with great difficulty be brought to place any confidence in the French, who after having once before united them to affift in exterminating the common enemy, had granted them peace without ever confulting with their allies, and without its being poffible to find out any reafon for fuch a proceeding.

The day after I vifited the two Indian towns near the fort; I began with that of the Hurons where I found all the matrons, and amongft them the grand-mother of Safteratfi in much affliction for being fo long deprived of every firitual fuccour ; many circumftances which I learned at the fame time confirmed me in the opinion I had before fometime adopted, that certain private interefts were the fole obitacles to the defires of thefe good chriftians; it is to be hoped that the laft orders of the council of the marine will remove all thofe obftacles; Monfieur de Tonti affured me he was going to fet about it in an effectual manner.

Thofe who were my guides in this village affured me, that were it not for the Hurons the other Indians of the Narrows mult die of hunger;
this is certainly not the fault of the land where they are fettled; were they to cultivate it ever fo little they would find at leaft fufficient for their fubfiftance ; fifhing alone would fupply them with a good part, and this exercife is far from being very laborious, but after having once tafted brandy they think only of amaffing of furs to purchafe wherewithal to intoxicate themfelves. The Hu rons who are wifer, more laborious and more accuftomed to hufbandry, being alfo endued with a greater fhare of forefight entertain more folid thoughts, and by means of their induftry are in a condition not only to fubfift without being beholden to any one, but alfo to furnifh a fupply to their neighbours; this however is not done entirely from fentiments of humanity, for we muft by no means reckon amongtt the number of their good qualities that of difintereftednefs.

I was ftill better received amongft the infidel Poutewatamies than amongf the chriftian Hurons; thefé Indians are the fineft men in all Canada, and are befides of the fweeteft natural temper, and have been always our very good friends. Onanguicé their chief treated me with a politenefs which gave me full as high an opinion of his good fenfe as the difcourfe he had made in the council; he is a perfon of undoubted worth, and entirely in our intereft.

As I was returning through a quarter of the Huron village, I perceived a number of thefe Indians, who feemed much heated at play; I approached them and found that the game they were paing at was what they call the game of the platter; this is the game to which the Indians are addicted above all others, they fometimes lofe their reft, and in fome degree their very fenfes fenfes at it ; they ftake all they are worth, and feveral of them are known to continue at it till they have ftript themfelves ftark naked and loft all their moveables in their cabbins; fome have even been known to ftake their liberty for a certain time; this circumftance proves beyond all doubt how paffionately fond they are of it, there being no people in the univerfe more jealous of their liberty than our Indians.

13 )

The game of the platter or bones, is played between two perfons only; each perfon has fix or eight little bones, which I at firft took for apricot ftones, thefe being of the fame fize and fhape; but upon viewing them nearer I found they had fix unequal faces, the two largeft of which are painted, the one black and the other of a ftraw colour; they fling them up into the air, ftriking at the fame time againft the ground or table with a round hollow difh, in which they are contained, and which muft firft be made to fpin round ; when they have no difh they content themfelves with throwing the bones up into the air with the hand; if all of them after falling to the ground prefent the fame colour, the player wins five points, the party is forty, and the points won are difcounted in proportion to the gains on his fide; five bones of a colour give only one point for the firt time, but the fecond the winner fweeps the board; any lower number goes for nothing.

He who wins the party ftill continues to play; the lofer yields his place to another who is named by the markers on the fame fide; for, they take fides at the beginning of the game, fo that a whole village is fometimes concerned in the party, and even fometimes one village plays againft another ; each fide chufe their own marker who retires when he pleafes, which happens only when things do not go fo well on his fide. At each throw that is played, efpecially if it be a decifive one, they make a prodigious fhouting; the players feem poffeffed, and the fpectators are fcarce more mafters of themfelves; both make a thoufand contorfions, addrefs themfelves to the bones, load the genii of the adverfe party with imprecations, and the whole village rings with their howling; if all this is ineffectual to retrieve their ill-luck the lofers are at liberty to put off the party till tomorrow, at the expence of a very flender repaft to the affiftants.

They then prepare to return to the combat, each invoking his tutelary genius and throwing in honour of him fome tobacco into the fire; they implore of him above all things happy dreams: the moment day appears they fall to play, when if the lofers take it into their head that the furniture of their cabbin is the caufe of their ill-luck, they begin with changing it intirely; great parties generally laft five or fix days, and oftentimes the night occafions no interruption; however as all the fpectators, at leaft fuch as are concerned in the game, are in fuch an agitation as to be tranfported out of themfelves to fuch a degree that they quarrel and fight, which never happens to the Hurons except on thefe occafions, or when they are drunk; we may eafily guefs whether when the party is ended, both do not fland fufficiently in need of reft.

It happens fometimes that thefe parties at play are prefcribed by fome of their phyficians, or at the requeft of fome fick perfon; a dream is often fufficient caufe for either; this dream is always underftood for a command of fume genius, and then they prepare for the party with prodigious care; they affemble feveral different nights to make an effay, and to fee who has the happieft hand at a throw ; they confult their genius, they faft, and married perfons obferve the ftricteft continence and all to obtain a favourable dream ; every morning they relate thofe they have had, and make a collection of all fuch things of which they happen to have dreamed, and which they imagine able to bring good luck to their fide, which they put into little bags and carry about with them. If any one has the reputation of being fortunate, that is according to the notions of thefe people, of having a more fortunate genius, or one that is more inclined to do good, they never fail to make him approach him who holds the platter; they go fometimes to feek this perfon at a great diftance, and if through old age or fome infirmity he is unable to walk they carry him on their floulders.

( 15 )

They have often preffed the miffionaries to be prefent at thefe games, from a perfuafion that their tutelar genii are more powerful than all others. It happened one day in a Huron village that a fick woman having caufed one of their prietts to be called, who are alfo their phyficians, this quack prefcribed for her the game of the platter, and appointed a village different from his own to play; fhe immediately fent to afk permifion of the chief of this village; this was granted, the party was played and the game being ended, the patient returned the players a great many thanks for the cure, which as fhe faid they had procured her : fo far however from being better fhe was on the contrary much worfe, but they are obliged to feem fatisfied even when they have leaft caufe to be fo.

The refentment of this woman and of her relations fell upon the miffionaries for refufing to be prefent at the party, notwithftanding all the folicitations that had been made to them for this purpofe, and from their chagrin at the little complaifance they fhewed on this occafion, they reproached them with faying, that ever fince their arrival in the country, the genii of the Indians had had no longer any power; the miffionaries took advantage of this confeffion to fhew thefe infidels the weaknefs of their divinities, and the fuperiority of the God of the chriftians; but as it feldom happens on fuch occafions that people are difpofed to hear reafon, thefe barbarians anfwered coolly, "You have your gods and we have ours, " only it is our misfortune that ours are the leaft " powerful of the two."

The Narrows is one of the countries where a botanift might make the greateft number of difcoveries. I have already obferved that all Canada produces a vaft number of fimple of fovereign virtue; it is not doubted that the fnows contribute much to this, but there is in it befides fuch a variety of foil, which joined to the mildnefs of the climate, and the eafe with which the fun warms this country which is more open than the reft, gives ground to believe that the plants have more virtue in this than in any other part of it.

One of my guides lately made a trial of the virtue of an herb which is to be met with every where, and the knowledge of which is exceeding neceffary to travellers, not for any good qualities it poffeffes, for I have never as yet heard any attributed to it, but becaufe too much care cannot be taken to avoid it; this is called, L'berbe a la puce, or Flea-wort, but this name is not expreflive enough to fhew the effects it produces. Thefe are more or lefs fenfible according to the conftitution of thofe it happens to touch; there are even fome perfons on whom it does not operate at all; but fome perfons merely by looking upon it are feized with a violent fever, which lafts more than fifteen days, and is accompanied with a very troublefome fcab, attended with a prodigious itching all over the body; it operates on others only when they touch it, and then the patient appears as if entirely covered over with a leprofy: and fome have been known to have had their hands quite fpoiled with it. No remedy is as yet known for it but patience ; after fome time it go sentirely off.

There grows alfo at the Narrows citron trees in the open fields, the fruit of which in fhape and colour refemble thofe of Portugal, but they are fmaller and of a difagreeable flavour; they are excellent candied. The root of this tree is a mortal and moft fubtle poifon, and at the fame time a fovereign antidote againft the bite of ferpents. It muft be bruifed and applied inftantly on the wound : this remedy is immediate and infallible. On both fides of the Narrows the country is faid to preferve all its beauty for ten leagues up the country; after which you meet with a fmaller number of fruit trees and fewer meadows. But Vol. II. C after after travelling five or fix leagues farther inclining to lake Erie, towards the fouth-weft, you difcover immenfe meadows extending above a hundred leagues every way, and which feed an immenfe quantity of thofe buffaloes, whereof I have more than once made mention.

I am, & c .

(19)

L E T T E R XVIII.

Some Particulars relating to the Cbaracter, Cuftoms, and Government of the Indians. The Narrows, Fune 14, 1721.

Madam,

AF T ER I had clofed my laft letter and given it to a perfon who was going down to Quebec, I made myfelf ready to purfue my voyage, and accordingly embarkéd next day; but I have not been able to get over, and through the neglect of thofe who conducted me, am returned back to fort Pontchartrain, where I very much fear being obliged to remain feveral days longer. Thefe are difappointments we muft lay our account with, in travelling with Canadians who are never in a hurry, and who are very carelefs in taking their meafures. But, as we are to make the moft of every thing, I will take the opportunity of this delay, to divert you with beginning fome account of the government of the Indians, and their manner of proceeding in the difpatch of public bufinefs : by this means, you will more eafily underftand many things, which I fhall have occafion to mention to you in the fequel.

C 2

I fhall, however, be as brief as poffible on this head: firt, becaufe every thing relating to it is not equally interefting; in the fecond place, becaufe I would not willingly write you any thing, but what is fupported on the credit of good witneffes; and it is no eafy matter to find people whofe fincerity is beyond all fufpicion, at leaft of exaggerating things; or who cannot be accufed of having too flightly believed what has been told them; or laftly, who have judgment fufficient to take things in their true point of view; which requires one to have made a long ftay in the country, and to have converfed much with the inhabitants. I fhall therefore give you nothing of my own on this article; for which caure, I flall not obferve any exact order, in what I fhall fay; but you will eafily collect together, and make a juft whole of the paffages I fhall give you in my letters, in proportion as I thall be informed of them,

It muft be agreed, Madam, that the nearer we view our Indians, the more good qualities we difcover in them: moft of the principles witich ferve to regulate their conduct, the general maxims by which they govern themfelves, and the effential part of their character, difcover nothing of the barbarian. Befides thofe ideas, though wholly indiftinct, which they ftill preferve of a Supreme Being, thefe yeftiges, now almoft nearly effaced, of a religious worfhip, which they feem formerly to have paid this fovereign ruler; and the weak traces which we remark in their moft indifferent actions of the ancient belief, and of the primitive religion, might reftore them more eafily than is imagined to the erue path, render their converfion to chriftianity eafier than is commonly found, and which is attended with greater obftacles, even in the moft civilized nations.
nations. In effect, does not experience teach us, that politenefs, knowledge, and the maxims of ftate, produce in thefe laft an attachment to, and prejudice in favour of their falfe tenets; that all the zeal and abilities of the evangelical labourers, can with difficulty furmount them; and that grace muit of neceffity act more powerfully on the minds of enlightened infidels, who are almoft always blinded by their prefumption, than on thofe who oppofe to it their narrow capacities only.

Moft part of the people on this continent have a fort of Ariftocratical government, the form of which is extremely various: for though each town has a chief of its own, independant of all the reft of the fame nation, and whofe fubjects are dependant on him in very few particulars; there is, notwithftanding, no affair of any confequence refolved upon, but by the advice of the Elders. Towards Acadia the Sagamos were more abfolute, and it does not appear that they were under any obligation, as the chiefs are almoft every where elfe, of making largefles to their fubjects ; on the contrary, they exacted a kind of tribute from them; and difintereftednefs was by no means efteemed a royal virtue amongt them. But it feems the difperfion of thefe Acadian Indians, and perhaps too their commerce with the French, have introduced confiderable changes into their ancient form of government; whereof Lefcarbot and Champlain are the only authors, who have given us any particular account.

Several nations have each of them three principal families or tribes, which feem to be as old as their firt origin. They have all, however, one common ftock; and there is one at leaft that is looked upon as the firft, and which has a fort of pre-eminence over the other two, in which thofe of this tribe are treated as brothers, whereas amongft themfelves they treat one another as coufins. Thefe tribes are mixed, without being confounded, each of them having a diftinct chief in every village: and in fuch affairs as concern the whole nation, thefe chiefs affemble to deliberate upon it. Every tribe bears the name of fome animal, the whole nation having alfo its own, whofe name it takes, and whofe figure is their bearing or enfigns armorial; and when they fign any treaties, it is always by drawing thofe figures upon them, except when for particular reafons they caufe fubftitute fome other.

Thus, the Huron nation is the nation of the porcupine: its firft tribe bears the name of the bear, or of the roe-buck, authors varying on this head; the other two have the wolf and tortoife for their animals; laftly, every town has its own particular animal, and it is probably this variety which has mifled the authors of fome accounts. It is alfo proper to obferve, that befides thefe diftinctions of nations, tribes, and towns, by animals, there are alfo others founded on fome cuftom, or particular event : as for inftance, the Tionnontatez Hurons, who are of the firft tribe, commonly call themfelves the tobacco nation; and we have a treaty in which thefe Indians, who were then fettled at Michillimakinac, have put for their mark the figure of a beaver.

The Iroquois nation has the fame animals with the Huron, of which it appears to be a colony, with this difference, that the family of the tortoife is fplit into two branches, called the great and little tortoife.

- (23)
toife. The chief of each family bears its name, and in all public deeds he is known by no other. The fame thing happens with regard to the chief of a nation, as well as of every village : but befides this name, which is only a fort of reprefentative appellation, they have another, which diftinguifhes them more particularly, and which is properly a mark of dignity: thus, one is called the moft noble, another the moft ancient, and fo forth. Laftly, they have a third which is perfonal ; but I fhould be apt to believe, that this cuftom prevails only amongft thofe nations where the office of chief is hereditary.

Thefe titles are always impofed with great ceremony; the new chief, or, in cafe he is too young, he who reprefents him, is to make a feaft, beftow prefents, pronounce the elogium of their predeceffor, and fing his fong. There are, however, fome perfonal names in fo much veneration, that no one dares to appropriate them to himfelf; or which are at leaft a long time before they are renewed; when this is done, it is called raifing the perfon to life who formerly bore it.

In the northern parts, and wherever the Algonquin tongue prevails, the dignity of chief is elective; and the whole ceremony of election and inftallation confifts in fome feafts, accompanied with dances and fongs: the chief elect likewife never fails to make the panegyrick of his predeceffor, and to invoke his genius. Amongft the Hurons, where this dignity is hereditary, the fucceffion is continued through the women, fo that at the death of a chief, it is not his own, but his fifter's fon who fucceeds him ; or, in default of which, his neareft relation in the female line. When the whole branch happens to be extinct, the nobleft matron of the tribe or in the nation chufes the perfon The approves of moft, and declares him chief. The perfon who is to govern muft be come tolyears of maturity ; and when the hereditary chief is not as yet arrived at this period, they appoint a regent, who has all the authority, but which he holds in name of the minor. Thefe chiefs generally have no great marks of outward refpect paid them, and if they are never difobeyed, it is becaufe they know how to fet bounds to their authority. It is true that they requeft or propofe, rather than command; and never exceed the boundaries of that fmall fhare of authority with which they are vefted. Thus it is properly reafon which governs, and the government has fo much the more influence, as obedience is founded in liberty; and that they are free from any apprehenfion of its degenerating into tyranny.

$$
\mathrm{C}_{4} \quad \text { branch }
$$

Nay more, each family has a right to chufe a counfellor of its own, and an affiffant to the chief, who is to watch for their intereft ; and without whofe confent the chief can undertake nothing. Thefe counfellors are, above all things, to have an eye to the public treafury; and it is properly they who determine the ufes it is to be put to. They are invefted with this character in a general council, but they do not acquaint their allies with it, as they do at the elections and inftallations of their chief. Amongft the Huron nations, the women name the counfellors, and often chufe perfons of their own fex.

This body of counfellors or affiftants is the higheit of all ; the next is that of the elders, confifting of all thofe who have come to the years of maturity. I have not been able to find exactly what what this age is. The laft of all is that of the warriors; this comprehends all who are able to bear arms. This body has often at its head, the chief of the nation or town; but he muft firft have diftinguifhed himfelf by fome fignal action of bravery; if not, he is obliged to ferve as a fubaltern, that is, as a fingle centinel; there being no degrees in the militia of the Indians.

In fact, a large body may have feveral chiefs, this title being given to all who ever commanded; but they are not therefore the lefs fubject to him who leads the party; a kind of general, without character or real authority, who has power neither to reward nor punifh, whom his foldiers are at liberty to abandon at pleafure and with impunity, and whofe orders notwithftanding are fcarce ever difputed: fo true it is, that amongtt a people who are guided by reafon, and infpired with fentiments of honour and love for their country, independance is not deftructive of fubordination; and, that a free and voluntary obedience is that on which we can always rely with the greateft certainty. Moreover, the qualities requifite are, that he be fortunate, of undoubted courage, and perfectly difinterefted. It is no miracle, that a perfon poffeffed of fuch eminent qualities fhould be obeyed.

The women have 'the chief authority amongt all the nations of the Huron language; if we except the Iroquois canton of Onneyouth, in which it is in both fexes alternately. But if this be their lawful conftitution, their practice is feldom agreeable to it. In fact, the men never tell the women any thing they would have to be kept fecret; and rarely any affair of confequence is communicated municated to them, though all is done in their ${ }^{r}$ name, and the chiefs are no more than their lieutenants. What I have told your grace of the grandmother of the hereditary chief of the Hurons of the Narrows, who could never obtain a miffionary for her own town, is a convincing proof that the real authority of the women is very fmall: I have been however affured, that they always deliberate firft on whatever is propofed in council; and that they afterwards give the refult of their deliberation to the chiefs, who make the report of it to the general council, compofed of the elders; but in all probability this is done only for form's fake, and with the reftrictions I have already mentioned. The warriors likewife confult together, on what relates to their particular province, but can conclude nothing of importance which concerns the nation or town ; all being fubject to the examination and controul of the council of elders, who judge in the laft refource.

It muft be acknowledged, that proceedings are carried on in thefe affemblies with a wifdom and a coolnefs, and a knowledge of affairs, and I may add generally with a probity, which would have done honour to the areopagus of Athens, or to the fenate of Rome, in the molt glorious days of thofe republics: the reafon of this is, that nothing is refolved upon with precipitation; and that thofe violent paffions, which have fo much difgraced the politics even of Chriftians, have never prevailed amongft the Indians over the public good. Interefted perfons fail not, however, to fet many fprings in motion, and apply an addrefs in the execution of their defigns, we could hardly believe barbarians capable of; they alfo all of them poffefs, fefs, in the moft fovereign degree, the art of concealing their real intentions: but generally fpeaking, the glory of the nation and motive of honour, are the chief movers in all enterprizes. What can never be excufed in them is, that they often make honour confift in fatiating a revenge which knows no bounds; a fault which Chriftianity alone is able to correct, and in which all our politenefs and religion are often unfucceffful.

Each tribe has an orator in every town, which orators are the only perfons who have a liberty to fpeak in the public councils and general affemblies: they always fpeak well and to the purpofe. Befides this natural eloquence, and which none who are acquainted with them will difpute, they have a perfect knowledge of the interefts of their employers, and an addrefs in placing the beft fide of their own caufe in the moft advantageous light, which nothing can exceed. On fome occafions, the women have an orator, who fpeaks in their name, or rather acts as their interpreter.

Nations who may be faid to poffefs nothing, neither public nor private, and who have no ambition to extend their territory, fhould, in appearance, have few affairs to fettle with one another. But the mind of man, naturally reftlefs, is incapable of remaining inactive, and is very fagacious in cutting out bufinefs for itfelf. What is certain, is, that our Indians are eternally negociating, and have always fome affairs or other on the tapis: fuch as the concluding or renewing of treaties, offers of fervice, mutual civilities, making alliances, invitations to become parties in a war, and laftly, compliments of condolance on the death of fome chief or confiderable perlon. All this is performed with a dignity, an attention, and, I may add, with a capacity equal to the moft important affairs ; and theirs are fometimes of greater confequence than they feem to be : for thofe, who are deputed for this purpofe, have commonly fecret inftructions; fo that the outward motive of their deputation is no more than a veil which covers their real defigns.

The nation, which has made the firft figure in Canada, for two centuries paft, is that of the Iroquois: their fucceefs in war has given them a fuperiority over moft of the others, which none of them are, any longer, in a condition to difpute with them ; and from being pacifick, which they formerly were, they have become very troublefome and pragmatical. But nothing has contributed more to render them formidable, than the advantage of their fituation, which they prefently difcovered; and whereof they have made all poffible advantage. As they were fituated between us and the Englifh, they foon found that both would be under the neceffity of keeping well with them; a and, indeed, it has been the chief care of both colonies, fince their eftablifhment, to gain them over to their own party, or, at leaft, to perfuade them to ftand neuter : and as they were perfuaded that if either of thefe nations fhould entirely get the afcendant over the other, they mult foon be fubjected themfelves; they have found the fecret of ballancing their fuccefs; and if we reflect that their whole force united has never exceeded five or fix thoufand combatants, and that it is a great while fince they have diminifhed more than one half, we muft needs allow, they muft have ufed infinite abilities and addrefs.

With refpect to particulars and the interior government or police of towns, affairs are reduced to few articles, and are foon concluded. The authority of the chief feldom or never extends to thefe; and, generally fpeaking, perfons in any degree of credit, are entirely taken up about the public bufinefs. A fingle affair of however little importance, is long under deliberation; every thing being conducted with much coolnefs and phlegm, and nothing being decided till all who are defirous have been acquainted with it. If a prefent has been given underhand to any of the elders, to make fure of his fuffrage, you are fure to obtain it, if the prefent has been accepted of. It has fcarce ever been known, that an Indian has failed in an engagement of this fort; but it is no eafy matter to bring them to accept of it, nor does he ever receive with both hands. Young perfons enter early into the knowledge of affairs, which naturally renders them grave and ripe, at an age in which we are ftill children; this interefts them, from their tendereft infancy, in the public weal, and infpires them with an emulation which is fomented with great care, and from which there is nothing that might not be hoped for.

The greateft defect in this government is, that they have fcarce the fhadow of criminal juftice among them ; though, to fay truth, it is far from being attended with the fame bad effects it would certainly be amongft us: the great fpring of our paffions, and the chief fource of thofe diforders which are the moft pernicious to civil fociety, to wit, private intereft, having fcarce any power over men who never think of hoarding, and give themfelves very little concern about tomorrow.

We may alfo juftly reproach them with the way in which they bring up their children: they do not fo much as know what it is to correct them. Whilft they are little, they fay they have no reafon; and it never enters into the head of an Indian, to think that the judgment is improved by punifhment ; when they are come to years of difcretion, they pretend to be mafters of their own actions, and therefore accountable to none. They carry thefe maxims to fuch a height, as to fuffer themfelves to be maltreated by intoxicated perfons, without fo much as defending themfelves for fear of hurting them. Why thould we do them any evil, fay they, when you talk to them of the ridiculoufnefs of this behaviour; they know not what they do ?

In a word, thefe Indians are perfectly convinced, that man is born free, and that no power on earth has a right to infringe his liberty, and that nothing can compenfate the lofs of it: and it has been found a very difficult matter to undeceive even the Chriftians among them, and to make them underftand how, by a natural confequence of the corruption of our nature, which is the effect of fin, an unbridled liberty of doing mifchief differs very little from obliging them to commit it; becaufe of the ftrength of the byais which draws us to it; and that the law which reftrains us, caufes us to approach nearer to our original ftate of liberty, whilft it appears to take it from us. Happy for them, experience has not made them feel in many things all the power of this tendency which produces fo many crimes elfewhere. Their underftandings being narrower than ours, their defires are ftill more fo: reduced to defire what is neceffary only, for which providence has fufficiently provided, they have fcarce fo much as the notion of fuperfluities.

After all this, toleration and impunity is a very great diforder; as is alfo that want of fubordination in public as well as domeftic life, in which every one does what feems good in his own eyes; where father, mother, and children often live, like fo many perfons who have met by chance, and linked together by no fort of tye; where young perfons manage the affairs of the family, without confulting their parents about them any more than if they were mere ftrangers; where the children are brought up in abfolute independance, and where they are early accuftomed to liften neither to the voice of nature, nor to the moft indifpenfible duties of fociety.

If in thofe nations who are governed with more wifdom, and who are reftrained by the bridle of a holy religion, we notwithftanding fometimes fee fuch moniters as difhonour humanity, they at leaft excite the horror of others, and expofe themfelves to the lafh of the law ; but what is in this cafe the crime of an individual, becomes the crime of the nation, when it is fuffered to go unpunifhed, as parricide itfelf is amongtt the Indians; and were it ftill more rare than it is, this impunity, however, is fuch a ftain as nothing can efface, and which favours entirely of the barbarian. There are, however, in all this fome exceptions, of which I fhall prefently fpeak; but, generally fpeaking, the genius and character of our Indians is fuch as I have been defcribing it.

They are not only perfuaded, that a perfon who is not in poffeffion of his reafon is not refponfible for his actions, at leaft, that he deferves no punifhment ; but they imagine likewife that it is beneath the dignity of a man to defend himfelf againft a woman or a child : provided, however, as I fhould be apt to imagine, that there is no danger of life being loft, or any rifque of being maimed; in which cafe, their way is, if poffible, to fave themfelves by flight. But, fhould an Indian kill another in his cabin, being drunk, which they often pretend to be when they harbour any fuch defigns, they content themfelves with bewailing the dead: It was a great misfortune, fay they, but as for the murderer he knew not what he did.

If the thing was done in cold blood, they fuppofe without difficulty that the perfon who committed it, muft have had very good reafons before he proceeded to this extremity. If it is clear he had none, it belongs to thofe of his own cabin, as being the only perfons concerned, to punifh him ; thefe have power to punifh him with death, but this they rarely do, and even then without any form of juftice, fo that his death does not fo much look like a legal punifhment as the revenge of fome individual; and fometimes a chief is glad of this opportunity to get rid of a bad fubject. In a word, crimes are punifhed in fuch a manner as neither to fatsfy juftice nor eftablifh the public tranquillity and fecurity.

A murder, in which feveral cabins fhould be affected, would notwithftanding always hiave troublefome confequences, and would often be fufficient to fet a whole town, and even a whole nation in a combuftion: for which reafon, in fuch accidents the council of the elders leave nothing undone in order to accommodate matters timeoufy; and in cafe of fuccefs it is commonly the publick who makes the prefents, and takes all the neceffary fteps with the offended family. The prompt punifhment of the criminal would at once put an end to the affair, and the relations of the deceafed are at liberty to do their pleafure on him, if they can get him in their hands; but his own cabbin think it inconfiftent with their honour to facrifice him, and often the village do not think proper to compel them to it.

I have read in a letter of Father Brebeuf, who lived a long time among the Hurons, that thefe Indians were wont to punifh murderers in this manner. They extended the dead body on poles fixed to the roof of a cabbin, and the murderer was obliged to fit feveral days fucceffively directly under it , and to receive all that fell from the carcafs, not only on himfelf but alfo on his provifions, which were placed near him, except by means of fome confiderable prefent made to the cabbin of the defunct, he obtained the privilege of faving his diet from the pollution of this poifon; but the Miffionary does not tell us whether this was done by publick authority, or was only by way of reprifal, which thofe it concerned made ufe of after getting the affaffin in their power.

Be this as it will, the way molt in ufe amongtt all the Indians to indemnify the relations of a man who has been murdered, is to replace him by means of a prifoner of war: in this cafe the captive is almoft always adopted, enters into poffeffion of all the rights of the deceafed, and foon caufes the perfon whofe place he fills to be forgotten. There are, however, certain odious crimes which are punifhed with death on the fpot, at leaft among fome nations; fuch as wichcraft.

Vol. II. D e which

Whofoever is fufpected of this crime can never be fafe any where; they even caufe him undergo, when they can lay hold on him, a kind of rack, in order to oblige him to name his accomplices, after which he is condemned to the fame punifhment with the prifoners of war ; but they firft afk the confent of his family, which they dare not refufe. Thofe who are leaft criminal are knocked in the head, before they are burned : thofe who difhonour their families, are treated much in the fame manner, and it is generally their own family that does juftice upon them.

Amongft the Hurons who are very much given to thieving, and who perform it with a dexterity which would do honour to our moft expert pick -pockets, it was lawful, on difcovery of the thief, not only to take from him what he had ftolen, but alfo to carry off every thing in his cabbin, and to ftrip himfelf, his wife, and children ftark naked without their daring to make the leaft refiftance. And further in order to fhun all fuch conteftation which might arife on this head, certain points were agreed upon from which they never deviated. For example, every thing found, were it but a moment after it was loft, belonged to the finder, provided the former proprietor had not before reclaimed it ; but on difcovery of the leaft difhonefty on the part of the former, they obliged him to make reftitution, which occafioned fometimes diffentions, which were with difficulty put an end to: the following is an inflance of this fort fingular enough.

A good old woman had for all her worldly goods, but one collar of Wampum, worth about ten crowns of our money, and which the carried about with her every where in a little bag. One day as fhe was at work in the fields, fhe chanced to hang her bag on a tree; another woman who perceived it and had a great defire to filch her collar from her, thought the prefent a favourable occafion for feizing it, without being liable to be accufed of theft : fhe therefore kept her eye continually upon it; and, in about the fpace of an hour or two, the old woman having gone into the next field, fhe flies to the tree, feizes the bag, and falls a crying how lucky fhe had been to find fo valuable a prize. The old woman turns immediately about and fays the bag belonged to her, and that it was the who had hung it on the tree, that fhe had neither loft it nor forgot it, and that fhe intended to take it down, when her work fhould be over; her adverfary made anfwer, that we are not to judge the intentions, and that having quitted the field without taking down her bag, fhe was deemed in law to have forgot it.

After many conteftations between thefe two women, who never fpoke fo much as one difobliging word the whole time; the affair was brought before an arbiter who was the chief of the village: "according to the rigor," fays he, " the "bag is the property of the finder; but the cir"cumftances of the thing are fuch, that if this " woman would not be taxed with avarice, the " ought to reftore it to the claimant, and be " fatisfied with fome little prefent, which the o"ther cannot in reafon refufe her." Both parties acquiefced in this judgment; and it is proD 2 per to obferve that the fear of being acculed of avarice had full as much power on the minds of the Indians, as the fear of punifhment could have had; and that thefe people are generally governed by the principles of honour more than by any other motive whatever.

What I am now going to add, will give your Grace a new proof of this. I faid a little above, that in order to prevent the confequences of a murder, the public takes upon itfelf the charge of making the proper fubmiffions for the guilty, and indemnifying the interefted. Would you believe that this very circumftance has more power in preventing thefe diforders than the moft fevere laws ? nothing is, however, more true: for as thefe fatisfactions coft much to men whofe haughtinefs is beyond all expreffion, the criminal is the more fenfible of the mortification which he fees the publick fuffers on his account, than he could poffibly be of his own; and their zeal for the honour of their nation, is a much more powerful curb on thefe barbarians than the fear of death, or any other punifhment whatfoever.

Befides, it is certain that impunity has not always prevailed amongtt them to the degree it has done lately ; and our firft miffionaries found fome traces of the ancient feverity, with which they knew how to reftrain crimes ftill remaining. Theft in particular has always been looked upon as a ftain which difhonoured a family; and every individual had a right to walh off the fcandal of it in the blood of the criminal. Father Brebeuf perceived one day a young Huron who was difpatching a girl; he ran up to him in order to hinder him, and afked him what it was that could provoke him to this violence. "It is my fifter," anfwered the Indian, " fhe is a thief, and I am going "s to expiate by her death, the difhonour fhe has " brought upon me and all our family." My letter is jutt called for. I conclude with affuring you, that \mathrm{I} \mathrm{am}, & \mathrm{c} .

$$
$$

$\ddots$

L E T T ER XIX.

Voyage from the Narrows to Michillimakinac. Deffcription of the country. Of the marriages of the Indians.

Micbillimakinac, Fune 30, 172 I .

Madam,

1$T$ was on the 18 th of this month $I$ at length took my leave for good and all of fort Pontchartrain at the Narrows, a little before funfet. I had fcarce advanced a league in my way before a ftorm accompanied with a deluge of rain, obliged me to make to land well foaked, where we paffed the night in a very uncomfortable manner. All I was able to get forward the next day was to traverfe lake St. Clair, which is about four leagues long ; the country appeared to me very good on both fides. At half way you leave on your left a river 120 feet in breadth at its mouth; this has got the name of the river of the Hurons, thefe Indians having taken fanctuary here during the war with the Iroquois. On the right and almoft oppofite is another river, the mouth of which is twice as wide, and which is navigable for fourfcore leagues without any rapid current, a rare thing in the rivers of this country : they could not tell me its name.

The courfe from the fort at the Narrows to the end of this traverfe is eaft, north-eaft ; from thence you turn to the north by way of the eaft, and fo round till you come to the fouth for four leagues, at the end of which you find on your right a village of the Miffifaguy Indians, feated on a fertile foil at the entry of three magnificent meadows, and in the moft charming fituation that can be; from thence to lake Huron I reckon twelve leagues, the country continuing always moft delightful. This is a noble channel as ftraight as a line and bordered with lofty forents, interfperfed with fine meadows with many inands fcattered up and down in it, fome of which are confiderably large; the courfe through it is always north one quarter eaft, and in the entrance of lake Huron the courfe is due north for twelve leagues more.

Croffing lake St. Claire, I had in my canoe a young Indian who was ftrong and vigorous, and on the ftrength of whofe arms I relied a good deal, when I granted him his paffage on his afking it; he was however of very little fervice to me, to make amends he diverted me highly till a form that came on juft over our heads begun to make me uneafy. This young man fell a dreffing himfelf before he embarked, and at every three ftrokes of his oar, took up his looking glafs to fee whether the motion of his arms had difcompofed the œconomy of his drefs, or whether the fweat had not changed the difpofition of the red and other colours with which he had daubed his face.

I dont know whether he expected to arrive at the village of the Miffifaguys before night, in order to be prefent at fome feaft; but we were not able to get fo far. The ftorm increafed as we were almoft almoft clofe to an ifland fituated at the end of the lake, where we were obliged to ftop. Our young Indian feemed not much mortified at the difappointment, thefe people feldom taking any thing of that fort much to heart; perhaps he had no other intention in drefing himfelf than the vanity of being admired by us ; but if this was his defign, all his care was labour in vain, as I had feen him in his own likenefs but two days before, when I thought he looked much better than with all that ridiculous dawbing that had coft him fo much trouble; few of the women here paint their faces, but all the men, and efpecially the young fellows are mighty fond of this decking, there are fome of them who will fpend half a day in dawbing themfelves in this manner, only that they may have the pleafure of ftrolling from door to door in order to be admired, and return afterwards extremely well fatisfied with themfelves, though not a word has been fpoke to them.

We entered lake Huron the 2 ift about ten o'clock in the forenoon, where we had foon the pleafure of fifhing for fturgeon. On the morrow in fpite of the thunder which rumbled the whole day, but which was fatisfied with threatening us; I advanced near twenty-five leagues in the lake, but the 23d a thick fog, which hindered us from feeing four paces before our canoe, obliged us to fhorten fail, becaufe we were failing on a ledge of rocks, which in many places has fcarce half a foot water on it ; this rock extends a great way into the lake and is ten leagues in length; our Canadians call it the low countries. The day following we made the bay of Saguinam, five or fix leagues broad at the mouth and thirty deep; from thence to Michillimakinac the profpect is extremely difagreeable, xyeable, no more vines, ftraggling fhrubby woods, and very little game. Ten leagues beyond the bay of Saguinam you perceive two very large rivers, a league diftant from each other, and four or five leagues farther a creek called, Ans eau Tonnerre, or Tbunder Creek, three leagues over at the mouth, but of no great depth within land. Michillimakimac lies in 43 deg. and 30 min . north lat. and the courfe which is thirty leagues long from the mouth of the Narrows, coafting along the weftern fhore of lake Huron is almoft due north. I arrived the 28 th in this poft which is much fallen to decay, fince the time that Monfieur de la Motte Cadillac, carried to the Narrows the beft part of the Indians who were fettled here, and efpecially the Hurons; feveral of the Outawaies followed them thither, others difperfed themfelves amongit the beaver iflands, fo that what is left is only a forry village, where there is notwithftanding ftill carried on a confiderable fur-trade, this being a thoroughfare or rendezvous of a number of Indian nations.

The fort is ftill kept up as well as the houfe of the miffionaries, who at prefent are not diftreffed with bufinefs, having never found the Outawaies much difpofed to receive their inftructions, but the court judges their prefence neceffary in a place where we are often obliged to treat with our allies, in order to exercife their functions on the French, who repair hither in great numbers. I have been affured that fince the fettlement of the Narrows, and the difperfion of the Indians which has followed upon it, feveral northern nations that were wont to bring their Furs to this place, have fince found the way to Hudfon's bay by the river Bourbon where they trade with the Englifh; but Monfieur de la Motte could not forefee this inconveniency as we were then in poffeffion of Hudfon's bay.

The fituation of Michillimakinac is moft advantageous for traffic. This poft ftands between three great lakes; lake Michigan which is three hundred leagues in circuit, without mentioning the great bay which falls into it; Jake Huron which is three hundred and fifty leagues in circumference, and is in form of a triangle; and lake Superior, which is five hundred leagues round; all three are navigable for the largeft fort of boats, and the two firft are feparated only by a fmall ftrait, which has alfo water fufficient for the fame veffels, which may alfo without any obftacle fail all over lake Erie as far as Niagara. It is true that there is no communication between lake Huron and lake Superior, but by a channel two and twenty leagues long, and very much incommoded with rapid currents, which do not hinder canoes from going to Michillimakinac, loaded with all the commodities which lake Superior and its fhores afford.

This lake is two hundred leagues in length from eaft to weft, and in feveral places fourfcore leagues broad from north to fouth; the whole fouth coaft is fandy and pretty ftreight; it would be dangerous to be furprized by a north wind on it, and the north fhore is much more commodious for navigation, it being entirely lined with rocks, which form little harbours, where you may fhelter yourfelf with the greateft eafe; and nothing is more neceflary to thofe who fail in canoes on this lake, in which travellers have remarked a phenomenon which is fingular enough.

When

When a ftorm is about to rife you are advertifed of it, fay they, two days before; at firtt you perceive a gentle murmuring on the furface of the water which lafts the whole day, without encreafing in any fenfible manner; the day after the lake is covered with pretty large waves, but without breaking all that day, fo that you may proceed without fear, and even make good way if the wind is favourable; but on the third day when you are leaft thinking of it the lake becomes all on fire; the ocean in its greateft rage is not more toft, in which cafe you muft take care to be near thelter to fave yourfelf; this you are always fure to find on the north fhore, whereas on the fouth you are obliged to fecure yourfelf the fecond day at a confiderable diftance from the water fide.

The Indians out of gratitude for the plenty of finh with which this lake fupplies them, and from the refpect which its vaft extent infpires them with, have made a fort of divinity of it, to which they offer facrifices after their own manner. I am however of opinion, that it is not to the lake itfelf but to the genius that prefides over it, that they addrefs their vows. If we may credit thefe people this lake proceeds from a divine original, and was formed by Michabou god of the waters, in order to catch beavers. In the channel by which it difcharges itfelf into lake Huron, is a rapid current caufed by two great rocks; our miffionaries who have a very flourifhing church here have called it, Le Sault de Sainte Marie, or the Fall of St. Mary : thefe rocks according to the tradition of the Indians, are the remains of a cauleway made by the god in order to dam up the waters of the rivers, and thofe of the lake Alimipegon which fupply this great lake.

Large pieces of copper are found in fome places on its banks and round fome of the inlands, which are ftill the object of a fuperftitious worfhip amongft the Indians; they look upon them with veneration, as if they were the prefents of thofe gods who dwell under the waters; they collect their fmalleft fragments which they carefully preferve without however making any ufe of them. They fay that formerly a huge rock of this metal was to be feen elevated to a confiderable height above the furface of the water, and as it has now difappeared they pretend that the gods have carried it elfewhere; but there is great reafon to believe that in procefs of time, the waves of the lake have covered it entirely with fand and flime; and it is certain that in feveral places pretty large quantities of this metal have been difcovered, without even being obliged to dig very deep. During the courfe of my firlt voyage to this country, I was acquainted with one of our order, who had been formerly a goldfmith, and who, while he was at the miffion of the Fall of St. Mary, ufed to fearch for this metal, and made candlefticks, crofles, and cenfers of it, for this copper is often to be met with almoft intirely pure.

When Michabou, add the Indians, formed lake Superior he dwelt at Michillimakinac the place of his birth; this name properly belongs to an inland almoft round and very high, fituated at the extremity of lake Huron, though cuftom has extended it to all the country round about. This ifland may be about three or four miles in circumference, and is feen at the difiance of twelve leagues. There are two other iflands to the fouth; the moft diftant of which is five or fix leagues long; the other is very fmall and quite round; both both of them are well wooded and the foil excellent, whereas that of Michillimakinac is only a barren rock, being fcarce fo much as covered with mofs or herbage; it is notwithftanding one of the moft celebrated places in all Canada, and has been a long time according to fome ancient traditions among the Indians, the chief refidence of a nation of the fame name, and wherenf they reckoned as they fay to the number of thirty towns, which were difperfed up and down in the neighbourhood of the illand. It is pretended they were deftroyed by the Iroquois, but it is not faid at what time nor on what occafion; what is certain is, that no veftige of them now remains; I have fomewhere read that our ancient miffionaries have lately difcovered fome relicks of them. The name of Michillimakinac fignifies a great quantity of turtles, but 1 have never heard that more of them are found here at this day than elfewhere.

The Michillimakinacs live entirely by fifhing, and there is perhaps no place in the world where they are in greater plenty; the moft common forts of fifh in the three lakes, and in the rivers which difcharge themfelves into them, are the herring, the carp, the gilt-fifh, the pike, the fturgeon, the aftikamegue or white-fifh, and efpecially the trout. There are three forts of thefe laft taken; amongft which is one of a monftrous fize, and in fo great quantities, that an Indian with his fword will ftrike to the number of fifty fometimes in the fpace of three hours: but the moft famous of all is the white-fifh ; it is nearly of the fize and figure of a mackrel, and whether fref or falted nothing of a filh-kind can exceed it. The Indians tell you that it was Michabou who taught their anceftors to fifh, invented nets of which he took the idea from Arcahne's, or the fpider's web. Thofe people, as your Grace very well fees, do their deity full as little honour as he deferves, by fending him to fchool to fuch a contemptible infect.

The profpect you enjoy from this place gives no very great idea of the fertility of the foil, tho' you find excellent land at no great diftance. The fame may be faid of the beaver iflands, which you leave on your left foon after you have entered lake Michigan. The Outaways who retired thither fow maize on them, which good hufbandry they have learned from the Hurons, with whom they have long dwelt in thofe parts. The Amikouys had formerly their abode in thefe iflands; this nation is now reduced to a very fmall number of families, who have gone over to the ifland Manitoualin, to the north of lake Huron; it is however one of the nobleft in all Canada according to the Indians, who believe them defcended from the great beaver whofe name they bear, and who is next to Michabou or the great hare, their principal/ deity.

He it is, fay they likewife, who has formed lake Nipiffing; and all the rapids or currents which are found in the great river of the Outaways, are the remains of the caufeway he had buile in order to compleat his defign. They alfo add that he died in the fame place, and that he is buried under a mountain which you perceive on the northern fhore of lake Nipiffing. This mountain viewed from one certain fide, naturally enough reprefents the figure of a beaver, which circumftance has no doubt occafioned all thefe tales; but the Indians maintain that it was the great beaver who gave this form to the mountain, after he had made made choice of it for his burial-place, and they never pals by this place, without rendering him their homage, by offering him the fmoke of their tobacco.

This, Madam, is what feemed worthy of obfervation with refpect to this poft, fo celebrated in the voyages and relations of Canada. I now return to the manners and cuftoms of the Indians, and having already treated of what relates to their wars, I fhall entertain with what paffes at their marriages.

A plurality of wives is allowed of, amongtt feveral of the nations of the Algonquin language, and it is common enough to marry all the fifters; this cuftom is founded on a perfuafion, that fifters muft agree better together than ftrangers. In this cafe all the women are upon an equal footing; but amongft the true Algonquins there are two orders of wives, thofe of the fecond order being the flaves of the firft. Some nations have wives in every quarter where they have occafion to fojourn for a while in hunting time; and I have been affured, that this abufe has crept in fome time fince, amongft the nations of the Huron language, who were always before fatisfied with one wife. But there prevails in the Iroquois canton of Tfonnonthouan a much greater diforder ftill, namely a plurality of hufbands.

With refpect to degrees of parentage in marriage, the Hurons and Iroquois are very fcrupulous; the parties amongft them muft have no manner of confanguinity, and even adoption itfelf is included in this law. But the hufband when the wife happens to die firft is obliged to marry her fifter, or in default of her, fuch perfon as the family of the deceafed fhall chufe for him. The wife on her part is under the fame obligation with refpect to the brothers or relations of her hufband, provided he dies without leaving any children by her, and that She is ftill capable of having any. The reafons they alledge for this, are the fame expreffed in the 25th chapter of Deuteronomy. The hufband who fhould refufe to marry the firter or relation of his departed wife, would thereby expofe himfelf to all the outrages which the perfon he rejects fhall think fit to offer him; and which he is obliged to fuffer without murmuring: when for want of fuch perfon a widow is permitted to provide herfelf in a hufband elfewhere, they are obliged to make her prefents, as a teftimony rendered to her virtuous behaviour; and which the has a right to exact, provided the have really obferved a prudent deportment during the time of her firft marriage.

Amongft all the Indian nations, there are certain confiderable families, who can only contract alliances with each other, and chiefly amongft the Algonquins. Generally fpeaking, the perpetuity of marriages is facred in this country, and moft look upon thofe agreements to live together as long as they fhall fee fit, and to feparate when they become weary of each other, as being contrary to good order. A hufband who fhould abandon his wife without lawful caufe, muft lay his account with many infults from her relations; and a woman who fhould leave her hufband without being forced to it by his ill conduct, muft pafs her time ftill worfe.

Amongft the Miamis, a hufband has a right to cut off the nofe of the wife who elopes from him :

Vol. II. E but
but amongft the Iroquois and Hurons they may part by mutual confent; this is done without any noife, and the parties thus feparated are at liberty to enter into new engagements. Thefe Indians cannot fo much as conceive how men fhould make any difficulty about it : "My wife and I, (faid one " of them to a miffionary, who endeavoured to "b bring him to a fenfe of the indecency of this " fort of feparations,) cannot live in peace toge" ther; my neighbour is exactly in the fame fitu" ation, we have agreed to exchange wives and "are ali four perfectly well fatisfied: now what "can be more reafonable than to render one ano* ther mutually happy when it can be fo eafily " brought about, and without hurting any body:" This cuftom however as I have already remarked, is looked upon as an abufe, and is of no great antiquity, at leaft among the Iroquois.

What moft commonly deftroys the peace of famalies amongft the Canadian nations is jealoufy, to which both fexes are equally fubject. The Iroquois boaft of being free from this evil; but thofe who have been moft converfant among them affure us, that they are jealous to an extravagant height, When a woman has difcovered that her hufband likes another, her rival muft take care to keep well upon her guard, and the more fo as the unfaithful hufband can neither defend her, nor fide with her in any manner ; a man who fhould maltreat his wife on this account would be difgraced for ever.

The parents are the only match-makers in this country; the parties concerned never appear in it, but abandon themfelves blindly to the will of thofe on whom they depend; but behold the caprice of thefe barbarians, who fuffer themfelves to be dependant pendant on their parents in no cafe, except in the very thing in which they ought leaft of all to depend on them: nothing however is concluded without their confent, but this is only a mere piece of formality. The firt fteps are taken by the matrons, but it is not common for the relations of the young woman to make any advances; not but that in cafe a girl fhould happen to remain too long in the market, her family would act underhand in order to get her difpofed of, but in this a great deal of caution is ufed. In fome places the girls are in no hurry to get themfelves married, as they are at full liberty to make trial of that fate beforehand, and as the ceremony of marriage makes no change in their condition except to render it harder.

They remark a great deal of modefty in the behaviour of young people whilft the match is making, though we are told the thing was quite different in ancient times; but what is almoft incredible, and which is neverthelefs attefted by good authors is, that in feveral places the new married couple live together for a whole year in perfect continence; this is done fay they, to fhew that they married out of friendfhip and not to gratify their paffions; a young woman would even be pointed at who fhould prove with child the firft year of her marriage.

After what has been faid we ought to have lefs difficulty in believing what is related of the manner in which young people behave during the courthip in thofe places, in which they are permitted to be alone. For though cuftom allows them great familiarities, they neverthelefs pretend that in the moft extreme danger to which modefty

$$
\text { E } 2
$$

can
can be expofed, and even under the veil of night, there paffes nothing which trangreffes the rules of the moft rigid decorum, and that not a word is uttered which can offend the chafteft ear. I flatter myfelf your Grace will not be offended, that I do not enter into the fame detail on this fubject with other authors; and efpecially as all they have faid contributes nothing to the credit of their accounts.

I find many different relations with regard to the preliminaries and ceremonies of marriage amongtt thefe nations'; whether this proceeds from the different cuftoms of different nations, or from the want of care in thofe authors to inform themfelves exactly in thofe points; befides the whole of it feemed to me fo little worthy your curiofity, that I believed I ought not to take up your time with it. It is the bridegroom who is to make the prefents, in which, as indeed in every thing elfe, nothing can exceed the refpect and decorum he fhews his intended fpoufe; in fome places the young man goes and feats himfelf by the fide of the girl in her own cabbin, which if the fuffers without ftirring from her place, fhe is held as confenting and the marriage is concluded; but through all this difference and refpect he lets it plainly be feen, that he is foon to be the mafter.

In effect amongft the prefents fhe receives, there are fome which ought lefs to be underftood as teftimonies of friendfhip, than as fo many fymbols and admonitions of the flavery, to which fhe is going to be reduced; fuch are the collar or ftraps for carrying burthens, the kettle and a faggot, which are carried into her cabbin ; this is done in order to give her to underftand, that it is to be her office to carry burdens, to drefs the victuals, and to make the provifion of wood.
( 53 )

It is even cuftomary in fome places for the bride to fock the cabbin, in which fhe is to make her abode after marriage, with wood fufficient to ferve the following winter ; and it may be remarked that in all the circumftances I have been mentioning, there is no manner of difference between the nations, in which the women have all the authority, and thofe in which they have nothing to do with publick bufinefs; even thofe very women who are in fome fort miftreffes of the fate, at leaft in outward appearance, and who make the principal body of the nation after arriving at a certain age, and when their children are in a condition to caufe them to be refpected are of no account before this, and in houfhold affairs are no more than the flaves of their hufbands.

Generally fpeaking there is perhaps no nation in the world where the fex is more defpifed; to call an Indian a woman is the higheft affront that can be offered him. Notwithftanding what is odd enough, children belong only to the mother, and acknowledge no authority but hers; the father is always held as a ftranger with refpect to them, in fuch manner however that if he is not looked upon as the father, he is at leaft always refpected as the mafter of the cabbin. I do not know however if this is univerfal in every point, among all the nations we know in Canada, any more than what I have found in good memoirs, that the young wives, befides the right which their hufbands have over them, with refpect to the fervice of the cabbin, are alfo obliged to provide for all the neceffities of their own parents, which probably is to be undertood of thofe, who have no-body left to render them thefe fervices, and who by reafon of their age or infirmities are incapable of ferving themfelves.

Be this as it will, the bridegroom has alfo his own peculiar functions; befides hunting and fifhing, to which he is obliged during the whole courfe of his life, he is firtt of all to make a mattrefs for his wife, build her a cabbin, or repair that in which they are to live, and whilft he remains with his father and mother-in-law, he is obliged to carry the product of his hunting home to them. Amongtt the Iroquois the woman never leaves her cabbin, fhe being deemed the miftrefs, or leaft the heirefs of it ; in other nations fhe goes at the expiration of a year or two after her marriage, to live with her mother-in-law.

The Indian women are generally delivered without pain, and without any affiftance; there are fome however who are a long time in labour and fuffer feverely; when this happens they acquaint the young people of it, who when the fiek perfon is leaft thinking of it, come fhouting in a prodigious manner to the door of her cabbin, when the furprize occafions a fudden fright, which procures her an immediate delivery; the women always lie in their own cabbins; feveral of them are furprized and bring forth at work or on the road; for others as foon as they perceive themfelves near their time, a fmall hut is built without the village, where they remain till forty days after they are brought to bed; I think I remember however to have heard it faid, that this is never done except at their firft lying-in only,

This term being expired they put out all the fires in the cabbin, to which the is to return; they fhake all the cloaths in it, and ather return light a new fire; the fame formalities nearly are obferved with regard to the fex in general during the time of their courfes; and not only while thele laft, but while a woman is with child, or giving fuck, which they commonly do for three years running, their hurbands never come near them; nothing would be more commendable than this cuftom, provided both parties obferved the fidelity they ought. all the while, but both fides often fail in this refpect ; fuch is the corruption of the heart of man, that the wifert regulations are often productive of the greateft diforders. It is even pretended that the ufe of certain fimples, which have the virtue of keeping back in women the natural confequences of their infidelity, is familiar enough in this country.

Nothing can exceed the care which mothers take of their children whi it in the cradle; but from the moment they have weaned them, they abandort them entirely to themfelves; not out of hard heartednefs or indifference, for they never lofe but with their life the affection they have for them; but from a perfuafion that nature ought to be fuffered to act upon them, and that fhe ought not to be confined in any thing. The act which terminates their ftate of infancy is the impofition of the name, which amongft the Indians is a matter of great importance.

This ceremony is performed at a feaft, at which are prefent none but perfons of the fame fex with the child that is to be named; during the repaft the child remains on the knees of its father or E 4 mother, mother, who are inceffantly recommending it to the genii, and above all to him who is to be his guardian, for each perfon has one but not from the time of birth; they never invent new names, each family preferves a certain number of them, which they make ufe of by turns; they even fometimes change them as they grow older, and there are fome which cannot be ufed after a certain age, but I do not believe this practice to be univerfal ; and as it is the cuftom amongft fome nations on affuming a name, to put themfelves in the place of the perfon who laft bore it, it' fometimes happens that a child is called grand-father by a perfon, who might well enough be his own.

They never call a man by his own name when they fpeak to him in a familiar manner; this would be a piece of great unpolitenefs, they always name him by the relation he bears to the perfon that $f_{\text {peaks }}$ to him; but when there is neither affinity nor confanguinity between them; they call one another brother, uncle, nephew or coufin, according to the age of either, or in proportion to the efteem in which they hold the perfon to whom they addrefs themfelves.

Farther, it is not fo much with a view of perpetuating names that they renew them, as with a view to incite the perfon on whom they are beftowed, either to imitate the great actions of the perfons that bore them, or to revenge them in cafe they have been either killed or burned; or laftly to comfort their families: thus a woman who has loft her hufband or her fon, and finds her herfelf thus void of all fupport makes all the hafte in her power, to give the name of the perfon the mourns for, to fome one who may ftand her in his ftead; laftly, they likewife change their names on feveral other occafions, which it would take up too much time to mention minutely. In order to do this there wants only a dream, or the prefcription of fome phyfician, or fome other reafon equally frivolous. But I have already faid enough on this fubject, and a meffenger waits below for my commands for Quebec; I therefore conclude in affuring your Grace, that I ever am, &c.

LETTER XX.

Voyage to the Bay. Defcription of it, and of the Courfe thitber. Irruption of the Spaniards into the Country of the Miffouri Indians, and their Defeat. Dances of the Indians.

Micbillimakinac, July 21, 1721.
Madam,

NI N C E my laft letter, I have made a voyage to the Bay, which is about four-fcore leagues diftant from this poft. I took the advantage for this purpofe of going in company with Monf. Montigny, captain of a company of the troops which the king maintains in Canada, Knight of St. Lewis, and whofe name is famous in the annals of the colony; but who is at leaft equally refpected for his probity, and for his upright open deportment, and for his valour and military exploits.

We embarked the 2 d of July in the afternoon, and for thirty leagues coafted along a neck of land which feparates lake Michigan from lake Superior; in fome places it is only a few leagues over, and it is fcarce poffible to fee a more difagreeable country ; but it is terminated by a beautiful river called J_a Maniftie

Maniftie, abounding in filh and efpecially fturgeon. A little farther inclining to the fouthweft, you come to a large gulph, in the entry of which are a number of iflands, and which is called the gulph or bay of the Noquets. This is the name of an Indian nation, not very numerous, originally come from the coafts of lake Superior, and of which there remain only a few fcattered families, who have no fixed refidence.

The bay of the Noquets is feparated from the great bay only by the inlands of the Poutewatamies, which as I have already remarked, were the ancient refidence of thefe Indians; moft of them are extremely well wooded; but the only one that is now inhabited is neither the largeft nor the beft, and there remains a forry village, where, in fpite of all our endeavours, we were obliged to pafs the night, as it was impoffible to refift the preffing inftances of the inhabitants. For there is not a nation in all Canada more fincerely attached to the French, than thefe Indians have been at all times.

On the fixth, we were ftopt almoft the whole day, by contrary winds, but it growing calm in the evening, we embarked a little after fun-fet, by the favour of a moft beautiful moon-fhine, and continued our voyage for four and twenty hours together, having made only a very fmall halt, whilft we were faying mafs and at dinner. The fun was fo burning hot, and the water of the bay fo warm, that the gum of our canoe melted in feveral places. To compleat our misfortune, the place where we went athore, was fo much infefted with what are called here marigouins and bruleaus, a fpecies of very troublefome gnats, that we could not fo much as clofe clofe our eyes, though we had not flept for two days; and as the weather was fine, and the moon fhone bright, we fet out again at three o'clock in the morning.

After we had advanced five or fix leagues, we found ourfelves a breaft of a little ifland, which lies near the weftern fide of the bay, and which concealed from our view, the mouth of a river, on which ftands the village of the Malhomines Indians, called by our French Folles Avoines or Wild Oat Indians, probably from their living chiefly on this fort of grain. The whole nation confifts only of this village, and that too not very numerous. 'Tis really great pity, they being the fineft and handfomeft men in all Canada. They are even of a larger ftature than the Poutewatamies. I have been affured that they had the fame original and nearly the fame languages with the Noquets, and the Indians at the Falls. But they add that they have likewife a language peculiar to themfelves, which they never communicate. I have alfo been told feveral ftories of them, as of a ferpent which vifits their village every year and is received with much ceremony, which makes me believe them a little addicted to witchcràft.

A little below the ifland the face of the country is entirely changed, and from being very wild, as it is as far as this place, it becomes the moft delightful in the univerfe. It is even fomething more pleafing and chearful than the Narrows; but though it is every where covered with the fineft trees, yet it is more fandy, and therefore lefs fertile. The Otchagra Indians, commonly called Stinkards, dwelt formerly on the fhore of the Bay, and in a moft charming fituation; they were attacked here by the Illinois, who killed a great number of them ; the reft of them took fhelter on the river of the Outagamies, which falls into the bottom of the Bay.

Here they fettled on the banks of a kind of lake. And I do not know whether it is not from their living on fifh, with which the lake plentifully fupplies them, that they had the name of Stinkards given them, there being nothing to be feen along the whole fhore where their cabbins were built, but ftinking fifh, with which the air was perfectly infected. It appears at leaft that this is the original of the name the other Indians had given them before us; and which has been communicated to the Bay, from which they have never gone to any confiderable diftance. Some time before they quitted their ancient poft, they had a mind to revenge the check they had got from the Illinois; but this enterprize occafioned them a new difafter, from the effects of which they have never recovered themfelves. Six hundred of their beft warriors embarked, in order to go in queft of the enemy; but as they were croffing Lake Michigan, they were furprized by a furious tempeft, in which they all perifhed to a man.

We have in the Bay, a fort erected on the weftern fhore of the river of the Outagamies, and half a league from its mouth ; before you arrive at it, you leave on your right a village of the Sakies. The Otchagras have lately fettled themfelves near us, and have built their cabbins quite round the fort. The miffionary who is lodged pretty near the commandant, is in hopes, that when he fhall have learned their language, he may poffibly find more docility amongft them, than amongt the Sakies, Sakies, with whom his labours have been fufficiently unfuccersful. Both of them appear to be a very good fort of people and efpecially the former, whofe greateft defect is, that they feem to be a little addicted to thieving. Their language is very different from that of all the reft, which makes me believe, that it holds no refemblance with any of thofe of Canada. Thus, they have always had more commerce or intercourfe with the weftern nations, than with thofe with which we are acquainted.

The Sakies, though few in number, are divided into two factions, one of which is in the intereft of the Outagamies, and the other in that of the Poutewatamies. Thofe of them who are fettled in this poft are moftly of the party of the latter, and confequently are friends to us. They received the new commandant with great demonftrations of joy: the moment they were informed of his approach, they drew up under arms on the fhore, and as foon as he appeared, faluted him with a difcharge of their mufkets, which they accompanied with great fhouts of joy. Afterwards four of their chief men waded into the river, till the water came up to their middle; advanced up to his canoe, and received him on a large robe, compofed of feveral fkins of roebucks well fowed together, whereof each of them held a corner. In this manner they carried him to his apartment, where they complimented him, and faid a great many things extremely flattering.

Next day, the chiefs of the two nations paid me a vifit; and one of the Otchagras hewed me a Catalonian piftol, a pair of Spanifh fhoes, and I do not know what drug, which appeared to me to be a fort of ointment, All this they had received from one of the Aionez, and the following is the occafion, by means of which thefe things fell into the hands of this perfon.

About two years ago, fome Spaniards, who had come, as they fay, 'from New Mexico, with defign to penetrate as far as the country of the Illinois, and to drive the French out of it, whom they faw with extreme regret approach fo near the Miffouri, defcended this river and attacked two villages of the Octotatas, a people in alliance with the Aionez, from whom it is pretended they draw their original. As thefe Indians had no fire-arms, and being befides furprized, the Spaniards eafily fucceeded in their enterprize, and made a great flaughter of them. A third village of the fame nation, and at no great diftance from the two others, making no doubt that the conquerors would pay them a vifit, laid an ambufcade for them, into which the Spaniards blindly ftumbled. Others fay, that the Indians having learned that the Spaniards had almoft all of them got drunk, and were feeping in great fecurity, fell upon them in the night ; and it is certain they cut the throats of almoft every one of them.

There were two chaplains in this party, one of whom was killed in the beginning of the affair, and the other faved himfelf amongft the Miffourites who kept him prifoner, and from whom he made his efcape in a very dexterous manner. He happened to have a very fine horfe, and the Miffourites delighting in beholding him perform feats of horfemanfhip, he took the advantage of their curiofity, in order to get out of their hands. One day as he was fcampering about in their prefence, he withdrew infenfibly to a diftance, when clapping fpurs to his horfe, he inftantly difappeared. As they made no other prifoner but him, it is not yet exactly known neither from what part of New Mexico thefe Spaniards came, nor with what defign : for what I firft told you of the affair, was founded upon the reports of the Indians only, who perhaps had a mind to make their court to us by giving it to be underftood, that they had done us a very material piece of Yervice by this defeat.

All they brought me was the foils of the chaplain who had been killed, and they found likewife a prayer-book, which I have not feen: this was probably his breviary. I bought the piftol: the fhoes were good for nothing; and the Indian would by no means part with the ointment, having taken it into his head, that it was a fovereign remedy againft all forts of evils. I was curious to know how he intended to make ufe of it ; he anfwered that it was fufficient to fwallow a little of it, and let the difeafe be what it would the cure was immediate ; he did not fay however that he had as yet made trial of it, and I advifed him againft it. The Indians begin here to be very ignorant, and are very far from being fo fenfible or at leaft fo communicative, as thofe who have more commerce with us.

The day following, the Sakies came in a confiderable body to the miffionary's houfe, where I lodged, and begged me to be prefent at a council they were going to hold. I confented, and when every one had taken his place, the chief laid a collar upon the ground before me, and the orator breaking filence, befought me, in the name of the whole body, to engage the King to take them under his protection, and to purify the air, which, faid they, had been corrupted for fome time paft; which appeared by the great number of fick they had in their villages, and to defend them againft their enemies.

Vol. II. F. appeared

I anfwered, that the King was indeed very powerful, and perhaps more fo than they thought; but that his power did not extend over the elements; and that when difeafes'or any other fuch accidents laid wafte his provinces, he addreffed himfelf, in order to caufe them ceafe, to the Great Spirit who created the heaven and the earth, and who alone is the fovereign Lord of nature : that they fhould do the fame, and that they would find themfelves the better for it ; but that in order to merit being heard, they muft begin with acknowledging him, and with rendering him that worhip and homage which he has a right to expect from all reafonable creatures: and that they could not do any thing better or more agreeable to the King, than to hearken to the Father whom his Majefty had fent them, and to his inftructions; that he was a man beloved of heaven; that the manner in which he lived amongft them, could not fail to have caufed them conceive a great efteem for him; and that his charity towards the fick and all fuch as had any need of his affiftance, ought to have convinced them of that tender and fincere friendihip he bore them : laftly, that I would by no means receive it, till after they had promifed to behave themfelves with regard to this miffionary, in a quite different manner from what they had hitherto done, and henceforth to remove all caufe of complaint againft them, with refpect to their indocility.
"As to the protection of the King which you " demand, and the requeft you have made me to " engage him to undertake your defence againft " your enemies ; that great prince has already pre" vented your wifhes, and has given fufficient or" ders on that head to Ononthio *, who is of him" felf difpofed to execute them with all the zeal " and affection of a father $\dagger$. This is what you " need make no doubt of, if you pay a proper " regard to the good qualities of the commandant
" he has fent you. It is not poffible you fhould " be ignorant, and you appear to me perfectly
"s well fatisfied that amongft all the French Cap" tains there are few equal to him in valour ; and " you will have caufe to love him aill better than
" you now do." This anfwer feemed to fati fy them, and they promifed much more than I fear they will ever perform. Notwithttanding I took their collar, which the miffionary flattered himfelf would be productive of fome good effects.

On the afternoon of the following day the two nations entertained us, one after another, with the dance of the Calumet, in a great efplanade facing the commandant's apartment. There was fome little difference in the manner in which they performed this dance ; but this was very inconfiderable. It only gave me to underftand, that thefe feafts vary confiderably : thus it is impoffible to give a defrription which may agree to all of them. The Otchagras diverfified fomewhat more their entertainment, and fhewed extraordinary agility, being better made as well as more graceful performers than the Sakies.

[^0]This is properly a military feftival, in which the warriors are the fole actors, and one would naturally conclude it had been inftituted only to give them an opportunity of vaunting of their famous exploits. I am not the author of this opinion, which does not quadrate with the fentiments of thofe who maintain that the calumet derives its origin from caduceus of Mercury, and that on its firft inftitution it was looked upon as a fymbol of peace. All thofe whom I faw dancing, finging, and beating the drum and chichikoué, were young perfons equipt as when they prepare to take the field; they had their faces painted with all forts of colours, their heads were adorned with feathers, fome of which they held in their hands by way of fans: and the calumet was alfo adorned with them and was fet in the moft confpicuous place : the orcheftre and the dancers were placed quite round, the fpectators being placed up and down in fmall bodies, the women apart from the men, all of them fitting on the ground, and adorned with their fineft robes, which at a diffance made a very pretty appearance.

Between the orcheftre and the commandant_who fat at the door of his own apartment, they had erected a poft, to which at the end of each dance, a warrior came and gave a blow with his battleax; on this fignal followed profound filence, when this man proclaimed fome of his own valorous atchievements; and receiving afterwards the applaufe of the company, he returned to his place, when the games begun again. This lafted four hours two for each nation, and I confefs I was far from being charmed with it, not only on account of the monotony and unpleafantnefs of the mufick, but alfo becaufe the whole of the dances confifted only of certain contorfions of the body, which in appearance were expreffive of nothing, and had nothing diverting.

The feaft was made in honour of the new commandant; they however paid him none of thofe honours mentioned in fome relations. They were neither feen to place him on a new mattrefs; nor to make him any prefent, at leaft as far as I know, nor did they place any feathers on his head, nor did I fee them prefent him the calumet; and there were not any menentirely naked painted all over their bodies, adorned with feather and "rings of wampum, and holding a calumet in their hands. Perhaps thefe two nations have not any fuch cuftoms, or it may be, that Monf. de Montigny had exempted them from this part of the ceremony. I oblerved only from time to time all the fpectators raifing great cries by way of applauding the dancers, efpecially during the dance of the Otchagras, who in the opinion of the French bore away all the honour of the day.

I fhould probably have been more diverted by feeing the dance of the Difovery. This has more action than the former, and is much more expreffive of the thing it is intended to reprefent. This is an image drawn to the life of all that paffes in a warlike expedition; and as I have already obferved, that the Indians geneally think only of furprizing their enemies, it is no doubt for this reafon, they have given this exercife the name of the Difcovery.

Be this as it will, one man always dances fingly in. it, advancing at firft flowly towards the middle of the place, where he remains for fome time motionlefs, after which he reprefents in order the departure of the warriors; their march encampments, the difcovery of the enemy, the approach towards them, the halt as it were in order to draw breath, when all of a fudden he falls into fuch a fury as if he were going to kill all the world; when recovered from this trance, he feizes fome perfon in the affembly as if he took him prifoner of war, feems to kill another, levels at a third, and laftly falls a running at full fpeed, when he ftops and recovers himfelf; this reprefents a retreat which is at firft precipitate, but afterwards more at leifure. He then expreffes by different cries, the different agitations in which he was during his laft campaign, and concludes with relating all the fine exploits he has performed in war.

F 3

When the dance of the Calumet has for its object, as is generally the cafe, the conclufion of a peace, or of tome treaty of alliance againft a common enemy, they engrave a ferpent on the ftalk of the pipe, and near it is placed a plate, on which are reprefented two men of the two confederate nations trampling upon an enemy, who is defigned by the mark of his nation. Sometimes inftead of the calumet they make ufe of a battle-ax. But when the fubject of the treaty is only a fimple alliance, they reprefent two men holding each other by one hand and bearing in the other a calumet of peace, and having each at his fide the mark of his nation. In all thefe treaties they give mutual pledges, fuch as collars of porcelain or wampum, calumers, flaves: fometimes the hides of deer or elks well tawned, adorned with figures made of the hair of the porcupine; in which cafe, the above-mentioned circumftances are reprefented on thefe fkins, whether with the hair of the porcupine or fimple colours.

There are other dances which are more fimple, or which feem to have no other view befides giving the warriors opportunity of relating their own exploits. This is what the Indians covet above all things, and in doing of which they are never wearied. He who gives the feaft, caufes invite the whole village by beat of drum ; and it is in his cabbin they affemble, if it be capable of containing all the guefts. The warriors dance here by turns, afterwards they ftrike upon the poft, filence is proclaimed, when they fay any thing they have a mind, paufing from time to time in order to receive the congratulations of the fpectators who are not fparing of incenfe. But if they perceive that any one boafts without grounds, any one is at liberty to take earth or athes, and to fmear his head all over or to do him any other affront they have a mind. The general way is to black his face, accofting him in thefe words, "This I do to conceal your fhame; for " the firft time you fee the face of an enemy, you " will become as pale as afhes." Thus, it feems to be a received ${ }_{4}^{7}$ maxim amongft all nations, that the fureft mark of a coward is boafting. He who has thus punifhed the recreant takes his place, and if he has the misfortune to fall into the fame fault the other is fure to pay him back in kind. The. greateft chiefs have no privilege above the common in this refpect, and muft take all without murmuring. This dance is always performed in the nighttime.

In the weftern parts they have another fort of dance, which is called the Buffalo dance. The dancers form feveral circles within each other, and the mufick which is always compofed of the drum and the chichikoué, is in the middle of the place. They take care never to feparate thofe of the fame family; they do not hold one another by the hand, and each carries his arms and buckler. The circles turn round different ways, and though there is much capering in which they fpring to a great height, they are never out of time.

$$
F_{4}
$$

Some chief of a family prefents his buckler at certain intervals : all of them ftrike upon it, and at each ftroke he calls to remembrance fome of his famous exploits: he afterwards cuts a bit of tobacco from a poft to which they take care to tie a certain quantity, which he gives to one of his friends. If any one can prove he has perfornied more famous exploits than he, or that he has had any fhare in thofe of which he has been boafting, he has a right to take away the tobacco of which he has juft made a prefent, and to give it to another. This dance is followed by a feaft; but I do not well know whence it had the name it bears, if it does not come from the bucklers on which they ftrike, which are covered with buffaloes hides. There are fome dances which are prefcribed by their quacks for the cure of fick perfons; but they are generally very lafcivious. There are fome of them calculated purely for amusement, and which have no relation to any thing. Thefe are always in the form of a circle to the found of the drum and chickikoué, and the women always apart from the men. Thefe latter dance bearing their arms in their hands, and though they have no hold of one another, they never break the circle. As to what I mention d of their never lofing time, this ought to create no diffculty, the mufick of the Indians confifting confifting only of two or three notes, which are eternally repeated. On this account one is apt to grow extremely wary at thofe feafts after the firft time, as they laft a great while, and as you hear always the fame thing over again.

As the nations in the neighbourhood of the Bay, if you except the Poutewatamies, are much more ignopant than the others, they are likewife much more addicted to all forts of fuperftition. Their principal divinities are the fun and thunder, and they feem much more perfuaded than the nations which we frequent more, that every fpecies of animals has a genius that watches for the ir prefervation. A French man having one day thrown away a moufe he had juft taken, a little girl took it up to eat it ; the father of the child who perceived it fnatched it from her, and fell a careffing the dead animal ; and the French man afking him the reafon of it : " It is", anfwered he, " in order to " appeafe the genius of the mice, that they may " not torment my child after fhe has eaten it." After which he reftored the animal to the girl who eat it.

They have above all things a prodigious veneration for bears: when they happen to have killed one, they make a feaft which is accompanied with very fingular ceremonies. The head of the bear, after being painted with all forts of colours, is fet during the repaft in a confpicuous place, where it receives the homage of all the guefts, who celebrate in fongs the praifes of the animat, whilf they are tearing his body in pieces and regaling themfelves with-it. Thefe Indians have not only like all the reft a cuftom of preparing themfelves themfelves for great huntings by fafting, which the Outagamies carry as far las ten days running; but alfo whilft the hunters are in the field, they often oblige the children to faft, they obferve the dreams they have during their fafts, and from them they draw good or evil omens, with refpect to the fuccefs of the hunting. The intention of thefe fafts, is to appeafe the tutelary genii of the animals they are going to hunt; and they pretend that they make known in dreams, whether they are to oppofe or to be propitious to the hunters.

( 74 )

The nation that has occafioned moft difcourfe in thefe weftern parts, for the laft twenty years, is that of the Outagamies. The natural ferocity of thefe Indians foured by the repeated ill treatment they have received and fometimes imprudently enough ; and their alliance with the Iroquois, always difpofed to fir up new enemies againft us, have rendered them formidable. They have fince become ftill more clofely connected with the Sioux, a numerous nation, and who have infenfibly become warlike; which union renders almoft impracticable at prefent the navigation of the whole upper Miffifippi. There is even very little fecurity in failing on the river Illinois, at leaft if you are not provided againft a furprize to the great hurt of the trade between the two colonies.

I met at the Bay fome Sioux, to whom I put many queftions with refpect to the countries lying to the weft and north-weft of Canada; and though I well know we are not to take in a literal fenfe all that the Indians tell us, yet by comparing what thefe thefe told me with what I have heard feveral others fay, I have good reafon to think, that there are in this continent either Spanifh or fome other European colonies much more to the north, than what we know of New-Mexico and of California, and that after failing up the Miffouri as far as it is navigable, you come to a great river which runs weftward, and difcharges itfelf into the South-Sea. And even independent of this difcovery, which I believe eafier this way than towards the north, I cannot doubt on account of the proofs which I have received from feveral hands, and which fufficiently well agree, that by endeavouring to penetrate to the fource of the Miffauri, we fhould find fufficient to indemnify us for the expence and fatigue which fuch an enterprize muft require.

I am, &c.

LETTER

L E T T ER XXI.

Departure from Michillimakinac. Obfervations on the Currents in the Lakes.- Cbaracter of the Ins. dians of Canada. Their good and ill 2ualities.

Lake Michigan, July 31, 1721:
Madam,

ISet out the day before yefterday, and am now confined to a little namelefs ifland; a canoe which is come from the river St. Jofeph where I am going, cannot ftir any more than we, although the wind is favourable, but it being in our opinion very fqually and the lake being extremely agitated, I am thereby furnifhed with an opportunity of writing to you.

Though the wind was contrary on the 2gth when we embarked, we however advanced full eight leagues that day, which is a proof that we were helped along by the currents; I had before obferved the fame thing on my firft entering the bay, and was much furprized at it. There is no doubt that this bay, which is a Cul de Sac, difcharges itfelf into lake Michigan ; and lake Michigan, which is alfo a Cul de Sac, difcharges itfelf into into lake Huron, and the more fo as both, I mean lake Michigan and the bay, receive feveral rivers; lake Michigan efpecially, which receives a vaft number of them, fome of which are no way inferior to the Seine, but thefe great currents are only perceived in the middle of the channel, and produce on both fhores eddies or counter currents, of which thofe who fail in fhore take advantage, as all who fail in canoes of bark are obliged to do.

I advanced at firft five leagues weftward in order to make lake Michigan ; afterwards I turned towards the fouth, which is the only courfe we had to fteger for a hundred leagues, as far as the river St. Jofeph. Nothing can be finer than the country which feparates lake Michigan from lake Huron. I yefterday advanced three leagues farther, and a ftrong wind obliged us to ftop at this inland; I fhall try to divert myfelf by continuing the account of the character of the natives of this vaft country, of which I have already travelled over a confiderable part.

The Indians of Canada are generally well made and of an advantageous ftature; there are fome nations however, where it is no new thing to fee perfons of a middling fize, but it is extremely fo to meet with any who are decrepid, or who have any external deformity; they are robuft and of a ftrong and healthy conftitution; they would alfo be very long-lived did they take a little more care of themfelves; but moft part of them ruin their conflitutions by forced marches, by exceffive fafting and intemperance in eating; befides that during their infancy they often go barefoot in water, and even upon fnow and ice; the fpirituous liquors which the Europeans have fupplied them with, and for which they entertain a paffion, or rather a fury which exceeds all expreffion, and which they never drink but on purpofe to get drunk, have almoft ruined them, and have not a little contributed to the depopulation of all the Indian nations, who are at prefent reduced to lefs than the twentieth part of what they were one hundred and fifty years ago. If this continues we fhall certainly fee them entirely difappear.

Their bodies are not conftrained in the cradle like ours, and nothing is more proper to render them agile, and to give them that fupplenefs in all their members, which we fo much admire in them, than this liberty, and the exercifes which they are accuftomed from their earlieft infancy; the mothers fuckle them a great while, and we fometimes fee children of fix or feven years of age which ftill fuck their mothers; this hinders not their giving them all forts of nourifhment from the firft years: laftly, the free and open air to which they are conftantly expofed ; the fatigues they are made to underga, but by gentle degrees and in a manner proportioned to their age ; their food which is fimple and natural; all thefe contribute to form bodies capable of doing and fuffering incredible things, but which are pufhed to an extravagance which I have already faid, carries off not a few before the age of maturity. Some have been known, after having their ftomachs ftretched four fingers with eating, ftill to eat on with as voracious an appetite as if they had only juft begun; when they find themfelves overloaded they fall to fmoaking, and afterwards fall anleep, and at their waking find their digeftion compleated; fometimes they only fet themfelves a vomiting, after which they return to the combat quite frefh.

In the fouthern countries they fcarce obferve any mean with refpect to the women, who are no lefsprone to lafcivioufnefs; from hence comes that corruption of manners, which has infected the northern nations fome years fince; the Iroquois in particular had the reputation of chaftity before they had any commerce with the Illinois, and the other nations in the neighbourhood of Louifiana; they have gained nothing by the acquaintance except becoming like them. It muft be confeffed that effeminacy and lubricity were carried to the greateft excefs in thofe parts; men were feen to wear the drefs of women without a blufh, and to. debafe themfelves fo as to perform thofe occupations which are moft peculiar to the fex, from whence followed a corruption of morals paft all expreffion; it was pretended that this cuftom came from I know not what principle of religion; but this religion had like many others taken its birth in the depravation of the heart, or if the cuftom I fpeak of had its beginning in the fpirit, it has ended in the flefh; thefe effeminate perfons never marry, and abandon themfelves to the moft infamous paffions, for which caufe they are held in the moft fovereign contempt.

On the other hand the women though frong and robuft are far from being fruitful; befides the reafons I have already mentioned, to wit, the time they allow for the fuckling of their children, their cuftom of not cohabiting with their hufbands all that time, and the exceffive labour they are obliged to undergo in whatever fituation they are; this fterility proceeds likewife from a cuftom eftablifhed in feveral places, by which young women are fuffered to proftitute themfelves before marriage ; add to this the extreme mifery to which they they are often reduced, and which extinguifhes in them all defire of having children.

It is befides certain that they have great advantages over us, and I hold for the firft of all the extreme perfection of their fenfes over us both internal and external. In fpite of the fnow which dazles them, and the fmoak with which they are peftered for fix months of the year, their fight continues in all its vigor; they have the fenfe of hearing extremely acute, and their fmelling is fo exquifite, that they fmell fire at a great diftance; for this reafon it is that they cannot fuffer the fmell of murk, or any other ftrong feent; and it is even pretended that no fmell is agreeable to them, except that of eatables.

Their imagination is a fort of prodigy, it fuffices them to have been once in a place to have an exact idea of it, which is never effaced; let a foreft be ever fo vaft and untrodden they will crofs it without wandering out of the way, if they have made their obfervations right at fetting out. The inhabitants of Acadia, and places in the neighbourhood of the gulph of St. Laurence, have often failed in their canoes of bark, to make a defcent in the country of Labrador, in queft of their enemies the Efkimaux ; they have gone thirty or forty leagues out in the open fea without any compafs, and have landed precifely at the place intended. In the moft cloudy weather- they will follow the fun for feveral days, without miftaking; the exacteft fun-dial would not inform us better of the courfe of that beautiful ftar, than they will do by the infpection of the heavens only; thus let us do what we will to put them out of their way, it is very rare they miftake their road. They are born with this taVol. II.
lent, fo that it is not the fruit of their ootervations or of long cuttom. Children who have never beens out of their village, will travel equally well with thofe who have been all over the country.

The beaurty of their imagination equals its vitacity, which appears in all their difcourfe: they are very quick at repartees, and their harangues are full of hhining paffages, which would have been applauded at Rome and Athens. Their eloquence has a ftrength, nature, and pathos, which no art can give, and which the Greeks admired in the barbarians; and though this is fupported by nome of the action of an orator, and though they never saife their voice to any confiderable pitch, yet your perceive that they are affected with what they fay, and they perfuade.

It would be really furprizing if with fo fine an imagination, they had not alfo an excellent memory. They are without all thofe helps which we have invented to eafe our memory, or to fupply the want of it ; yet you cannot imagine what an infinite number of different topicks, with an immenfe detail of circumftances, and an amazing order, are handled in their councils. On fome occafions however they make ufe of little fticks, to remind them of the different articles they have to difeuls; and with eafe they form a kind of local memory, and that fo fure and infallible, that they will fpeak for four or five hours zogether, and difplay twenty different prefents, each of which requires an entire difcourfe, without forgetting any thing, and even without hefitation. Their narration is near and precife; and though they ufe a great many allegories and other figures, yet it is lively, and has all the beauties which their language affords.

They have a clear and folid judgment, and come at once to the point, without the leaft ftop or deviation. They eafily conceive whatever is within their reach, but it would require a long time and much labour, to put them in a condition of fucceeding in the arts, with which they have hitherto difpenfed, and whereof they have not the fmalleft notion; and the more fo as they have a fovereign contempt of whatever is not neceffary, that is to fay, for that which we hold in the greateft eftimation. It would alfo be no eafy matter to render them capable of conftraint, or to applying to things purely firitual, or which they look upon as ufelefs. As for thofe which they imagine of confequence, they obferve the greateft care and deliberation ; and in proportion as they difcover phelgm in confidering before they have taken their meafure, they teftify vivacity and ardour in the execution; this is remarked in an efpecial manner in the Hurons and Iroquois. They are not only quick but alfo very ingenious, and fmart in their repartees. An Outaway called Fobn le Blanc, who was a bad chriftian and a great drunkard, on being afked by the Count de Frontenac, what he thought the brandy he was fo fond of was made of, he faid, of tongues and hearts; for, added he, after I have drank of it I fear nothing, and I talk like an angel.

Moft of them have really a noblenefs of foul and a conftancy of mind, at which we rarely arrive, with all the affiftance of philofophy and religion. Always matters of themfelves in the moft fudden reverfes of fortune, not the fmalleft alteration is feen even in their cotntenances; a prifoner who knows what is to be the end of his cap* tivity, or what is perhaps more furprizing, who is G 2 ftill ftill uncertain of his fate, lofes not one quarter of an hour of his reft; and even the firft and moft fudden fhocks of paffion never furprize them. A Huron captain was one day infulted and ftruck by a young man, and the by-ftanders going to punilh this infolence on the fpot ; Let him alone, replied the captain, did you not perceive the earth to quake, by that he his fufficiently warned of his folly.

Their conftancy in torments is beyond all expreffion. A young woman fhall be a whole day in labour without a flrriek; fhould fhe difcover the leaft weaknefs the would be held unworthy the name of mother, as being only capable of bringing forth cowards. Nothing is more common than to fee perfons of every age and fex fuffer for fevesal hours, and even fometimes for feveral days together, all the torments which fire, or the moft infatiable fury can inflict or invent, in order to render them the more exquifite, without fo much as a groan; they are even moft commonly employed during their torture in provoking their executioners by the moft gauling reproaches.

An Outagamie, whom the Illinois were burning with the utmoft barbarity, having perceived a Frenchman amongft the fpectators, begged him to have the goodnefs to affift his enemies in tormenting him; and upon the other's afking him the reafon of this requeft, "It is, anfwered he, " becaufe I fhould then have the confolation of "dying by the hands of a man." "My greateft " regree, added he, is that I have never killed a " man." But, returned an Illinois, you have killed fuch and fuch perfons. "As for the lllinois, re" plied
${ }^{* 5}$ plied the patient, I have killed a fufficient num" ber of them, but I do not reckon thefe to be " men."

What I have remarked elfewhere in order to diminifh the furprize which fuch an infenfibility might occafion, hinders us not from acknowledging an extraordinary courage in them. But however, in order to elevate the foul to fuch a degree, beyond all fenfe of feeling, requires an effort of which vulgar fouls are utterly incapable; this the Indians exercife themfelves in during their whole lives, and accuftom their children to it from their tendereft infancy. Little boys and girls have been feen to tie themfelves together by an arm, and to put between a red coal to fee who fhould fhrink firt. Laftly, we muft alfo agree, that according to the remark of Cicero, the habit of labour renders torments the more fupportable. Now there is not perhaps in the whole world a people, who endure more fatigue than the Indians, both in their huntings and voyages. In a word, what proves this infenfibility in thefe barbarians, to be the effect of true courage is, that all of them are not equally poffeffed of it.

It is no wonder that with fuch a firmnefs of mind, and with fentiments fo elevated, the Indians Ihould be intrepid in the midft of danger, and of a courage which nothing can fhake; it is neverthelefs true, that in their wars they expofe themfelves as little as poffible, only becaufe they place their glory in never buying victory toe dear, and that as their nations are thin of people, they have adopted this maxim to weaken themfelves as little as poffible; but when they are under a neceffity of fighting, they behave like lions, and the fight of their blood ferves only to infpire them with new ftrength and courage. They have been feveral times in action in company with our bravoes, who have feen them perform exploits almoft incredible.

A miffionary being accompanied by fome Abenaquis in an expedition againft New England, and perceiving that they were purfued by a great body of Englifh in their retreat, did all he could to caufe them to make more hafte, but to no purpofe; all the anfwer he received was, that they did not fear fuch people as thefe, The Englifh at length appeared, and were at leaft twenty to one. The Indians, without being at all intimidated, firft placed the father in fafety, and afterwards went to wait for the enemy in a field, in which there was only the trunks of fome trees. The combat lafted almoft the whole day; the Abenaquis loft not a man, and put the Englifh to flight, after having covered the field with dead bodies. I had this fact from father Vincent Bigot, who was the miffionary in quettion.

But what is infinitely furprizing in men, whofe whole exterior difcovers nothing but the barbarian, is to fee them treat one another with a gentlenefs and a refpect unknown to the common people in the moft polite nations. This no doubt proceeds from this, that meum and tuum, thefe cold words, as St . Chryfoftom calls them, but which whilft they extinguifh in our hearts the fire of charity, kindle up in them that of covetoufnefs, are not as yet known amongft thefe Indians. We are no lefs charmed with that natural and unaffected gravity, which reigns in all their actions, and even in moft of their diverfions, as well as with that franknefs, and that deference they difcover towards their equals, equals, and the refpect fhewn by young people to old age; and laftly, that we never fee them in their quarrels make ufe of any indecent expreffions, and thofe oaths fo common amongft us; all of them proofs of their good fenfe and moderation.

( 87 )

I have told your Grace that it is a maxim adopted amongft them, and of which they are jealous above all things, that one man owes nothing to another : but from this evil principle they derive a very good confequence, to wit, that we muft never injure a perfon who has not offended us. There wants only to compleat their happinefs to do between nation and nation, as they almoft always do between man and man; and never to attack a people who have given them no grounds of complaint, and not to puhh their thirft of vengeance fo very far.

We muft however agree that what we moft admire in the Indians is not always to be attributed to pure virtue; that their natural difpofition and their vanity, have a great fhare in it, and that their brighteft qualities are obfcured by great vices. Thefe very men who appear to us fo very contemptible at firt $\cdot f i g h t$, hold all the reft of mankind in the greateft contempt; and have the higheft notion of themfelves. The proudeft of all were the Hurons, till fuccefs puffed up the Iroquois and infpired them with a haughtinefs, which nothing has hitherto been able to tame, together with a brutal ferocity which always conftituted their chief characteriftick.

On the other hand thefe people, fo haughty and fo jealous of their liberty, are beyond imagination

$$
\text { G } 4 \text { naves }
$$

flaves to human refpect : they are alfo accufed of being light and inconftant; but this is rather owing to the fpirit of independance than to their natural character, as I have already remarked of the Canadians. They are eafily offended, jealous and fufpicious, efpecially of us Frenchmen; treacherous when it is for their intereft; great diffemblers, and exceeding vindictive; no length of time extinguifhes in them the thirft of vengeance; this is the deareft inheritance they leave to their children, and is tranfmitted from generation to generation, till an occafion is found to put it in execution.

With refpect to the qualities of the heart, the Indians do not value themfelves much upon them, or, to fpeak more properly, have no virtues in them: they feem even incapable of confidering them in this light; friend/hip, compaffion, gratitude, attachment, are all known to them in fome degree, but proceed not from the heart, and are in them lefs the effect of a good natural difpofition, than of reflection. Their care of orphans, widows and infirm perfons, the hofpitality which they exercife in fo admirable a manner, are in them no more than a confequence of a perfuafion, that all ought to be in common amongt men. Fathers and mothers have an affeelion for their children which extends even to weaknefs, but which never induces them to render them virtuous, and which appears purely animal. Children on their fide fhew no return of natural love for their parents, and even fometimes treat them with indignity, efpecially their fathers. I have been told examples of it which ftrike us with horror, and which I cannot relate: that which follows was publickly known.

( 89)

An Iroquois who had ferved a long time in our troops againft his own nation, and even in quality of an officer, met his father in an engagement, and was going to run him through, when he difcovered who he was. He ftopt, and accofted him in this manner, " You have once given me life, and I " have this day returned the obligation; but " have a care of meeting me another time, as I " am now quit of that debt of nature which I " owed you." Nothing can be a ftronger proof of the neceffity of education, and that nature alone is incapable of inftructing us fufficiently in the moft effential duties of life: and what, if I am not deceived, is a more evident demonftration of the fuperior fanctity of the chriftian religion is, that it has produced in the heart of thefe barbarians, in all thefe refpects, a change which is perfectly wonderful.

But if the Indians are incapable of tafting the fweets of friendfhip, they have at leaft difcovered the advantage of it. Every one has a friend nearly the fame age with himfelf, to whom he attaches himfelf by the moft indiffoluble bonds. Two perfons thus united by one common intereft, are capable of undertaking and hazarding every thing in order to aid and mutually fuccour each other: death itfelf, according to their belief, can only feparate them for a time: they are well affured of meeting again in the other world never to part, where they are perfuaded they will have occafion for the fame fervices from one another.

I have been told a fory on this head, that an Indian who was a Chriftian, but who did not live according to the maxims of the gofpel, and who being threatened threatened with hell by a Jefuit, afked this miffionary, whether he thought his friend who was lately departed had gone into that place of torment: the father anfwered him, that he had good grounds to think that the Lord had had mercy upon him : Then I wont ga neither, replied the Indian ; and this motive brought him to do every thing that was defired of him; that is to fay, that he would have been full as willing to go to hell as to heaven had he thought to find bis companion there; but God makes ufe of every thing for the falvation of his elect. They add, that thefe friends when they happen to be at a diftance from each other, reciprocally invoke one another in all dangers; but this, no doubt, ought to be underftood of their tutelary genii. Prefents are the ties of thefe affociations, which are ftrengthened by intereft and their mutual neceffities; and the affitance they afford may be certainly depended on in almoft every cafe. Some pretend that thefe friendihips open a door to certain irregularities; but I have good grounds to think, that this is at leaft far from being general.

The colour of the Indians does not, as many believe, conftitute a third fipecies of men between the blacks and whites. They are very tawny and of a dirty and obfcure red, which is more fenfible in Florida, of which Lovifiana makes a part; but this is not natural to them. The frequent fristions they ufe, is what gives them this copper complexion, and it is really wonderful that they are not fill blacker, being continually expofed to the fmoke in winter, and to the greateft heats of the fun in fummer, and at all feafons to all the intemperance of the air.

It is not fo eafy to give a reafon why, except the hair of their head which is univerfally jet black, and their eye-lafhes and eye-brows, which fome of them even pluck out, they have not a fingle hair on their whole body. Almoft all the Americans are in the fame fituation. What is ftill more furprizing is, that their children are born with a long thin hair all over their bodies, but which difappears in eight days. We fee alfo fome ftraggling hairs on the chins of old men, as it happens amongtt us to women of a certain age. Some attribute this fingularity to the conftant cuftom the Americans of both fexes bave of fmoaking: what others alledge feems to me more natural, which is, that this proceeds from the quality of their blood, which being purer by reafon of the fimplicity of their food, produces fewer of thofe fuperfluities which our thicker blood occafions in fo great an abundance; or that having fewer falts it is lefs proper for this fort of productions. There is at leaft no room to doubt that it is owing to this fimplicity of their diet, that the Indians are fo nimble of foot. I have feen an iflander from the neighbourhood of Japan, who having never tafted bread, affured me, that he could with eafe have travelled on foot thirty leagues a day for a continuance; but that after beginning to make ufe of $i t$, he could no longer perform it with the fame eafe.

What is certain is, that our Indians hold it as a fingular beauty to have no hair except on their heads only; and that if any happens fometimes to grow on their chin they pluck it out immediately : that the Europeans when they firft faw them, appeared hideous to them on account of their long

Abstract

( 92 ) beards which it was then the fahion to wear; that they did not like our white colour ; and that the flefh of the French and Englifh feemed of a difagreeable tafte to them, becaufe of its faltnefs. Thus, Madam, the idea which was formerly entertained in Europe of the Indians, who were reprefented there like men all covered with hair, not only differs from the truth in every particular, but is alfo precifely the fame which they at firft entertained of us, as they believed that our bodies were as hairy all over as the chin and breaft of fome perfons.

I have the honour to be, & cc .

LETTER XXII.

Voyage to the River St. Jofeph. Obfervations with refpect to the Rivers which fall into Lake Michigan on the eaftern Side. Of Father Marquette's river, and of the Crigin of this Name. Of the Games of the Indians. Some particulars of the Cbaratter of there Nations.

River St. Fofeph, Auguf 16, 1721.

Madam,

$T \mathrm{~T}$ was eight days yefterday fince I arrived at this poft, where we have a miffion, and where there is a commandant with a fmall garrifon. The commandant's houfe, which is but a very forry one, is called the fort, from its being furrounded with an indifferent pallifado, which is pretty near the cafe in all the reft, except the forts Chambly and Catarocoŭy, which are real fortreffes. There are however in almoft every one of them fome few cannons or pateraroes, which in cafe of neceffity are fufficient to hinder a furprize and to keep the Indians in refpect.

We have here two villages of Indians, one of the Miamis and the other of the Poutewatamies, both of them moftly Chriftians; but as they have been for a long time without any paftors, the miffionary who has lately been fent them, will have no fmall difficulty in bringing them back to the exercife of their religion. The river of St. Jofeph comes from the fouth-eaft, and difcharges itfelf into the bottom of lake Michigan, the eaftrrn fhore of which is a hundred leagues in length, and which you are obliged to fail along before you come to the entry of this river. You afterward, fail up twenty leagues in it before you reach the fort, which navigation requires great precautions; becaufe when the wind is large, that is to fay wefterly, which frequently prevails here, the waves extend the whole length of the lake. There is alfo good ground to believe, that the great number of rivers which difcharge themfelves into the lake on the eaftern fide, contribute much by the fhock of their currents againft the waves to render this voyage dangerous: what is certain is, that there are few places in all Canada where there are more fhipwrecks. But I return to my journal where I left off.

On the firtt of Auguft, after having croffed under fail a bay which is thirty leagues in depth, I left on my right les ifles de Cafor, or Beaver iflands, which feem to me very well wooded; and fomeleagues farther on the left, I perceived on a fandy eminence a kind of grove or thicket, which when you are abreaft of it, has the figure of an animal lying down: the French call this the Sieeping, and the Indians the Couching Bear. I advanced twenty leagues this day; and encamped in a little ifland, which lies in 44 deg. 30 min . north latitude, being nearly under the fame parallel with Montreal. From the entry of the lake Michigan as far as this inland, the coaft is very fandy; but after you have got ever fo fmall a diftance up the country it appears extremely beautiful, at leaft if we may judge of it by the magnificent forefts with which it is covered. It is befides extremely well watered and we made not a fingle league without difcovering either fome large rivulet or fine river; and the more you advance to the fouth the larger the rivers, and they likewife come from a greater diftance, the peninfula which feparates lake Michigan from lake Huron, growing broader in proportion as you advance towards the fouth. Moft part however of thefe rivers are but of an indifferent breadth, and have no great depth at their mouth. There is one fingular circumftance attends them which is, that almoft immediately after you have entered them, you meet with lakes of two, three, or four leagues in circuit ; which comes no doubt from the great quantity of fand which they carry down with them; thefe fands being driven back by the waves of the lake, which come almoft conftantly from the weft, gather in heaps at the mouth of the rivers, the waters of which are ftopt by thefe dykes which they with difficulty get paft, and fo by degrees hollow out thefe lakes or pools, which hinder the country from being laid under water, on the melting of the fnows.

On the 3 d I entered the river of Father Marquette, in order to examine whether what I had been told of it was true. This is at firft entring it, no more than a brook; but fifteen paces higher you enter a lake which is near two leagues in circuit. In order to make way for its difcharge into lake Michigan, one would imagine that a great Hummock which you leave on the left as you enter, had been dug through"; and on the right the coaft is very low for the fpace of a good mufker-fhot, af ${ }^{2}$ terwards all of a fudden it rifes to a very great height. It had actually been reprefented to me as fuch, and on that head, the following is the conftant tradition of all our travellers, and what ancient miffionaries have told me.

Father Jofeph Marquette, a native of Laon in Picardy, where his family ftill maintains a diftinguifhed rank, was one of the moft illuftrious miffionaries of New-France. This perfon travelled over almoft all the countries in it, and made feveral important difcoveries, the laft of which was that of the Miffifippi, which he entered with the Sieur Joliet in 1673 . Two years after this difcovery, an account of which he has publifhed, as he was going from Chicagou, which is at the bottom of lake Michigan, to Michillimakinac, he entered on the 18th day of May 1675 the river in queftion, the mouth of which was then at the extremity of the low ground, which as I have already taken notice, you leave on the right hand as you enter. Here he erected his altar and faid mafs. He went afterwards to a fmall diftance in order to render thanks, and begged the two men that conducted his canoe to leave him alone for half an hour. This time having paft they went to feek him, and were furprized to find him dead; they called to mind however, that on entering the river he had let drop an expreffion that he fhould end his days at this place.

However, as it was too far to carry his body from thence to Michillimakinac, they buried him near the bank of the river, which from that time has retired by degrees, as out of refpect to his remains, as far as the cape, the foot of which it now wafhes, and where it has opened itfelf a new paffage. The year following, one of the perfons who had paid the laft offices to this fervant of God, returned to the place where they had buried him, took what remained of him, and carried it to Michillimakinac. I have not been able to learn, or elfe I have forgot, the name this river formerly bore : but at this day the Indians always call it the river of the black robe, for thus the Indians term the jefuits. They call the fecular clergy White-bands as they do the recollets Grey-gozens. The French call this river Father Marquette's river, and never fail to call upon him when they are in any danger on lake Michigan. Several of them have affirmed, that they believed themfelves indebted to his interceffion for having efcaped very great dangers.

I advanced three leagues farther that day, and and pitched my camp at the mouth of the river St. Nicholas, on the banks of a fine lake, longer but not quite fo broad as the former. I found here great numbers of red and white pines, the latter of which have the rougheft bark, but the wood of them is the better of the two, and from it iffues a gum of tolerable finenefs; the former have a fmoother bark but the wood is heavier : from thefe is drawn the tar of which is made the beft fort of pitch. I had a pleafant enough voyage as far as the river St. Jofeph, which I entered very late on the 6th or very early on the 7 th, for it was about midnight when we arrived at this place; having taken two full hours reft on the banks of the lake of the Black River, which is eight leagues diftant from it, and where there grows much of the root called gingfeng.

Vol. II.
H
The

The river of St. Jofeph has more than an hundred leagues of courfe, its fource being at no great diftance from lake Erie; it is navigable for fourfcore leagues, and on the 25 th as I was failing up towards the fort, I faw nothing but excellent lands covered with trees of a prodigious height, under which there grows in fome places very fine capillaire. I was two days in getting hither, but on the evening of the firft day 1 run a very great rifque of putting an end to all my travels; I was taken for a bear, and had very near been killed on this footing by one of my conductors: it happened in this manner.

After fupper and prayers were over, it being very not, I went to take a walk along the banks of the river. A fpaniel which followed me wherever I went, happened to plunge into the water in queft of fomething I had thrown into it without thinking; my people who believed me retired to reft, and the more fo as it was very late and the night dark, hearing the noife this creature made, took it into their head, that it was a roebuck fwimming acrofs the river, two of them immediately fet out with their mufkets loaded; by good luck for me, one of the two who was a hair-brained fellow was called back by the reft for fear he fhould caufe them mifs their prey, but his hair-brainednefs might very eafily have caufed him not to mifs me.

The other advancing flowly perceived me at the diftance of twenty paces from him, and made no doubt that it was a bear flanding on its hind legs, as thefe animals always do on their hearing any noife. With this notion the huntfman cocks his piece in which he had put three balls, and couching couching clofe to the ground, approached me as foftly as poffible. He was juft going to fire, when I likewife began to think I faw fomewhat, but without being able to diftinguih what it was. As I could not doubt however that this muft be fome of my people I afked him whether he took me for a bear; he made no anfwer, and when I came up to him I found him quite fpeechlefs, and like a perfon feized with horror at the thoughts of what he was going to do. His comrades afterwards told me all that had happened.

The river St. Jofeph is fo commodious for the commerce of all parts of Canada, that it is no wonder it has always been much frequented by the Indians. Befides it waters an extreme fertile country, but this is not what thefe people efteem it moft for. It is even great pity to give them good lands; which they either make no ufe of at all, or foon run out by fowing maize on them. The Mafcoutins had not long fince a fettlement on this river, but have returned back to their own country which is faid to be ftill finer than this. The Poutewatamies have occupied fucceffively feveral pofts here where they ftill are; their village is on the fame fide with the fort, a little below it and on a very fine fpot of ground: that of the Miamis is on the other fide of the river.

Thefe Indians, who have from the earlieft times applied themfelves more than others to the ftudy of medicine, make great account of the root gingfeng, and are perfuaded that this plant has the virtue of rendering women fruifful. I do not believe however that it is for this reafon they have given it the name of Abefoatcbenza which fignifies a child; it owes this name at leaft amongt the Iroquois to the figure of its root. Your Grace has no doubt feen what Father Saffitau who firft brought it into France, has written of it under the name Aureliana Canadenfis: it is at leaft in fhape exactly the fame with that which comes from China, and which the Chinefe bring from Corea and Tartary. The name they give it, and which fignifies the likenefs of man; the virtues attributed to it, and which have been experienced in Canada by fuch as have ufed it, and the conformity of the climate * are a flrong prefumption that did we only believe it to come from China, it would be as much efteemed as that which the Chinefe fell us. And perhaps too it owes its little credit amongft us, to its growing in a country which belongs to us, and that it wants the advantage of being in every refpect a foreign commodity.

Sailing up the river St. Jofeph I remarked fome trees which I had not feen any where elfe. The moft fingular of thefe, and which I at firft took for an afh by its leaves, grows to an extreme thicknefs, and bears a fort of bean very beautiful to the eye, but which by being boiled become always harder and harder, fo that it has been impoffible to make any ufe of them. The fields round the fort are covered with faffafras to fuch a degree, that the air is perfumed with them. This is not a large tree as in Carolina but a fmall fhrub creeping almoft on the ground, and perhaps thefe are only the fhoots of the trees which have been cut down in order to clear the ground round the fort and Indian towns. Here

[^1]Here are a great number of fimples which the Indians are faid to ufe at a venture, without any other principle than a few flight experiments, which lead them fometimes into confiderable miftakes: for the fame remedies do not always act in the fame manner on every conftitution, even when affected with the fame diftemper; but thefe people are incapable of making fuch diftinctions. There is one thing which has always furprized me, and that is the impenetrable fecrecy which they obferve with refpect to their fimples, or the little curiofity of the French to acquire the knowledge of them. If this be not the fault of thefe latter, nothing can, in my opinion, be a ftronger proof, that the Indians do not behold us with pleafure in their country: but of this we have other proofs and equally undoubted. It may alfo be, that they entertain the fame opinion with regard to their fimples, which we are affured they hold with refpect to their mines; which is that they would certainly die, were they to difcover any of them to ftrangers.

The Indians of thefe parts are naturally thieves, and look upon all they can catch as lawful prize. It is however true, that if one difcovers early that he has loft any thing, it is fufficient to advertife the chief of it, and you are fure of recovering it; but you muft give this chief more than the value of the thing, befides which, he always demands fomething for him who has found it, who is probably the thief himfelf. I was in the fame cafe on the morrow after my arrival, in which I had not the leaft favour or indulgence fhown me: thefe barbarians will rather maintain a war than relax ever fo little in this point.

Some days afterwards I paid a vifit to the chief of the Miamis, who had been beforehand with me; this is a tall handfome man but very much disfigured, being without a nofe; I was told that he owed this misfortune to a debauch, As foon as he underftood I was coming to vifit him, he went and placed himfelf in the inner part of his cabbin in a fort of alcove, where $I$ found him feated crofslegged in the manner of the orientals. He faid fcarce any thing to me, and feemed to affect a haughty fort of gravity, which he fupported very ill; this is the firft Indian chief I have ever feen to obferve this ceremony; but I was told that I muft repay him in kind, if I would not be defpifed by him.

On this day the Poutewatamies came to play at the game of fraws, againft the Miamis; the game was played in the cabbin of the chief, and in a fort of fquare over againft it. Thefe ftraws are fmall rufhes of the thicknefs of a ftalk of wheat and two fingers in length. They take up a parcel of thefe in their hand, which generally confifts of two hundred and one, and always of an unequal number. After they have well ftirred them, and making a thoufand contortions of body and invoking the genii, they divide them, with a kind of awl or fharp bone into parcels of ten : each takes one at a venture, and he to whom the parcel with eleven in it falls gains a certain number of paints according to the agreement : fixty or four ficore make a party.

There are other ways of playing this game, and they would have explained them to me, but I could underfand nothing of the matter, except that the number nine gained the whole party. They alfo told told me, that there was as much of art as chance in this game, and that the Indians are great cheats at it, as well as at all others; that they are fo eager at it, as to fpend whole days and nights at it; and that fometimes they do not give over playing till they have ftript themfelves naked and have nothing more to lofe. They have another kind of game, which excites no ftrong defire of gain. This is for pure diverfion only, but is almoft always attended with fatal confequences with refpect to their morals. At night fall feveral pofts are erected, in a round form, in the middle of fome great cabbin; in the midit of all are the inftruments, on each poft is fixed a packet of down, of which there muft be fome of every colour. The young people of both fexes promifcuo fly dance round the pofts, the girls having alfo fome down of the colour which they love: from time to time a young man goes out from the reft, and takes from a poft fome down, of the colour which he knows is agreeable to his miftrefs, places it upon her head, dances round her, and by a certain fignal gives her to underftand fome place of affignation. The dance ended, the feaft begins and lafts the whole day long, in the evening all the company retire, when the girls manage matters with fo much addrefs, that in fpite of the vigilance of their mothers they reach the place of rendezvous.

The Miamis have alfo two other games; the firft of which is called the game of the crofs. This is played with a ball and crooked fticks, ending like a fort of racket. Two pofts are erected which ferve as limits, and which are diftant from each other in proportion to the number of the players. As for inftance, if there are fourfcore players, $\mathrm{H}_{4}$ the the diftance between the pofts is half a league: The players are divided into two companies who have each their own poft, and the bufinefs is to tofs the ball to that of the oppofite party, without fuffering it to fall to the ground or without touching it with the hand; for if either happen the party is loft ; at leaft except he who is in the fault can repair it, by driving the ball to the end with one fingle flroke, which is often impoffible. Thefe Indians are fo dexterous at catching the ball with their croffees, that fometimes a party lafts feveral days running.

(104)

The fecond game is pretty much like this, but not fo dangerous. Two boundaries are marked out as in the firft, and the players occupy all the fpace which is between the two. He who is to begin toffes a ball up into the air, as nearly perpendicular as poffible, to the end he may catch it again with the greater eafe, in order to throw it towards the boundary. All the reft fand ready with their hands lifted, and he who catches the ball either performs the fame thing, or throws it to fome one of his own company, whom he judges more alert and dexterous than himfelf; for in order to win the party the ball muft never be fuffered to fall into the hands of any of the adverfaries, before it reaches the boundary. The women alfo play at this 'game, but this rarely happens; their companies coinfilt of four or five, and the firlt who lets fall the ball lofes the party.

The Poutewatamies have here a chief and an orator, who are perfons of worth. The firf who is called Piremon is upwards of fixty, very prudent in his conduct, and capable of giving very good advice; the fecond whofe name is Wilamek is fonewhat
fomewhat younger; this perfon is a Chriftian and well inftructed, but makes no exercife of his religion. One day as I reproached him for it, he left me abrubtly, went directly to the chapel, and faid his prayers with fo audible a voice, that we could hear him at the miffionary's. You can fcarce any where meet with a more fenfible man or a better fpeaker; and befides he is of a very amiable character and fincerely attached to the French. Piremon is no lefs fo, and I heard both of them fpeak in a council held at the commandant's where they faid a great many very fine things to us.

Several Indians of the two nations fettled upon this river, are juft arrived from the Englifh colonies, whither they had been to fell their furs, and from whence they have brought back in return a great quantity of fpirituous liquors. The diftribution of it is made in the ufual manner; that is to fay, a certain number of perfons have daily delivered to each of them a quantity fufficient to get drunk with, fo that the whole has been drank up in eight days. They began to drink in both villages, as foon as the fun was down, and every night the fields echoed with the moft hideous howlings. One would have thought that a gang of devils had broke loofe from hell, or that the two towns had been cutting one another's throats. There were two men maimed, one of whom I met, who had broke his arm with a fall; I told him he would certainly take care to keep fober another time: he anfwered, that what had happened was nothing at all; and that he fhould very foon be well again, and would fall to drinking as foon as he could get wherewithal,

Your Grace may from thence judge, what a miffionary is capable of doing in midft of this diforder, and how difagreeable it muft be to a good man, who has in a manner exiled himfelf, in order to gain fouls to God, to be obliged to become a witnefs of it, without being able to remedy it. Thefe barbarians themelves well know, that drunkennefs is their ruin and deftruction; but when one goes about to perfuade them, that they ought of themfelves to requeft that no more of this deftructive beverage fhould be fold them, they anfwer you cooly: "It is you who have accuftomed us to " it, we are now no longer able to difpenfe with " the want of it, and fhould you refuie to give "us any, we fhould certainly go to the Englih " for it. This liquor kills and deftroys us we con"fers, but it is to you we owe this mifchief which " is now paft remedy." It is, however, without juft grounds that they blame us alone; for had it not been for the Englifh, I do believe it poffible to have put an end to this commerce in the colony, or at leaft to have reduced it to its juft limits; it will perhaps very foon be neceffary to permit the French to carry on this traffick, taking the proper meafures to hin er the abufe of it; and the more, as the Englifh fpirituous liquors are much more mifchievous than ours.

A diforder which attacks the morals never goes alone ; it is always either the caufe or the effect of feveral others. The Indians before they fell into this vice, if we except war which they have always carried on in a barbarous and inhuman manner, had nothing to trouble their happinefs; drunkennefs has rendered them interefted, and has deftroyed all the fweets, whether of domeftick and publick life. However, as they are only affected with the prefent object, the evils which this paffion has occafioned are not yet become habitual; thefe are ftorms which foon blow over, and whereof the good-nature and tranquillity of mind they are endowed with, take away almoft the very remembrance.

( 1.07 )

It muft be confeffed that their way of life feems at firft glance very rude but befides that nothing is hard in this refpect but by comparifon, and that habit is a fecond nature, the liberty they enjoy, compenfates fufficiently the lofs of thofe conveniencies of which they are deprived. What we fee every day in fome who are beggars by profeffion, and in fome peafants, furnifhes a fenfible proof, that happinefs may be found even in the bofom of indigence. Now the Indians are ftill more really fo; firft, becaufe they believe themfelves fo; in the fecond place, as being in peaceable poffeffion of the moft invaluable gift of nature; laftly, from their being utterly ignorant of, and without fo much as the defire of knowing thofe falfe goods which we fo much admire, which we purchafe at the expence of real ones, and which we fo little enjoy.

In fact a thing in which they are more eftimable and ought to be looked upon as true philofophers is, that the fight of all our conveniencies, riches, and magnificence affects them fo little, and that they have found out the art of eafily difpenfing with them. Some Iroquois who went to Paris in 1666, and who after being fhown all the royal houfes, and all the fine things of that great city, admired nothing in it ; and would have preferred their villages to the capital of the moft flourifhing kingdom in Europe, had they not feen the fliteet De la Huchetre, where the cook's fhops, in which they found a conftant fupply of all forts of eatables, pleafed them highly.

Nor can we in juftice fay, that what makes them fo fond of their own way of living is their not being acquainted with the charms of ours. A good rumber of Frenchmen have tried their way of life, and were fo pleafed with, it, that feveral of them, though they could have lived very comfortably in the colony, could never be prevailed upon to return to it ; on the contrary, there never was fo much as a fingle Indian that could be brought to relifh our way of living. Children have been taken even in their fwadling clothes, and have been brought up with a great deal of care; nothing has been omitted to hinder them from the knowledge of what might pafs at home with their parents: all thefe precautions have been fruitlefs, the force of blood having ever got the better of education: the moment they have found themfelves at liberty, they have torn their clothes to pieces, and have gone acrofs the woods in queft of their countrymen, whofe way of living feemed preferable to ours.

An Iroquois called La Plaque, and the fame perfon, who by faving his father's life at an engagement, thought himfelf freed from all obligations to him, lived among the French for feveral years. He was even made a lieutenant in our army, in order to induce him to remain with us, as he was a very brave man. He could not however hold out, and returned to his own nation, carrying away with him only our vices, without without correcting any of thofe he had brought along with him. He was fund of women to diftraction. He was handfome, and his bravery and his warlike feats, made him much taken notice of, he had alfo a fprightly wit, and was of a very engaging behaviour; he debauched many of his countrywomen, and carried his irregularities to fuch a height, that it was debated in the council of his own canton, whether they fhould not difpatch him. It was however carried by a plurality of voices, that he fhould be fuffered to live; becaufe that being of diftinguifhed valour, he would people the country with excellent warriors.

The care which the mothers take of their children, whilft they are ftill in the cradle is beyond all expreffion, and proves in a very fenfible manner, that we often fpoil all, by the reflections which we add to the dictates of fimple nature. They never leave them, they carry them every where about with them; and even when they are ready to fink under the burthen with which they load themfelves, the cradle of the child is held for nothing: and one would even think, that this additional weight were an eafe to them and rendered them more agile.

Nothing can be neater than thefe cradles in which the child lies as commodiounly and foftly as poffible. But the infant is only made faft from the middle downwards: fo that when the cradle is upright, the little creatures have their head and the half of the body hanging down; we Europeans would imagine, that a child left in this condition would become entirely decrepid;
but quite the contrary happens, this pofture rendering the body fupple; and they are in fact of a port and ftature, which the handfomeft among us might look upon with envy. What can we oppofe to fo general an experience? But what I am going to tell you is not fo eafily juftified.

There are nations in this continent called flatheads, and which have, in fact, their fore-head very flat, and the crown of their head fomewhat raifed. This conformation is not the work of nature but of their mothers, who give it to their children gradually from their birth. In order to this, they apply upon the forehead and back part of the head, two maffes of clay or of fome other heavy matter, which they prefs together by degrees, till the cranium has taken the form they have a mind to give it. It appears that this operation caufes the children to fuffer a great deal, as there is a thick and a whitifh matter which proceeds from their noftrils: but neither this circumftance nor the cries of the little innocents alarm the mothers, who are above all things defirous of procuring them this point of beauty which they conceive indifpenfably neceffary. Quite the contrary happens among certain Algonquins, whom we have thought fit to call Tetes de Boule, or Roundheads, and of whom I have already taken notice, they making their chief beauty to confift in having heads perfectly round, and the mothers likewife begin very early to give them this form. I was willing, Madam, to make ufe of the leifure my ftay in this place affords me, which will perhaps be longer than I am defirous it fhould be, in order to finifh all I had to fay on this fubject, but fome unexpected difficulties and the fudden departure of a traveller, who is returning to the colony, oblige me to interrupt this account which I fhall refume as foon as poffible.

( III)

I am, &c.

LETTER

L E T T E R XXIII.

Sequel of the Cbaracter of the Indians and of their Manner of living.

River St. Fofeph, Auguft 8, 1721: Madam,

TRefume the fequel of my memoirs where I le't off. You may perhaps find fault with me for my want of order, but one may at leaft pardon in a relation what is admired in an ode; that which in a lyric poet is the effect of art, is the effect of neceffity in a traveller, who can only relate things in proportion as he is informed of them, and who is obliged to write what is then paffing before his eyes for fear of forgetting it. The children of the Indians after leaving off the ufe of the cradle, are under no fort of confinement, and as foon as they are able to crawl about on hands and feet, are fuffered to go ftark naked whereever they have a mind, through woods, water, mire and fnow ; which gives them ftrength and agility, and fortifies them againft the injuries of the air and weather ; but this conduct, as I have already remarked, occafions weakneffes in the ftomach and breaft, which deftroy their conftitution very early. In the fummer time they run the moment Vol. II.
they get up to the next river or lake, where they remain a great part of the day playing, in the fame manner we fee filhes do in good weather, near the furface of the water. Nothing is more proper than this exercife to render the body active.

They take care likewife to put the bow and arrow into their hands betimes; and in order to excite in them that emulation which is the beft miftrefs of the arts, there is no neceffity of placing their breakfaft on the top of a tree, as was formerly done to the Lacedemonian youth; they are all born with fo ftrong a paffion for glory, as to have no need of a fpur; thus they fhoot their arrows with wonderful exactnefs, and it fcarce cofts them any trouble to arrive at a like dexterity in the ufe of our firearms. They alfo caufe them wreftle together, and fo keen are they in this exercife, that they would often kill one another, were they not feparated in time; thofe who come off with the worft, are fo mortified at it that they can never be at reft till they have had their revenge.

We may in general fay, that fathers and mothers neglect nothing, in order to infpire their children with certain principles of honour which they preferve their whole lives, but which are often ill enough applied; and in this confifts all the education that is given them. They take care always to communicate their inftructions on this head, in an indirect manner. The molt common way is by rehearfing to them the famous exploits of their anceftors or countrymen: the youth take fire at thefe recitals, and figh for an opportunity of imitating what they have thus been made to admire, Sometimes in order to correct their faults they employ rears and entreaties, but never threats; thefe would would make no manner of imprefion on minds which have imbibed this prejudice, that no one whatever has a right to force them to any thing.

A mother on feeing her daughter behave ill burfts into tears; and upon the other's afking her the caufe of it, all the anfwer fhe makes is, Thou difhonoureft me. It feldom happens that this fort of reproof fails of being efficacious. Notwithftanding, fince they have had a more frequent commerce with the French, fome of them begin to chantife their children, but this happens only among thofe that are Chriftians, or fuch as are fettled in the colony. Generally the greateft punifhment which the Indians make ufe of in chaftifing their children, is by throwing a little water in their face; the children are very fenfible of this, and in general of every thing that looks like reproof, which is owing to this, that pride is the ftrongeft pafion at this age.

Young girls have been known to ftrangle themfelves for a flight reprimand from their mothers, or for having a few drops of water thrown in their face, warning them of what was going to happen in furch words as thefe, You Joall not bave a daugbter long to ufe fo. The greateft evil in this fort of education, is that what they exhort young people to is not alway virtue, or that what comes nearly to the fame thing, that the ideas they give them of it are not juft. In fact, nothing is fo much inftilled into them, whether by precept or example, as an implacable defire of revenge.

It would feem, Madam, that a childhood fo ill inftructed, fhould be followed by a very diffolute

$$
\text { I } 2 \text { and }
$$

and turbulent flate of youth; but on one hand the Indians are naturally quiet and betimes matters of themfelves, and are likewife more under the guidance of reafon than other men; and on the other hand, their natural difpofition, efpecially in the northern nations, does not incline them to debauchery. They however have fome ufages in which no fort of regard is paid to modefty; but it appears that in this, fuperfition has a much greater fhare than a depravation of heart.

The Hurons when we firft began to frequent them were more lafcivious as well as more brutal in their pleafures. For young people of both fexes abandoned themfelves, without either fhame or remorfe, to all kinds of diffolutenefs, and it was chiefly amongft thefe that it was thought no crime in a girl to proftitute herfelf: their parents were the firft to engage them in this vice, and hufbands were feen to proftitute their wives for vile intereft. Several of them never married, but took women to ferve them to ufe their own expreffion as companions, and the only difference they reckoned between thefe concubines and their lawful fpoufes, was in their being free from any engagement with the former ; befides, their children were on the fame faoting with the others, which occafioned no fort of inconvenience in a country where there was nothing to inherit.

The nations in thefe parts are not diftinguifhed by their habit: the men in hot weather have often no garment, except a hirt: In winter they wear more or fewer cloaths, in proportion to the climate. They wear on their feet a fort of focks $s_{2}$ made of deer-flein dred in the fmoke; fmoke; their hofe are alfo of ikins or pieces of ftuff wrapped round the leg. A waittcoat of fkins covers their bodies down to their middle, over which they wear a covering when they can get it; if not they wear a robe of bear-fkin or of feveral fkins of beavers, otters, or other fuch like furs, with the hairy fide inwards. The woman's boddices reach down to a little above the isnee, and when they travel they cover the head with their coverings or robes. I have feen feverals who wore little bonnets, made in the manner of leather caps; others of them wear a fort of cowl, which is fewed to their vefts or boddices, and they have alfo a piece of ftuff or fkin which ferves them for a petticoat, and which covers them from the middle down to the mid leg.

They are all very fond of fhirts, which they never wear under their vefts till they become dirty, and never put them off, till they fall off with rottennefs, they never giving themfelves the trouble to wafh them. Their tunicks or vefts of fkins, are commonly dried in the fmoke like their focks, that is, they are fuffered to be fully penetrated with it, when they rub them till they are capable of being wathed like linnen. They alfo drefs them by fteeping them in water, and afterwards rub them between their hands till they become dry and pliant. They are, however, much fonder of our Ituffs and coverings, which they efteem much more commodious.

Several of them paint themfelves, as the Picts did formerly, over the whole body: others in fome parts only. This is not confidered by them as purely ornamental ; they find it , likewife as is faid, of great ufe to them : it contributes much to defend them from the cold and wet, and faves them from the perfecution of the gnats. It is however only in the countries occupied by the Englin, and efpecially in Virginia, that the cuftom of painting themfelves all over is very common. In New-France moft are fatisfied with making a few figures of birds, ferpents, or other animals, and even foliage or the like, without any order or fymmetry, and often on the face, and fometimes on the eye-lids, according to the caprice of the perfon. Many of the women too caufe themfelves to be painted over the jawbone, in order to prevent the tooth-ach.

( 118 )

This operation which is done by pricking the parts, is not painful in itfelf; it is done in this manner : they begin with tracing on the fkin after it is well ftretched, the figure they have a mind to paint on it. They afterwards prick with the bone of a fifh or with needles, all thefe traces even till the blood comes, afterwards they rub it over with charcoal and other colours well pulverized. Thefe powders infinuate themfelves under the fkin, fo that the colours are never effaced. But in fome time after the flin fwells, when there arifes a tetter accompanied with an inflammation: this is commonly followed by a fever, and if the weather proves hot, or if the operation has been pufhed too far, the life of the patient is endangered.

The colour with which they paint their faces, and the greafe with which they rub the whole body, produce the fame advantages, and in the opinion of the Indians, contribute as much to the beauty and comelinefs of the perfon as the pricking. The warriors paint themfelves when they take the field, in order to terrify the enemy, and perhaps too, with a view to hide their own fear, for we muft not believe them to be entirely exempt from it. Young perfons do it, in order to conceal their youth, which makes them lefs efteemed by the old foldiers, or their palenefs after fome difeafe which they would be afraid would be taken for the effect of their want of courage. They do it likewife in order to improve their good looks; in which cafe the colours are more lively and in greater variety: they alfo paint the prifoners who are condemned to die, for what realon I know not; this is perhaps done to adorn the victim who is about to be facrificed to the god of war. Laftly, they paint dead perfons and expofe them covered with their fineft robes, and this, no doubt, that they may conceal the dead palenefs which disfigures them.

The colours made ufe of on thefe occafions are the fame employed in dying their fkins, and are drawn from certain earths and from the barks of trees. Thefe are not very lively, but are very difficult to efface. The men add to thefe ornaments fome down of fwans or other birds, which they fcatter over their hair, which is befmeared with fat, by way of powder. To this they add feathers of all colours, and tufts of hair of different animals, all placed in a very grotefque manner. The difpofition of their hair fometimes briftling on one fide and lying flat on the other, or dreffed in a thoufand odd ways; with pendants in their ears and fometimes in their noftrils, a large fheil of porcelain hanging from their neck or on their breaft, crowns of feathers, with the claws, talons or heads of birds of prey, fmall deer horns; all thefe are fo many effential articles in their drefs. But whatever is of an extraordinary value, is always employed in adorning their captives when thefe wretches make their firft entry into the village of the conquero
It is to be remarked, that the men take no care to adorn any part but the head. Quite the reverfe happens with the women. They farce ufe any dref's on their heads at all; only they are very jealous of their hair and would think themfelves difhonoured forever, were it to be cut. Thus, when at the death of their relations they cut off part of the hair, they pretend to fhew by this act the moft extreme grief they are capable of. In order to preferve this ornament of the head they rub it often with fat, powder it with the bark of a certain tree, and fometimes with vermilion, then wrap it in the fkin of an eel or ferpent, by way of locks, which are plaited in form of a chain, and which hang down to their middle. As to the face, they content themfelves with drawing a few lines on it with vermilion or other colours.

Their noftrils are never bored, and it is only aming fome nations that their ears are fo. When this is the cafe, they infert in them, or hang to them, as well as the men, beads of porcelain. When they are in their fineft drefs they wear robes on which are painted all forts of figures, fmall collars of porcelain, without any great order or fymmetry, and a kind of border tolerably well worked with the hair of the porcupine, which they alfo paint with different colours. They adorn in the fame manner their children's cradles, and over the extremity towards the head, they fix a femicircle or two of cedar, that they may cover the child without incommoding its head.

Befides, the care of houfhold affairs and making the neceffary provifion of wood, the women are likewife alone charged with the culture of the fields; as foon as the fnows are melted and the water fufficiently drained off, they begin with preparing the ground, which is done by ftirring it flightly with a crooked piece of wood, the handle of which is very long, after having fet fire to the dried ftalks of of their maize and other herbs which have remained fince the laft harveft. Befides that, thofe forts of grain which are cultivated by thefe people are all fummer corn, they pretend that the nature of the foil of this country, will not permit them to fow any thing before the winter. But I believe that the true reafon why corn would not fprout, if it were to be fown in autumn, is either that it would fpoil during the winter, or would rot on the melting of the fnows. It may alfo be, and it is the opinion of feveral perfons, that the corn which is fown in Ca nada, though originally come from France, has contracted, through length of time, the nature and properties of fummer corn, which is not ftrong enough to fprout feveral times, as it happens to fuch forts of grain as we fow in September and October.

Beans or ratherCaravanches are fown with maize, the ftalk of which ferves for a fupport to them; I think I remember to have been told, that it is from us the Indians received this fort of pulfe, which they hold in great efteem, and which, in fact, differs nothing from ours. But what I am furprized at is, that they make little or no ufe of our peas, which have acquired in the foil of Canada a degree of excellence, much fuperior to what they have in Europe. Turnfoles, water melons, and pompions, are firft raifed in a hot-bed and afterwards tranfplanted.

The women commonly affift one another in their labour in the fields, and when reaping time comes, they have fometimes recourfe to the men, who then condefcend to put their hands to work. 'The whole concludes with a feftival and with a feaft, which is given in the night. Their corn and other fruits are preferved in repofitories which they dig in the ground, and which are lined with large pieces of bark. Some of them leave the maize in the ear, which is tufted like qur onions, and hang them on long poles over the entry of their cabbins. Others threfh it out and lay it up in large bafkets of bark, bored on all fides to hinder it from heating. But when they are obliged to be from home for any time, or when they apprehend fome irruption of the enemy, they make great concealments under ground, where thefe forts of grain are exceeding well preferved.

In the northern parts they fow lirtle, and in feveral places none at all, but purchafe maize by way of exchange for other commodities. This fort of pulfe is very wholefome, nourifhing, and light upon the ftomach. The way in which our French Canadian travellers commonly drefs it, is to boil it a little in a fort of lye. In this ftate it keeps a long time; they commonly make their provifion of it for long journeys, and compleat the dreffing of it as they want it, by boiling it in water or in broth, if they can get any, with a little falt along with it.

This is no difagreeable eating, but many are of opinion, that the too conftant ufe of it is prejudicial to the health, the lye giving it a corrofive quality, the effects of which become fenfible after fome time. When the Maize is in the ear and ftill green, fome roaft it on the coals, in which way it has an exce.lent cellent flavour. They commonly regale ftrangers with this difh. They alfo fend it in fome places to perfons of diftinction who arrive in their village, much in the fame manner as they prefent the freedom of a city in France.

( 123 )

Laftly, it is of this pulfe the Sagamity is made, which is the moft common food of the Indians. In order to this they begin with roafting it, they afterwards bruife it, feparate it from the hufk and then make it into a fort of pap, which is infipid when without meat or prunes to give it a relifh. It is fometimes made into meal, called here farine froide, and is the moft commodious and beft provifion for a journey; and fuch perfons as walk on foot can carry no other. They alfo boil the maize in the ear whilft it is ftill tender, they afterwards roaft it a little, then feparate it from the ear and lay it to dry in the fun: this will keep a long time, and the fagamity made of it has an excellent flavour.

The detail of thefe difhes is a proof how little delicate the Indians are in their eating: we fhould alfo be of opinion that their tafte is very much vitiated, were it poflible to fix this point. They are above all things fond of fat, which when they can get, it is the reigning ingredient in all their cookery: fome pounds of candles in a kettle of fagamity, makes an excellent difh with them; they even put things in it which I dare not mention; and at which they are furprized to fee us fhocked.

The fouthern nations had no kitchen utenfils, but fome veffels of earthen ware. In the north they made ufe of wooden kettles, and made the water boil by throwing into it red hot pebbles. Our iron pots are efteemed by both as much more commodious than the others, and are the commodity you can promife moft to difpofe of quickly, in trading with Indians. Among the weftern nations they ufe wild oats inftead of maize: this is likewife very wholffome, and if lefs nourihing, the hunting of the buffalo which is very plentiful in thote parts, abundantly compenfates that defect. Amongtt the wandering Indians who never cultivate the oround, the fole refource when their hunting and fifhing fall hort, is in a kind of mofs which grows on certain rocks, and which our Frenchmen call Trippe de Roches: nothing can be more infipid than this food, which is even very far from being fubitantial; and can at moft keep one from dying of hunger. I am lefs fill able to conceive what has, however, been attefted by perfons worthy of credit, that the Indians eat as a great dainty a kind of maize, which is laid to rot in ftanding water as we do hemp, and which is taken out quite black and flinking. They even add, that fuch as have once taken a liking to this ftrange difh, do not with their will lofe any of the water or rather of the dirt that runs from it, and the fmell of which alone, would be enough to turn the ftomach of any other perfon. It is probably neceffity alone which has difcovered this fecret, and if this does not likewife conftitute all the feafoning to it, nothing can be a ftronger proof that there is no difputing of taftes.

The Indian women make bread of maize, and though this is only a mafs of ill kneaded pafte, without leaven, and baked under the afhes, thefe people reckon it excellent, and regale their friends with it; but it muft be eaten hot for it will not keep cold; fometimes they mix beans, different fruits, oil and fat with it : one muft have a good ftomach to diget fuch dainties.

The Indians make no other ufe of the turnfoles, but to extract from them an oil with which they rub themfelves: this is more commonly drawn from the feeds than from the root of this plant. This root differs little from what we call, in France topinambours or apples of the earth. Potatoes fo common in the inlands and on the continent of South America, have been planted with fuccefs in Louifiana. The continual ufe which all the nations of Canada made of a kind of tobacco which grows all over this country, has given occafion to fome travellers to fay that they fwallowed the fmoke of its which ferved them for food; but this has fince been difcovered to be a falfity, and to have no foundation, except from their having been obferved to remain a long time without eating. After once tafting our tobacco they can no longer endure their own, and it is very eafy to gratify them in this point, tobacco growing very well here, and it is even faid, that by making a proper choice of the foil, we might raife a moft excellent fort of it.

The lefier occupations of the women and what is their common employment in their cabbins, are the making of thread from the interior pellicles of the bark of a tree, called white-wood, which they manufacture nearly as we do hemp. The women too are their dyers: they work alfo at feveral things made of bark, and make fmall figures with the hair of the porcupine; they make fmall cups or other utenfils of wood, they paint and embroider broider deer-fkins, and they knit belts and garters with the wool of the buffalo.

As for the men they glory in their idlenefs, and actually fpend more than half their lives in doing nothing, from a perfuafion that daily labour degrades a man, and that it is only proper for women. The proper function of a man, fay they, is to fifh, hunt, and go to war. It is they, however, who are to make every thing neceffary for thefe three exercifes: thus the making of arms, nets, and all their hunting and fifhing equipage as well as their canoes with their rigging, their racquets, or fnow fhoes, the building and repairing of their cabbins, are the office of the men, who notwithftanding on thefe occafions often make ufe of the affiftance of the women. The Chriftians are a little more induftrious, but never work except by way of penance.

Thefe people, before we provided them with hatchets and other inftruments, were very much at a lofs in felling their trees, and making them fit for the ufes they intended them for. They burned them near the root, and in order to fplit and cut them into proper lengths, they made ufe of hatchets made of flint which never broke, but which required a prodigious time to fharpen. In order to fix them in a fhaft, they cut off the top of a young tree, making a flit in it, as if they were going to graft it, into which flit they inferted the head of the axe. The tree growing together again in length of time, held the head of the hatchet fo firm, that it was impofible for it to get loofe: they then cut the tree at the length they judged fufficient for the handle.

(127)

Their villages are generally of no regular form : moft of our ancient accounts have reprefented them of a round figure, and perhaps the authors of them faw none but fuch as were fo. In a word, imagine to yourfelf, Madam, a confufed heap of cabbins placed without any order or defign : fome of them like cart houfes, others like fo many tubs, built of bark, fupported by a few pofts, and fometimes coarfely plaittered on the outfide with clay; and, in fact, built with much lefs art, neatnefs, and folidity than thofe of the beavers. Thefe cabbins are from fifteen to twenty foot broad, and fometimes a hundred in length. In this cafe they have feveral fires, each fire ferving for a fpace of thirty feet.

When the floor happens not to be large enough for bedding for all the perfons in the family, the young folks have their beds on a kind of loft five or fix feet from the ground, and which runs the whole length of the cabbin; the houfhold furniture and provifions are placed above that on fhelfs laid crofsways next the roof. There is commonly before the entry, a fort of veftible or lobby where the youth fleep in the fummer-time, and which ferves as a repofitory for wood in the winter. The doors are only fo many pieces of bark, fufpended from the top like the ports of a fhip. Thefe cabbins have neither chimnies nor windows, only there is left in the middle of the roof an aperture by which part of the fmoke gets out, and which they are obliged to ftop up, when it rains or fnows, as alfo to put out the fire if they would not be blinded with fmoke.

The Indians are more fkilful in erecting their fortifications than in building their houfes; here

( 128 )

you fee villages furrounded with a good palifado, and with redoubts, and they are very careful to lay in a proper provifion of water and ftones. Thefe palifadoes are double, and even fometimes treble, and have generally battlements on the outward circumvallation. The piles of which they are compofed, are interwoven with branches of trees, without any void fpace between. This fort of fortification was fufficient to fuftain a long fiege whilf the Indians were ignorant of the ufe of firearms. Every village has a pretty large fquare, but thefe are feldom regular.

Formerly the Iroquois built their cabbins in a better manner than the other nations, and even than themfelves do at this day ; thefe were adorned with figures in relievo, but of very coarfe workmanfhip; and as almoft all their towns have been fince burned in different expeditions, they have not taken the trouble to rebuild them with their former magnificence. Notwithftanding, if thefe nations are fo little curious in procuring themfelves the conveniencies of life, in the places of their ordinary refidence, what may we think of their encampments on journeys, and in their wintering places? An ancient miffionary, who in order to oblige himfelf to learn the language of the Montagnais, would needs follow them in one of their winter huntings, gives a defcription of them, which I am going to give you almoft word for word.

Thefe Indians inhabit a country extremely rude and uncultivated, but not quite fo much fo, as that which they make choice of to go a hunting in. You muft travel a long way, before you arrive at it, and at the fame time, carry on your back every thing thing you may fland in need of for five or fix months together, and that through ways fometimes fo rugged and hideous, that it is even fcarce poffible to conceive how the very wild beafts themfelves are able to pafs them ; and were you not to have the forefight to provide yourfelf in pieces of bark, you mult te deflitute of all means of fheltering yourfelf from the rain and frow, during your journey. After arriving at the end of it, you find yourfelf a little better accommodated, that is to fay, you are not eternally expofed to all the injuries of the air and weather.

Every body falls to work for this purpofe, and the miffionaries themfelves, who in the beginning had no body to wait on them, and for whom the Indians had no manner of confideration, were no more fpared than the reft, and had not fo much as a cabbin allowed them to themfelves, but were obliged to take up their lodgings in the firft that made them welcome. Thefe cabbins among moft of the Algonquin nations are nearly in the form of our ice-houfes, round and terminating in a cone. Thefe had no other fupports than poles fixed in the fnow, and tied together by the ends, and which were covered with pieces of bark very ill joined, and fecured fo that the wind eafily found admittance on all fides.

The building of fuch a houfe employs half an hour at moft, fome branches of pine ferving as mattreffes, which are alfo the only beds in thofe palaces. There is one, and almiof the only conveniency which attends them, and that is that you may change them every day : they likewife collect the fnow quite round them, which forms a kind of parapet, which has its ufe, as it is impenetrable to

Vol. II.
K
the
the wind. Under inelter of this parapet, they fleep as tranquilly on thefe branches, covered with a wretched coverlet of kkin , as in the beft bed in the world; it is true the miffionaries had much difficulty to accuftom themfelves to this way of life, but fatigue and neceffity foon compelled them to it. The cafe is not entirely the fame with refpect to the fmoke, which almoft continually fills the upper part of the cabbin in fuch a manner, that one cannot ftand upright in it, without having one's head in a thick cloud of it. This is no manner of grievance to an Indian who is from his infancy accuftomed to fit or lie, all the time they are within doors; but it is really a fevere punifhment to a Frenchman, who cannot bear fuch a ftate of inaction.

Befides the wind, which as I have already remarked, enters on all fides, blows with fuch a piercing cold, that one fide freezes whilft you are choaked and roafted on the other. And often you cannot fee two or three feet from you, you weep almoft your eyes out, and fometimes you are obliged to lie flat on your face, and almoft with your mouth clofe to the ground, to fetch a little breath: the fhorteft way would be to go out, but for moft of the time this is impoffible; fometimes becaufe it fnows fo thick as to darken the day, and at other times on account of a wind fo pierceing that it almoft peels the fkin off one's face, and fplits the trees in the forefts. Notwithftanding a miffionary is obliged to fay his office, to celebrate mafs, and to perform all the other functions of his miniftry. To all thefe inconveniencies we muft add one more, which though it may appear very fmall at firft, is really very confiderable, and this this is being perfecuted by the dogs. The Indians have always a great number of thefe animals which follow them every where, and are remarkable for their fidelity; not very fawning indeed as they are never carefied by their mafters, but bold and good hunters: I have already faid that they are trained up betimes for the different chaces, for which they are intended; and 1 may add, that every Indian muft have a confiderable number of them, as many of them perifh by the teeth and horns of wild beafts, which they attack with a courage that nothing is capable of fhaking. Their mafters are at very little pains in feeding them, fo that they are obliged to live upon what they can catch, and as this goes no great way with them, it is no wonder they are very meagre and thin of flefh; befides they have very little hair, which renders them very fenfible to the cold.

( 131 )

In order to defend themfelves from it, if they cannot get near the fire, which it would be difficult for all of them to do, even were there nobody in the cabbin, they lye down on the firft perfon they meet, and one is often fuddenly awakened in the night, almoft choaked with two or three dogs upon him. Were they a little more difcreet in chufing their place, their company would not be extremely troublefome, and one might put up with them pretty well; but they lay themfelves down where they can, and it is in vain to drive them away for they return the inftant after. It is ftill worfe in the day time; as foon as any thing eatable appears, you cannot imagine what leaps they make to fnatch it out of your hands. Imagine to yourfelf the cafe of a poor miffionary crouching near the fire, to fay his breviary or read fome book, friving with the fmoke and expofed to the im-portunity of a dozen curs, who leap backwards and forwards over him, in order to fnatch fome morfel they may have feen. If he ftands in need of a little reft, he is farce able to find a corner where he can te free from this vexation. If any thing is brought him to eat, the dogs have that moment their fnout in the difh before he taftes it, and often whilft he is defending his portion againft thofe which attack him in front, another comes upon him from the rear, and either carries off half his allowance or juftes againft him, fo that the plate falls from his hands, and the fagamity is tumbled amongft the afhes.

It often happens that the evils I have been fpeaking of, are effaced by a much greater, and in comparifon of which, all the relt are as nothing; this is famine. The provifions they bring with them laft them no great while, and they reckon upon a fupply from their hunting, which does not always afford it. It is true Indians know how to endure hunger, with a patience equal to the little care they take to provide againft it ; but they are fometimes reduced to fuch extremities that they perifh under them. The miffionary, from whom I have drawn this detail, was obliged in his firft wintering to eat the fkins of eels and of elks, with which he had patched his caffock; after which he was forced to feed upon young branches, and the tendereft part of the bark of trees. He underwent however this fevere tryal, without the leaft detriment to his health, but every one is not - endowed with fo vigorous a conftitution.

The naftinefs of thefe cabbins alone, and that infection which is a neceffary confequence of it, are to any other but an Indian a real punifhment.

It is eafy to judge to what a height, both the one and the other muft arrive amongft perfons who never change their cloaths, till they fall to pieces of themfelves, and who take no care to keep them clean. In fummer they bathe themfelves every day, but immediately afterwards they rub themfelves with oil and greafe of a very rank fmell. In the winter they remain in their fat, and during all that feafon it is impofible to enter their cabbins without being poifoned with the ftench.

Not only every thing they eat is ill-feafoned and commonly very infipid, but there prevails in all their repafts an uncleanlinefs, which paffes all conception : what I have myfelf feen, as well as what I have been told of it, would ftrike you with horror. There are very few animals which do not feed cleaner, and after feeing what paffes amongtt thefe people in this refpect, there is no room to doubt, that the imagination contributes greatly to our repugnancies; and that many of thofe things which are really prejudicial to our health, are only fo by means of thofe very repugnancies, and our want of courage in furmounting them,

It muft however be granted, that things are fomewhat changed with refpect to all thefe points, fince our arrival in this counery; and I have even known fome to endeavour to procure themfelves conveniencies, with which they will probably very foon be fcarce able to difpenfe. Some of them alfo begin to ufe more precaution than formerly, to prevent their being unprovided, in cafe the hunting fhould happen to fail them; and amongft thofe who are fettled in the colony, there requires but a very fmall addition to furnifh out a tolerable fhare of the conveniencies of life. But what is K 3 to be feared is, that after arriving at this point they will be tempted to go a great deal farther, and fall into fuch a luxury as may render them ftill more miferable, than they now are in the bofom of the moft extreme indigence.

( 134 )

At leaft it will not be the fault of the miffionaries if they are expofed to this danger; perfuaded that it is morally impoffible to arrive at that golden mean, without afterwards deviating from it, they have peeferred Charing with thefe people whatever is moft difagreeable in their manner of living, rather than to open their eyes to the means of finding any remedy for it. Thus thofe very perfons who are every day witnefies of their fufferings, are at a lofs to conceive how they are able to fupport them, and the more fo as they are without the leaft relaxation, and as every feafon brings along with it fome peculiat evil.

As their villages are always fituated either near a wood, or on the banks of fome lake or river, and oftener between both, as foon as the weather becomes warm the mulkettos, together with a prodigious army of other gnats, raife a perfecution worfe than that of the fmoke, which you are often obliged to call to your affiftance ; there being fcarce any other remedy againft the bite of thefe infects, which fet the whole body on fire and fuffer you not to clofe your eyes. Add to this, the long and fatiguing journeys you are often forced to make with thefe barbarians, fometimes up to the middle in water, and fometimes to the knees in mire, through woods and among briars and thorns, with the danger of lofing one's eyes, in open fields where nothing defends you from the burning burning heat of the fun in fummer, and the piercing wind in winter.

If you travel in a canoe the confined poffure you are obliged to fit in, and the apprehenfion occafioned at your firft fetting out, by the extreme fragility of this vehicle; the inaction you mult of neceffity be in, the flownefs of your voyage, which is retarded by the leaft fhower of rain, or gale of wind ; the little fociety or converfation that can be had with peifons who know nothing, who never open their mouths whilt they are employed, who poifon you with their flench, and who fill you with vermin and naftinefs ; the caprice and rudenefs you muft put up with from them ; the infults to which you are expofed from a drunkard, or a perfon whom any unforfeen accident, a dream or the remembrance of any thing difagreeable puts into an ill humour; the avarice natural to thofe barbarians at the fight of any thing they covet, and what has coft feveral miffionaries their lives; and in cafe war happens to be declared between the nations, in whofe territory you are, the danger you are conftantly expofed to, either of being reduced to the moft wretched flavery, or of perifhing in the molt hideous torments: fuch, madam, is the life that has been led by the firft miffionaries efpecially: if for fome time paft it has been lefs rude in fome refpects, it has been attended with regard to the evangelical labourers with internal, and confequently more fenfible mortifications, which far fròm diminifhing in length of time grow in proportion to the increafe of the colony, and as the natives begin to have a freer correfpondence with all forts of perfons.

K 4 Lafly,

Laftly, that I may in a few words draw the portrait of thefe nations with a mien and appearance altogether favage, and with manners and cuftoms which favour of the groffeft barbarity, they enjoy all the advantages of fociety, without almoft any of thofe defects, which difturb the publick tranquillity amongt us. Whilft they appear entirely void of paffion, they commit in cold blood, and even fometimes from principle, the fame actions which the moft violent and ungovernable rage is capable of infpiring. Thofe very perfons who feemed to lead the moft wretched lives, were perhaps the only happy mortals on the face of the earth, before they were acquainted with thofe objects which feduce and pervert us: and even yet luxury has made no great ravages amongt them. We perceive in them a mixture of ferocity and gentlenefs, the paffions and appetites of beafts of prey, joined to a virtue which does honour to human nature. At firf view one would imagine them without any form of government, law or fubordination, and that living in an abfolute independance, they abardon themfelves to the conduet of blind chance, and to the wildeft caprice; they notwithftanding enjoy all the advantages which the beft resulated authority is capable of procuring, in the moft civilized nations. Born free and independant, they are ftruck with horror at whatever has the Thadow of defpotic power, and very rarely deviate from certain maxims and ufages founded in good fenfe alone, which holds the place of law, and fupplies in fome fort the want of legal authority. They have a natural repugnance to reftraint of every fort, but reafon alone is capable of retaining them in a kind of fubordination, not the lefs effectual towards the end propofed for being entirely voluntary.

Any perfon who has once infinuated himfelf in: to a confiderable fhare of their efteem, will find them fufficiently docile and ready to do any thing he defires; but it is no eafy matter to gain their efteem to fuch a pitch. This they give to merit only, and that to a fuperior degree of it, of which they are full as good judges as thofe amongft us, who pique themfelves moft on their difcernment. They form their notions of this by the phyfiognomy, and there is not perhaps in the world a fet of men who are better judges this way: this is owing to their having none of thofe prejudices in favour of any perfon which millead us, and that by ftudying nature alone they know her perfectly well. As they are neither flaves to ambition nor intereft, as it is thefe two pafions only which have weakened in us the fentiments of humanity, which the author of nature has engraven in our hearts, the difference of conditions is unneceffary for the maintenance of fociety amongtt them.

Thus Madam we never, or at leaft very feldom, meet with thofe haughty minds, which filled with a notion of their own grandeur and merit, imagine themfelves almoft a fpecies apart; who difdain the reft of mankind whofe love and corfidence they therefore never obtain; who never converfe with their equals, becaufe the jealoufy which prevails amongft the great, will not permit them to cultivate a very near acquaintance; who know not themfelves becaufe they never fudy themfelves, but are conftantly blown up with felf applaufe; and laftly, who never once reflect, that in order to acquire the affections of men, they muft firft ftoop, and in fome fort, condefcend to be their equals; fo that with all this pretended fuperiority of undertanding, which they look upon as the peculiar right of the eminent ftations they poffefs, moft of them grovel in a proud and incurable ignorance, of what is really worth knowing, and confequently never tafte the true and genuine fweets of life. In this country all men are equal, manhood being the quality moft efteemed amongft them, without any diftinction from birth ; without any perogative of rank capable of doing prejudice to the rights of private perfons; without any preeminence from merit which begets pride, and which makes others too fenfible of their own inferiority. And though there is perhaps lefs delicacy of fentiment in the Indians than amongft us, there is however abundantly more probity with infinitely lefs ceremony, or equivocal compliments.

Religion alone is capable of perfecting the good qualities and natural difpofitions of thefe people, and of correcting what is wrong in them: this is common to them with others, but what is peculiar to them is, that they bring fewer obftacles to this improvement, after they have once begun to believe, which muft ever be the work of fpecial grace. It is likewife true, that in order fully to eftablifh the empire of religion over them, we muft fhew them the practice of it in all its purity in its profeffors: they are extremely fufceptible of the fcandal given by bad chriftians, and fuch are all thofe who are newly inftructed in the principles of chriftian morality.

You will perhaps afk me, Madam, whether they have any religion? To this I anfwer, that though we cannot abfolutely affirm that they are without any, we muft however confefs, that it is very difficult to define what religion this is. I fhall entertain you more at large on this article with my firft leifure; for though I have not a vaft deal to do in this place, yet I am often interrupted in fuch manner, that I cannot promife on having two hours in a day to myfelf. This letter as well as moft of the preceeding ones, will fhew you that I do not finifh them at one fitting. I fhall content myfelf at prefent with obferving, in order to compleat the portrait of Indians, that even in their moft indifferent actions, we may difcover traces of the primitive religion, but which efcape thofe who do not view them with fufficient attention, thefe being ftill more effaced by the want of inftruction, than changed by the mixture of fuperftitious worfhip, and by fabulous traditions.

$$
\mathrm{Iam}, & \mathrm{c}
$$

LETTER

(14i)

L E T T ER XXIV.

Of the Religion and Traditions of the Indians of Canada.

Fort at the River St. Jofeph, Sept. 8, 172 I.
Madam,

THIS letter will in all likelyhood be a very long one, unlefs fome unforefeen hindrance fhould oblige me to put off to fome other opportunity; what I have been able to collect, relating to the belief, traditions and religion of our Indians.
"Nothing is more certain than that the Indians of this continent, have an idea of a fupreme Being, though nothing at the fame time can be more obfcure. They all in general agree in looking upon him as the firft fpirit, and the governor and creator of the world, but when you prefs them a little clofe on this article, in order to know what they underfand by the fovereign fpirit, you find no more than a tiffue of abfurd imaginations, of fables fo ill contrived, of fyftems fo ill digefted and fo wild, that it is impoffible to give any regular or juft account of them. It is pretended that the Sioux approach much nearer than the other other Indians, towards a juft conception of this firft principle, but the little commerce we have hitherto had with them, does not permit me to be fufficiently informed of their traditions, to enable me to fpeak of them with any degree of certainty.

Almoft all the nations of the Alqonquin language, give this fovereign Being the appellation of the great Hare ; fome again call him Michabou, and others Atahocan. Moft of them hold the opinion that he was born upon the waters, together with his whole court, entirely compofed of four footed animals like himfelf; that he formed the earth of a grain of fand, which he took from the bottom of the ocean, and that he created man of the bodies of the dead animals. There are likewife fome who mention a god of the waters, who oppofed the defigns of the great Hare, or at leaft refufed to be affifting to him. This god is according to fome, the great Tyger, obut it mult be obferved, that the true tyger is not to be found in Canada; thus this tradition is probably of foreign extraction. Laftly, they have a third god called Matcomek, whom they invoke in the winter feafon, and concerning whom, I have learned nothing particular.

The Arefkoui of the Hurons, and the Agrefkouê of the Iroquois, is in the opinion of thefe nations, the Sovereign Being and the god of war. Thefe Indians do not give the fame original to mankind with the Alqonquins; they do not fo much as afcend fo high as the firft creation. According to them there were in the beginning fix men in the world, and if you afk them who placed them there, they anfwer you, they dont know.

They add, that one of thefe men afcended into heaven in queft of a woman, called Atahentfic, of whom he had carnal knowledge, and who foon afterwards proved with child: that the mafter of heaven perceiving it, threw her headlong from the height of the Empyrean, and that fhe was received on the back of a tortoife : that fhe was afterwards brought to bed of two children, one of which killed the other.

There is no more faid either of the five men, or even of the hufband of Atahentfic, who according to fome, had only one daughter, who was the mother of Thaouitfaran and Joufkeka. This latter who was the eldeft, killed his brother, and in a little time after his grand-mother refigned in his favour the government of the world. They fay likewife, that Atahentfic is the fame with the moon, and that Joufkeka was the fun. There is as you fee, Madam, very little connexion in all this, the fun being often taken for Arefkoui, in as much as he is the great genius; but is there lefs contradiction in the theology of the Egyptians and Grecians, who are the firft fages of pagan antiquity? The reafon is, that it is effential to falfehood to contradict itfelf, and to have no folid foundation.

The gods of the Indians have bodies, and live much in the fame manner with us, but without any of thofe inconveniencies to which we are fubject. The word fpirit amongft them, fignifies only a being of a more excellent nature than others. They have no words to exprefs what paffes the bounds of their own underftanding, their conceptions being extremely limited, with refpect to whatever is not the object of their fenfes, or to any thing befides the common occurrences of life. They however afcribe to thofe imaginary beings, a kind of immenfity and omniprefence, for in what $=$ ever place they are, they invoke them, fpeak to them, believe they hear what is faid to them, and act in confequence. To all the queftions you pus to thefe barbarians, in order to obtain a farther account of their belief, they anfwer that this is all they have been taught or know of the matter; nay, there are only a few old men who have been initiated in their myfteries who know fo much.

( 144 )

According to the Iroquois, the pofterity of Joufkeka did not go beyond the third generation. There came on a deluge in which not a foul was faved, fo that in order to repeople the earth it was neceffary to change beafts into men. This notion Madam, of an univerfal deluge is very general amongtt the Americans; but there is fcarce any room to doubt, that there has been another much more recent and peculiar to America. I fhould never have done, were I to relate all that the Indians tell us with refpect to the hiftory of their principal divinities, and the origin of the world; but befides the firft being, or the great firit, and the other Gods who are often confounded with them, there is likewife an infinite number of genii or inferior fpirits, both good and evil, who have each their peculiar form of worfhip.

The Iroquois place Atahentfic at the head of thefe latter, and make Jouikeka the chief of the former; they even fometimes confound him with the god, who drove his grandmother out of heaven, for fuffering herfelf to be feduced by a mortal. They never addrefs themfelves to the evil genii, except to beg of them to do them no hurt, hurt, but they fuppofe that the others are placed as fo many guardians of mankind, and that every perfon has his own tutelary. In the Huron language thefe are called Okkis, and in the Algonquin Manitous: it is to them they have recourfe in all perils and undertakings, as alfo when they would obtain fome extraordinary favour; there is nothing but what they may think they may beg of them, let it be ever fo unreafonable or contrary to good morals. This protection however is not acquired at the birth of the perfon, he mult firft be expert at the management of the bow and arrow, before he can merit this favour, and much preparation mult be ufed before he can receive it, it being looked upon as the moft important affair in their whole lives: the principal circumitances of it are thefe.
( 145 )

They begin with blacking the child's face; afterwards they make him faft for eight days together, without giving him a morfel of any thing to eat, and the tutelary genius muft appear to him in a dream within this fpace of time. Now the empty brain of a poor child juft entering into the ftate of adolefcence, cannot fail of furnifhing him with dreams, which they take great care to caufe him repeat every morning. The faft however often ends before the lawful time; there being few children who have ftrength enough to carry it fo far ; but this occafions no difficulty, the conveniency of difpenfations being fully known here as it is every where elfe. Whatever thing the child happens to dream of, is always fuppofed to be the tutelary genius, or rather this thing is held as a fymbol, or figure, under which the genius maniferts himfelf; but it happens to the Indians as it does to every other people, who have deviated from the primiVol. II.

L
tive
tive religion, that is, to hold faft by the figure whilft they lofe fight of the reality.

Notwithltanding thefe fymbols fignify nothing of themfelves, fometimes it is the head of a bird, at other times the foot of fome animal, or perhaps a bit of wood; in a word, the vileft and moft common thing imaginable. This is preferved however with as much care, as the Dii Penates, or houfhold gods were amongt the ancients. There is even nothing in all nature, if we believe the ln dians, which has not its genius, of which there are fome of all ranks, but with different powers. When they are at a lofs to conceive any thing, they attribute it to a fuperior genius, and their manner of exprefling themfelves then is, This is a spirit. This is faid with greater juftice of them, who have any fingular talent, or who have performed any extraordinary action, Thefe are fpirits, that is they have a tutelary genius of an ord.r fuperior to the common.

Some of them, and efpecially their jugglers, endeavour to perfuade the multitude, that they are tranfported into extafies. This folly has been of all ages and amongft ail nations, and is the parent of all falfe religions; the vanity natural to mankind, not being able to devife any more efficacious means of governing the weak andfimple, and the multitude at laft carried along with them, thofe who valued themfelves the moft on the fuperiority of their underttandings. The American impoftors, though they owe to themfelves only all their addrefs in this point, draw all the advanthges from it to which they afpire. The jugglers never fail to publifh that their' genii give them great infight into the remoteft tranfactions, and the moft diftant futurity in their pretended ex-tafies; and as chance alone, if we would not afcribe fome fhare of it to the devil, caufes them to divine or conjecture fome times pretty right, they acquire by this means great credit, and are believed to be genii of the firft order.

As foon as it has been declared to a child what he is thence forward to regard as his protecting genius, they inftruct him with great care in the obligation he owes him, to honour him, to follow the council he fhall receive from him in fleep, to merit his favour, to place in him his whole confidence, and to dread the effect of his difpleafure fhould he neglect to acquit himfelf of his duty to him. This folemnity ends with a feaft, and the cuftom is likewife to prick on the body of the child the figure of his OKKI, or MANITOU. It would feem that fo folemn an engagement, the mark of which can never be effaced, ought to be inviolable; a very fmall matter is however fufficient to break it.

The Indians are not eafily brought to confefs themfelves in the wrong, even to their gods themfelves, and make no manner of difficulty in juftifying themfelves at their expence: thus whenever they are under the neceffity either of condemning themfelves or their tutelar, the blame is always thrown upon the latter, and they apply to another without any ceremony, only obferving the fame rights as to the former: The women have alfo their Manitous, or Okkis, but are far from paying them the fame refpect with the men, perhaps from their giving them lefs employment.

To all thefe genii are offered different forts of offerings, or if you will facrifices. They throw into the rivers and lakes tobacco or birds, which have been ftrangled, in order to render the god of the waters propitious. In honour of the fun, and fometimes even of inferior firits, they throw into the fire all forts of ufeful things, and fuch as they believe they owe to them. This is fometimes done out of getitude, but oftner from interefted views, thefe people not being fufceptible of any fentiments of affection towards their divinities. They obferve alfo on fome occafions a fort of libations, and all this accompanied with invocations, wrapt up in myllerious terms, which they have never been able to explain to Europeans, whether it be that thefe at bottom have no fignification at all, or that the fenfe has been loft, whilift the words by which the tradition has been tranfmitted have been preierved; and perhaps too, they may be willing to make a myftery of it. We alfo meet with collars of porcelain, tobacco, maize, peafe, and whole animals, efpecially dogs, on the fides of difficult or dangerous roads on rocks, or near cataracts, which are fo many offerings to the genii who prefide in thefe places. I formerly faid that the dog was the victim moft commonly offered to them; thefe are hung up, and even fometimes alive by the hind feet, and fuffered to die mad. The war feaft, which always confifts of dogs, may alfo pafs for a facrifice. Laftly, they render nearly the fame honours to the evil genii as to thofe which pafs for propitious, when they have any reafon to dread their malice. If

L 2 have

Thus Madam, amongft nations who were pretended to have no idea of religion or of a deity, every thing on the contrary appears to be an object of religious worfhip, or leaft to have fome relation to it. Some have imagined that their fafts had no other end, than to accuftom them to fupport hunger, and I will allow that this motive might be fome part of the reafon of this ufage; thut every circumftance with which they are accompanied, proves that religion has the greateft fhare in it ; where it only their extreme attention in obferving, as I have already taken notice, what dreams they have during that time, it being certain that fuch dreams are looked upon as true oracles and warnings from heaven.

It is fill lefs doubtful, that their vows are pure acts of religion, the ulage being abfolutely the fame in this refpect as with us. For example, when they happen to be without provifions, as often falls out in their voyages and huntings, they ptomife their genii to prefent in honour of them, a portion of the firft beaft they fhall afterwards kill to fome chief, and not to touch a morfel of it till they fhall have acquitted themfelves of their promife. Should this happen to be impoffible by reafon of the great diftance of this chief, they burn the part allotted for him, and thus make it a kind of facrifice.

Formerly the Indians in the neighbourhood of Acadia, had in their country near the fea-fhore, a tree extremely ancient, of which they relate many wonders, and which was always loaden with offerings. After the fea had laid open its whole root, it ftill fupported itfelf a long time almof in the air, againft the violence of the winds and waves, which confirmed thofe Indians in the notion, that this tree mult be the abode of fome powerful fpirit, nor was its fall even capable of undeceiving them, fo that as long as the fmalleft part of its branches appeared above water, they paid it the fame honours as whilft it flood.

$$
\mathrm{L}_{3} \text { Moft }
$$

Moft of their feftivals fongs and dances alfo appeared to me to have their origin in religion, and to preferve feveral traces of it ; but one muft be very fharp-fighted, or rather one muft have a very ftrong imagination to perceive what certain travellers pretend to have difcovered in them. I have known fome perfons, who not being able to get it out of their heads, that our Indians are defcended from the ancient Hebrews, find in every thing a ftrong refemblance between thefe barbarians and the people of God. It is true there are fome cuftoms which have fome appearance of this, fuch as not to make ufe of knives in certain repafts, and not to break the bones of the beafts eaten in them; and fuch alfo is the feparation of the women from their hufbands, during certain infirmities of the fex. And fome have even heard, or at leaft have thought they heard them pronounce the word Allelujah in fome of their fongs: but who would ever believe their boring their ears and noftrils, to be in obedience to the law of circumcifion? And befides who does not know that the rite of circumcifion, is more ancient than the law which ordained the obfervation of it to Abraham and his pofterity? The feaft which is made on their return from hunting, and in which nothing muft be left, has likewife been taken for a k ind of Holocauft, or for a relique of the Jewihh paffover, and the rather, fay they, becaufe when any perfon was not able to get the better of his own portion, he was at liberty to make ufe of the affitance of his neighbours, as was the practice amongft the people of God, when one family were not able to eat the whole Pafchal lamb.

An ancient miffionary, who lived long amongtt the Outaways, writes, that amongft thefe Indians an old man does the office of a prieft on the feftivals I have been juft mentioning, that he begins by returning thanks to the genii for the fuccefs of the hunting, and that afterwards another perfon takes a roll of tobacco, breaks it in two and throws it into the fire. What is certain is, that thofe who have cited them as a proof of the poffibility of atheifm, properly fo called, were not acquainted with them. It is true they never difcourfe about religion, and that their extreme indolence and indifference on this point, has always been the greateft obftacle to their converfion to Chriftianity, but the fmalleft acquaintance with them is fufficient to confute thofe, who fay they have no idea of a deity. Indolence is their predominant paffion; it even appears in their mof important affairs, but in fpite of this defect, and even in fpite of that Spirit of independance in which they are brought up, there is no nation in the world who pay a more flavilh refpeet to the Deity, of whom their ideas are very confufed, fo that they never attribute any thing to chance, and derive an omen from every thing that happens, which is according to them, as I have already remarked, a declaration of the will of heaven.

I have read in fome memoirs, that among feveral nations on this continent, there were formerly young women who lived feparate from all commerce with men, and who never married. I am neither able to vouch nor contradict this affertion. Virginity is in itfelf fo perfect a itate, that we ought not to be furprized it fhould have been refpected in all countries in the world; but our moft ancient miffionaries never make mention, at leaft as far as I know of thefe veftals, though feveral of them agree in the efteem in which celibacy was L. 4 held $h_{\text {eld }}$ in fome countries. I even find that amongt ${ }^{\text {the }}$ Hurons and Iroquois, there were not long fince reclufes, who obferved continence, and they hew certain very falutary plants which have no virtue, according to the Indians, except they are employed by virgin hands.

The beft eftablifhed opinion amongft our Americans is, that of the immortality of the foul. They do not however believe it to be purely fpiritual more than their genii, and to tell truth, are incapable of giving any diftinct definition of either. If you afk them what they think of their fouls, they anfwer, that they are like fo many fhadows and living images of the body, and it is by a confequence of this principle, that they believe every thing in the univerfe to be animated. Thus it is only by tradition they have received this notion of the immortality of the foul. And in the different expreffions they make ufe of, in explaining themfelves on this fubject, they frequently confound the foul with its faculties, and thefe again with their operations, though they very well know how to diftinguifh them, when they have a mind to fpeak with accuracy.

They maintain, likewife, that the foul when feparated from the body, preferves the fame inclinations and paffions it had in its former ftate, and this is the reafon why they bury along with the dead, the things they imagine they may ftand in need of. They are even perfuaded, that it remains hovering about the carcafe until the feftival of the dead, of which I fhall give you an account by and by; and that afterwards it goes into the country of fouls, where, according to fome, it is transformed into a tortoife.

There

There are others who acknowledge two fouls in men; to the one, they attribute every thing I have been jult now fpeaking of, and pretend that the other never quits the body, unlefs it is to pafs into fome other, which however happens only, fay they, to the fouls of little children, which having enjoyed but a Chort term of life, obtain leave to begin a new one. It is for this reafon that they bury children by the high-way fides, that the women who pafs that way may collect their fouls. Now thefe fouls which are fuch faithful companions to their bodies muft be fed, and it is in order to difcharge this duty, that eatables are laid upon their tombs; but this is of fhort continuance, fo that the fouls muft begin in time to learn to faft. They are fometimes hard enough put to it to fubfift the living, without the additional charge of feeding the dead.

One thing with refpect to which the Indians are never forgetful, let them be in ever fo great an extremity, whereas amongft us the living are enriched by the fpoils of the dead; the Indians on the contrary, not only carry along with them to the grave every thing that belonged to them, but alfo receive prefents of their relations and friends befides. For this reafon they were extremely fcandalized, on feeing the French open the fepulchers in order to ftrip the dead of their robes of beaver fkins. Tombs are held fo facred in this country, that to violate them is the greateft hoftility that can be committed againft a nation, and the ftrongeft proof that you fet them at defiance.

I have already faid, that the fouls, when the time of leaving their bodies forever is come, go into a region which is allotted for their everlafting abode.

(. 54 )

This country fay the Indians, lies very far to the weftward fo that the fouls are feveral months in arriving at it. They have even vaft difficulties to furmount, and are expofed to prodigious dangers by the way. They above all things talk mich of a river they have to pafs, and on which many have been fhipwrecked; of a dog from whom they have much ado to defend themelves, of a place of torment where they expiate their fins; of another, where the fouls of thofe prifoners of war who have been burned are tormented, and where they arrive as late as poffible.

This notion is the reafon why after the death of thefe wretches, they take great care to vifit every place near their cabbins, friking inceffantly with rods and raifing the moft hideous cries, in order to drive the fouls to a diftance, and to keep them from lurking about their cabbins, in order to revenge the torments they have made them undergo. The Iroquois fay, that Atahenftic has her common refidence in this tartarus, and that her fole occupation is the feducing of fouls to their deftruction; but that Joufkeka omits nothing to fecure them againft the wicked defigns of his grandmother. Amongft the fabulous fiories of what paffes in the lower regions, and which refemble fo much thofe in Homer and Virgil, there is one which feems to have been copied from the fable of Orpheus and Euridice, in which there hardly wants any thing, except to change the names.

Moreover, Madam, this happinefs, which the Indians hope to enjoy in their imaginary Elyfium, is not believed to be the recompenfe of virtue only; to have been a good hunter, brave in war, fortunate in all one's enterprifes, to have killed and burned a great number of enemies, are the fole merits which entitle them to this paradife, the whole felicity of which confifts in an inexhauftible plenty of game and fifhes, an everlatting fpring, a vaft abundance of all things without being obliged to work, and a full fatisfaction of all their fenfual appetites. Thefe are likewife the only bleffings they afk of their gods in their life-time. All their fongs, which are originally their prayers, have no other theme befides the goods of this life, there being not the leaft mention any more than in their vows of an hereafter; they are certain of being happy in the other world in proportion to their happinefs in this.

The fouls of beafts have alfo a place in the infernal regions, and are according to the Indians immortal, as well as ours; they even acknowledge in them a kind of reafon, and not only every fpecies, but every individual animal, if we may believe them, has its tutelary genius. In a word they hold no difference between us, and the brutes but in degree only. Man, fay they, is king of the animals, who have all of them the fame faculties, but that man poffeffes them in a very fuperior degree. They hold likewife that in hell there are models of fouls of all kinds, but they give themfelves very little trouble in explaining this notion, and in general concern themfelves very little with matters of pure fecculation: have the fageft philofophers of Pagan antiquity who have been at fo much pains to explain them, been much more fuccelsful than they? It is impoffible to walk fafely amidft thefe abfurdities, but by the torch of faith.

There

There is nothing in which thefe barbarians carry their fupertition to a more extravagant length, than in what regards dreams; but they vary greatly in their manner of explaining themfelves on this point. Sometimes it is the reafonable foul which ranges abroad, whillt the fenfitive foul continues to animate the body. Sometimes it is the familiar genius, who gives falutary council with refpect to what is going to happen. Sometimes it is a vifit made by the foul of the object of which he dreams. But in whatever manner the dream is conceived, it is always looked upon as a thing facred, and as the moft ordinary way in which the gods make known their will to men.

Filled with this idea, they cannot conceive how we flould pay no regard to them. For the moft part they look upon them either as a defire of the foul infpired by fome genius, or an order from him; and in confequence of this principle, they hold it a religious duty to obey them; and an Indian having dreamed of having a finger cut off, had it really cut off as foon as he awoke, after having prepared himfelf for this important action by a feaft. Another having dreamed of being prifoner and in the hands of his enemies, was much at a lofs what to do; he confulted the jugglers, and by their advice, caufed himfelf to be tied to a poft and burnt in feveral parts of the body.

There are happy and unhappy dreams. For inftance, to dream of feeing a great number of elks is, fay they, a fign of life; but to dream of feeing bears, denotes that the party is foon to die. I have already faid, that we muft except thofe times in which they prepare themfelves for the hunting of thefe animals. But in order to fhew you, Madam, to what a length thefe barbarians carry their extravagance, with regard to dreams, I will relate to you a fact attefted by two irreproachable perfons who were eye witneffes to it.

Two miffionaries were travelling in the company of fome Indians, and one night as their guides were in a profound fleep, one of them awaked fuddenly quite out of breath, making efforts to cry out, and beating himfelf as if he had been poffeffed with fome devil. The noife he made foon waked every body : they at firf thought the man mad; they feized him and tried every means to bring him to himfelf, but all to no purpofe: his fury continued to encreafe and as they were no longer able to hold him, they hid all the arms for fear of the worft. ' Some of them afterwards bethought themfelves of preparing for him a beverage made of certain herbs of great virtue; but when they were leaft aware the patient leaped into the river.

He was immediately drawn out, and though he confeffed he was cold, he refufed to come near a good fire that had been juft lighted: he fat down at the foot of a tree, and as he appeared more compofed, they brought him the draught they had prepared for him. It is to this child, faid he, you muft give it, pointing to a bears fkin ftuffed with ftraw; he was obeyed, and the whole of the beverage was poured down the throat of the animal. They then afked what had been the matter with him? I dreamed, faid he, that a racoon had got into my belly. They all burft out a laughing, but there was a neceffity of curing his diftempered imagination, which was done in this manner.

They

They all fell to counterfeit the madman, crying with all their might, that they had animals in their bellies, but added, that they were unwilling to throw themfelves into the river in order to diflodge them, on account of the cold; and that they thought fweating a much better way. Our hypocondriac found this propofal excellent; a fove was immediately erected, into which they atl entered with loud cries, every one endeavouring to counterfeit the cry of the animal he pretended to have in his belly, one a goofe, another a duck, a third a buftard, and a fourth a frog; the dreamer alfo counterfeited the cry of a racoon. But what is really ridiculous is, that all the reft beat meafure, ftriking with all their might upon his fhoulders, with defign to fatigue him, and caufe him to fall afleep. To any other than an Indian, he had what was fufficient to hinder him from clofing his eyes for feveral days; they however fucceeded in what they intended. The patient flept long, and at his waking found himfelf perfectly cured, being neither fenfible of the fweating which muft have exhaufted him, nor of the blows and bruifes which he had received, and having loft the remembrance even of the very dream which had coft him fo dear.

But it is not only he who dreams that is to fatisfy the obligations, he believes he is laid under by the dream : it would be a crime in any perfon to refufe him, what he has defired in his dream, and you may very well judge, Madam, with what confequences this is likely to be attended. But as the Indians are not much governed by felf-intereft, this principle is attended with lefs abufe than it would be any where elfe; and befides, every one may ufe it in his turn. If the thing defired happen to be of fuch a nature as not to be capable of being furnifhed by a private perfon, the public take the obligation of it upon themfelves, and even fhould they be obliged to go in queft of it five hundred leagues, it mult be found, coft what it will; and when it has once been obtained, it is inconceivable with what care it is preferved. If it happen to be any inanimate thing, they are more at eafe; but if an animal, its death occafions a furprizing anxiety.

The affair becomes ftill more ferious, fhould any one take it into his head to dream that he cuts the throat of another, for he will certainly accomplifh it if he can; but woe to him, in his turn, fhould a third perfon dream that he revenges the dead. They may, however, eafily extricate themfelves from fuch difficulties, provided they have prefence of mind immediately to oppofe to fuch a dream another which contradicts it. "I plainly fee", fays the firft dreamer, in that cafe, " that your " fpirit is ftronger than mine, fo let us mention " it no more." They are not all, however, fo eafily brought to relinquifh their purpofe; but there are few who may not be fatisfied, or in other words, have their genius appeafed by fome fmall prefent.

I do not know whether religion has any fhare in what is commonly called the fefival of dreams, to which the Iroquois and fome others have with more propriety, given the appellation of the turning of the bead. This is a fort of Bacchanalian ceremony which commonly lafts fifteen days, and is celebrated towards the end of winter. There is no fpecies of folly which is not then committed; every one running from cabbin to cabbin, difguifed in a thoufand different hapes, all of them equally ridiculous ridiculous, breaking and deftroying every thing, no one daring to oppofe them. Whoever would avoid fuch a confufion, and not be expofed to all the outrages he mult fuffer on this occafion, ought to take care to abfent himfelf. The moment any of thofe Bacchanalians meet with any one he gives him his dream to interpret, which if he does, it is certainly at his own coft, as he is obliged to procure whatever he has dreamed of. The feftival ended, every thing is reftored, a great fealt is made, when they are folly intent on repairing the damages during the mafquerade, which are moft commonly far from being inconfiderable; for this is likewife one of thofe opportunities which are waited for in filence, in order to give a hearty drubbing to thofe, from whom they imagine they have received any affront: but the feaft being over, every thing is to be forgotten.

I find a defcription of onte of thefe feftivals in the journal of a miffionary, who was, contrary to his inclination, fpectator of one of them at Onnontague. This was proclaimed 22d of February, the proclamation being made by the elders, with as much formality as if it had been an affair of State. This was fcarce over, when men, women, and children were running about almoft entirely naked, although it was then intollerably cold. At firft they vifited every cabbin, then they wandered about for fome time on all fides, without knowing whither they went, or what they would be at; one would have taken them for fo many drunken perfons or madmen, whom fome fudden tranfport of fury had driven befides themfelves.

Many were fatisfied with having indulged them ${ }^{3}$ felves in this piece of folly, and appeared no more. But the reft refolved to make ufe of the privilege of the feftival, during which they are reputed as perfons out of their fenfes, and confequently as not accountable for what they do, and accordingly embrace fuch opportunity of revenging their private quarrels, which on this occafion they did moft effectually. Upon fome they threw water by whole pail-fulls, which freezing immediately pierced with cold thofe upon whom it fell. On others they threw hot afhes, or all manner of filth; fome threw fire-brands or burning coals at the head of the firft perfon they met; others deftroyed every thing in the cabbins, fell upon thofe to whom they bore any grudge or fpite, and loaded them with blows. In order to be delivered from this perfecution, it was neceffary to guefs their dreams, of which it was frequently impoffible to have any manner of conception.

The miffionary and his companion were often on the point of being more than bare fpectators of this extravagance : one of thofe madmen went into a cabbin where they had feen them take refuge at the beginning of the fray. Luckily for them they had juft left it, otherwife there is reafon to believe, this furious fellow would have done them a mifchief. Difconcerted by their retreat, he cried out that he wanted fomebody to guefs his dream, and that he would be fatisfied on the fpot: Some delay being made he faid, I will kill a Frenchman; immediately the owner of the cabbin threw him a French coat, which he ran through in feveral places.

Vol. II.
M
The

( 162 )

Then the perfon who had thrown him the coat, falling in his turn into a fury, cried out that he would revenge the French, and that he would reduce the whole village to afhes: He began by fetting fire to his own cabbin in which this fcene had paffed, and every body having left it, he fhut himfelf up in it. The fire which was kindled in feveral places had not as yet broke out, when one of the miffionaries appeared and was going to enter it, when being told what had happened, and fearing what might happen to his hoft, he broke open the door, laid hold on the Indian, turned him out, extinguifhed the fire, and fhut himfelf up in the cabbin. His hoft in the mean time ran through the whole village, crying out that he would fet it on fire: a dog was then thrown to him, in hopes that he would fatiate his rage upon this animal, but he faid, this was ftill not fufficient to repair the affront that had been done him, by killing a Frenchman in his cabbin; upon which they threw him a fecond which he cut in pieces, and his tranfport immediately ceared.

This man had a brother, who had a mind to play his part likewife. He drefted himfelf nearly in the fame manner as the fatyrs are reprefented, being covered all over from head to foot with the leaves of maize : he caufed equip two women like megæras, their faces being blacked, their hair difheveled, a wolf's fkin over their body, and a ftake in their hands. Thus efcorted he went through all the cabbins, crying out and howling with all his might; he clambered up their roofs, where he played a thoufand tricks, with as much dexterity as the moft experienced rope-dancer could have done, then he fent forth dreadful cries, as if fome great nisfortune had befallen him; afterwards he came down, and and walked gravely along, preceded by his two bacchanalians, who being feized with the fame phrenzy in their turn, overthrew every thing they met with in their way. Thefe were fcarce recovered from this madnefs or wearied with their part, when another woman fucceeded in their place, entered the cabbin, in which were the two jefuits, armed with a mufket, fhe had juft got by propounding a dream to be explained, and fung the war fong making a thoufand imprecations if fhe did not make fome prifoners.

A warrior followed clofe after this Amazon, a bow and arrow in one hand, and in the other a bayonet. After he had made his throat fore with crying, he fuddenly fell upon a woman who was not in the leaft aware of it, held his bayonet to her throat, feized her by the hair, cut off a handful of it, and fo went off. Next appeared a juggler holding in his hand a ftaff adorned with feathers, by means of which he boafted that he could divine the moft fecret and hidden tranfactions. An Indian accompanied bearing a vafe filled with I know not what liquor, of which he gave him to drink from time to time; the quack had no fooner put it to his lips than he thruft it from him again, blowing on his hands and ftaff, and at each time divining all fuch riddles as were propofed to him.

Two women came afterwards, giving it to be underftood, that they wanted fomething. One of them immediately fpread on the ground a mattrefs, by which it was divined that fhe wanted fome fifh, which were accordingly given her. The other carried a mattock in her hand, by which they conceived fhe wanted a field to labour, fhe was therefore led without the village, and-immediately had her requett granted her. A chief had dreamed, as he faid, of feeing two human hearts: the dream could not be explained which caufed univerfal anxiety; this perfon made a great deal of noife about it, fo that the feaft was prolonged for a day on this account: but all was to no purpofe, fo that he was obliged to be fatisfied. 'Sometimes were feen companies of armed men, who feemed as if they were going to engage; fometimes troops of dancers, playing all forts of farces. This madnefs lafted four days, and it appeared that the ufual time of it had been abridged, in confideration of the two jefuits; they, however, committed full as many dirorders as they ufed to do in fifteen. They had moreover this further regard for the miffionaries, as not to difturb them in the exercife of their functions, nor to hinder the Chriftians from performing their religious duties. But I have already faid enough on this article; I am now fealing my letter, in order to give it to a traveller, who fets out for the colony, and am, &cc.

$$
(164)
$$

LETTER XXV.

Sequel of the Traditions of the Indians.

Fort on the River St. Fofeph, September 14, 172 I.

Madam,

$T^{\mathrm{T}}$T is now three days fince I fet out from this place for Chicagou, by coafting along the fouth fhore of lake Michigan ; but we found the lake fo ftormy that we refolved to return hither and to feek out fome other wiay to reach Louifiana. Our departure is fixed on the 16 th , and I am going to make ufe of this delay of two days to continue my account of the cuftoms and traditions of our Americans.

The Indians, with refpect to what I have been fpeaking of in my laft letter, acknowledge only the power of the good genii, and none but wizards and fuch as have recourfe to witchcraft, are held to have any commerce with evil fpirits; and it is the women chiefly who exercife this deteftable profeffion. Their profeffed jugglers not only do not exM
ercife
ercife it openly, but it is even a particular ftudy with them, to be able to ftudy witchcraft, and to hinder its pernicious effects. There is nothing at bottom in all I have been told on this head but meer quackery; fometimes they extract the venom of ferpents, or make ufe of herbs gathered at certain times, while they are pronouncing certain words, or of animals which are firft ftrangled, and fome parts of which are afterwards thrown into the fire

Amongt the Illinois and almoft all the other nations, they make fmall figures to reprefent thofe whofe days they have a mind to fhorten, and which they ftab to the heart. At other times they take a flone, and by means of certain invocations, they pretend to form fuch another in the heart of their enemy. I am perfuaded this happens but feldom, provided the devil has no fhare in it; they are, however, in fuch apprehenfion of magicians, that the leaft fufpicion of exercifing this profeffion, is fufficient to caufe a perfon to be torn to pieces. Notwithftanding, however, the danger which attends the following this trade, there are everywhere perfons who have no other. And it is even true, that the moft fenfible and leaft credulous perfons, who have frequented the Indians agree, that there is fometimes more than mere conceit in their magick,

Now, Madam, is it to be thought, that thefe, infidels are the only perfons who have never had any intercourfe with the devil? And what other mafter befides this wicked fpirit, who was a murderer from the beginning, could have taught fo many nations, who have never had any intercourfe one with another, an art, which we cannot hold as entirely imaginary, without contradicting the holy fcriptures? We muft therefore confefs, that the infernal powers have fome agents upon earth, but that God has prefcribed very narrow limits to their malignity; and if he fometimes permits us to feel the effects of the power he hath thought proper to fuffer them to pofeefs, it is only in order to manifeft his juftice and mercy.

Much the fame thing may be faid of the jugglers of Canada, who profefs to have no commerce but with, what they call, the benevolent genii, and by whofe means they boaft of knowing what paffes in the moft diftant countries, and in the remoteft futurity; of being able to difcover the fource and nature of the moft hidden difeafes, and of having the fecret of curing them ; to difcern the part that is to be taken, in the moft perplexed affairs; to explain the moft obfcure dreams; to make the moft dificult negociations prove fucceffful; and laftly, to render the gods propitious to warriors and hunters. Thefe pr tended good genii are like all the gods of Paganifm, real devils, which received that homage which is due to God alone, and whofe illufions are ftill more dangerous than thofe of the evil genii, as they concribute to retain their adorers in their blind devotion.

It is beyond all doubt, that amongft their agents the moft audacious are always the mott refpected, who with a very little addrefs, eafily perfuace nations born and brought up in fuperftition. And although they have feen with their own eyes the birth of thofe impoftures, yet fhould they entertain a defire of alcribing to themfelves a fupernatural birth, they find perfons credulous enough to believe them on their bare word, as much as if they had feen them defcend from heaven, and who look upon it as a fort of enchantment, that they formerly believed them born like other men; their artifices are, however, generally fo coarfe and thread-bare, that there are none befides fools and children deceived by them, except when they act in quality of phyficians: for who does not know when the buffinefs in queftion is the recovery of one's health, that the moft exceffive credulity is of all countries, and even as common in fuch as picque themfelves moft on their wifdom as in thofe whofe underftandings are lefs enlightened ?

After all, Madam, I repeat it, it is difficult not to allow, that amongft thefe infidels there are fome things very capable of deceiving, at leaft, the multitude. I have heard perfons fay, whofe veracity and wifdom I could not fufpect, that when thefe impoftors fhut themfelves up in a ftove, in order to make themfelves fweat, which is one of their moft common preparations for their illufions, they differ in nothing from the Pythias or fybils, as the poets reprefent them on the tripod: that they are feen to fall into convulfions and extacies, to affume a tone of voice, and to perform actions which appear beyond human power, and which infpire even thofe fpectators who have the ftrongeft difbelief of their impoftures, with a horror and aftonifhment, which they are unable to overcome.

It is alfo affirmed that they fuffer greatly on thofe occafions, and that there are fome of them who are very difficulty prevailed with, and even though they have been very well paid to deliver themelves into the hands of the fpirit which convulfes them. But we are not to believe that there is any thing fupernatural in this, that juft after coming out of thofe violent fweats they plunge into cold water, and even fometimes when it is frozen, without teeling the leaft inconvenience from it. This is common to them, with all the other Indians, and even with other northern nations *. This is an experiment, which fomewhat difconcerts the fcience of phyfick, but in which the devil has certainly no manner of fhare.

( 169 )

It is alfo certain, that their jugglers are too often true in their predictions, to fuffer us to believe that they divine at random, and that there pafs on thofe occafions, things which it is almoft impoffible to acccount for, in any natural way. And even the very pofts with which thefe foves were fupported, have been feen to bend to the earth, whilft the juggler remained motionlefs and without touching them, and whillt he fweated and foretold what was to happen. The letters of the ancient miffionaries are filled with facts which leave no room to doubt, that thefe feducers have a real compact with the Father of deceit and lies. Several Frenchmen have told me the fame thing, I fhall only quote one paffage which I have from the fountain-head.

You have feen at Paris, Madame de Marfon, and fhe is there flill; now this is what the Marquis de Vaudreuil her fon-in-law and our prefent governor told me this winter, and which he had from this lady, who is far from being a perfon of a weak mind. She was one day very uneafy about M. de Marfon, her hufband who commanded at that time

[^2]in a poft in Acadia; he was ftill abfent, though the time he had fixed for his return was already paft. An Indian woman feeing Madame de Marfon uneafy, afked her the reafon of it, and having learned it, told her, after mufing fome time on it, not to vex herfelf, that her hufband would return fuch a day at fuch a hour, naming both, with a grey hat on his head. As fhe perceived the lady gave no credit to her prediction, fhe returned to her, at the day and hour fhe had affigned, and afked her whether the would not come to fee her hufband arrive, and preffed her fo ftrongly to follow her, that at laft fhe led her to the bank of the river. They had fcarce arrived there, when Monf. de Marfon appeared in a canoe, with a grey hat on his head; and being told what had paffed, affured them, that he was utterly at a lofs to conceive which way the Indian woman could know the day and hour of his arrival.

This example, Madam, with many others which I know, and whichare no lefs certain, prove, that the devil is fometimes concerned in the magick of the Indians; but it belongs only, fay they, to the jugglers to make the evocations, when the bufinefs is of publick concern. It is pretended that all the Algonquins and Abenaquis, formerly, practifed a kind of pyromancy, the whole myftery of which is as follows. They reduced to a very fine powder fome charcoal, made of cedar, they difpofed this powder in their own manner, and afterwards fet fire to it, and by the form which the fire took whilft it ran along this powder, they pretended to difcover what they wanted to know. They add, that the Abenaquis, when they were converted to Chriftianity, had much difficulty in renouncing cing this ufage, which they looked upon as a very innocent way of knowing what paffed at a diftance.

( 171 )

I have never heard it faid whether fuch private perfons, as were inclined to poffers fuch fecrets, were under any neceffity of pafling any trial at their initiation; but profeffed jugglers are never invelted with this character, by which they enter into a kind of compact with the genii, and which renders their perfons venerable, till after they, have prepared themflves by faftings, which they carry to a great length, during which they are inceffantly beating the drum, fhouting, howling, finging and fmoaking. The inftallation is afterwards made in a kind of Bacchanalian feftival with ceremonies fo very extravagant and accompanied with fuch tranfports of fury, that one would imagine the devil took poffeffion of their bodily organs, from that moment.

They are, notwithftanding, the minifters of thofe pretended gods, only in as much as they make known to men their will, and ferve them as interpreters ; for if we might give the appellation of facrifices, to the offerings which thefe nations pay to their divinities, their priefts are always different from their jugglers: thefe in all publick ceremonies are the chiefs, and in domettick occurrences, it is generally the faiher of the family, or in his abfence the moft confiderable perfon in the cabbin, who performs this function. But the chief occupation of the jugglers, at leaft that by which they get moft profit is phyfick: they exercife this art by principles, founded on the knowledge ledge of fimples, on experience, and as is done every where elfe, on the circumftances of the cafe, but very rarely without a mixture of fuperftition and quackery, of which the vulgar are conftantly the dupes.

There is, perhaps, no fet of men in the world more fo to thefe impoftures, than the Indians, though there are very few who are under lefs neceficy of having recourfe to phyfick. They are not only almoft all of a found and robuft conftitution, but were utterly unacquainted with moft of the difeafes to which we are fubject, before we had commerce with them. They knew not what the fmall-pox was when they got it from us, and we can only attribute the prodigious ravages it has made amongft them to their ignorance. The gout, the gravel, ftone and apoplexy, with a number of other evils fo common in Europe, are not yet known in this part of North-America, at leaft amongit the natives.

It is true, thofe exceffes committed in their featts, and in their outrageous faftings, occafion pains and weakneffes in the breaft and ftomach, which carry off great numbers of them; many young perfons alfo die of the confumption, which they pretend, is a confequence of the exceffive fatigue and violent exercifes to which they expofe themfelves from their infancy, and before they are able to fupport them. It is a folly to believe with fome, that their blood is of a colder nature than ours, and to attribute to this, their pretended infenfibility in torments; but it is extremely balfamick, which proceeds, no doubt, from their not ufing any falt or high feafonings in their diet.

They
(173)

They feldom look upon a difeafe as purely natural, and amongft the ordinary remedies which they ufe, there are fome who have the virtue of curing fimply by themfelves. The great ufe which they make of their fimples, is for the cure of wounds, fractures, diflocations, luxations and ruprures. They blame the great incifions which our furgeons make, in order to clean wounds, they exprefs the juice of feveral plants, and with this compofition, they draw from them all the matter and even fplinters, ftones, iron, and in general all extraneous bodies remaining in the wound. Thefe very juices are alfo the fole nourifhment of the patient till the wound is clofed: he who probes it, likewife takes a draught of it before he fucks the wound, when this operation is neceffary: but this rarely happens, and they moft commonly content themfelves with fyringing the wound with this liquor.

All this is in the rules of the art, but as thefe people muft always have fomething fupernatural in every thing, the juggler often tears the wound with his teeth, and afterwards a bit of wood or fuch like matter, which he took care to conceal in his mouth, makes the fick perfon believe he extracted it from the wound, and that this was the charm which made his difeafe fo dangerous. This much is certain, that they are in poffeffion of fecrets and remedies which are admirable. A broken bone is immediately fet, and is perfectly folid in eight days time. A French foldier who was in garrifon in a fort in Acadia, was feized with the Epilepfy, and and the fits were become almoft daily and extremely violent : an Indian woman that happened to be prefent at one of his fits, made him two bolufes of a pulverifed root, the name of which the did not difclofe, and defired that one might be given him at his next fit, told him that he would fweat much, and that he would have large evacuations both by vomiting and ftool, and added, that if the firt bolus did not entirely cure him, the fecond certainly would : the thing happened as fhe had foretold; the patient had, indeed, a fecond fit, but this was his laft. He from that day enjoyed a perfect flate of health.

( 174 )

Thefe people have alfo fpeedy and fovereign remedies againft the palfy, dropfy, and venereal complaints. The rafpings of guiacum and faffafras are their common fpecificks againt thefe laft complaints; of thefe they make a draught which is both a cure and prefervative, provided it be made conftant ufe of. In acute difeafes, fuch as the pleurify, they fall to work on the fide oppofite to that where the pain is; to this they apply drawing cataplafms, and which hinder it from fettling. In fevers they ufe cooling lotions with decoctions of herbs, and by this means prevent inflammations and delirioufnefs. They boaft above all things of their fkill in dieting, which according to them confifts in abftaining from certain aliments which they reckon detrimental.

They were formerly unacquainted with the method of bleeding, which they fupplied by fcarifications of the parts affected: they afterwards applied a fort of cupping-glaffes made of gourds, and filled with combuftible matters to which they fet fire. The ufe of caufticks, and uftulations, were all familiar to them; but as they had no knowledge of the lunar cauftick, they made ufe of rotten wood in its place. At prefent, bleeding alone is fubftituted inftead of all thefe. In the northern parts they made much ufe of glifters, a bladder was their inftrument for this purpofe. They have a remedy for the bloody-flux which feldom or never fails; this is a juice expreffed from the extremities of cedar branches after they have been well boiled.

But their grand remedy and prefervative againft all evils, is fweating. I juft told you, Madam, that the moment after coming out of the flove, and even whilf the fweat is ftill running down from all parts of the body, they throw themfelves into the river; if this happens to be at too great a diftance, they caufe themfelves to be fprinkled with the coldeft water. They often fweat only to refreh themfelves, to calm their minds and to render them fitter for fpeaking on publick affairs. The moment a ftranger arrives in any of their cabbins, they make a fire for him, rub his feet with oil, and immediately conduct him tinto a ftove where his hoft keeps him company. They have another very fingular method of provoking fweat, which is made ufe of in certain difeafes: this confifts in extending the patient on a couch raifed a little above the ground, under which are boiled in a kettle, the wood of the hiccerry tree and the branches of pine. The vapour which proceeds from it produces a moft profufe fweat: they alfo pretend that the fmell of it is extremely wholfome; the fweat by means of a ftove, and which is procured by the vapour arifing from the water, poured upon red-hot flints, is without this advantage.

In Acadia no difeafe was thought worth their notice, till the patient had entirely loft his appetite ; and feveral nations are ftill in the fame error: and whatever fort of fever a perfon happens to be feized with, if they incline to eat, he is never allowed any particular diet, but muft eat of fuch food as the reft. But as foon as the difeafe appears dangerous, that is to fay, when the perfon rejects all kind of nourifhment, they treat it with much attention. It is true, the principles on which the fcience of phyfic among the Indians is founded, are altogether extraordinary, and they refufe a fick man nothing he afks for, from a belief that the defires of a perfon in this condition, are fo many orders from the genius who watches for his prefervation ; and in calling their jugglers it is lefs from any perfuafion of their abilities, than from a fuppofition that they are better able to know of the fpirits, the caufe of the evil, and the remedies that are to be applied for the cure of it.

They are moreover unwilling to have any thing to reproach themfelves with, death feems to lofe a part of its terror, even when it follows on the heels of the remedies, of which it is a natural confequence. Our Indians are in this fubject to the common law of humanity, and to the general prejudice which has obtained in all ages and nations; and they-are, in my opinion the more excufable, for carrying their credulity to fo great a length; becaufe, as they find fomething fupernatural in all difeafes, and as their phyfick confirts in a mixture of religion, they therefore believe themfelves lefs under any obligation to reafon about it ; and make it a facred duty, to abandon themfelves to the guidance of blind chance.

A fick perfon often takes it into his head that his difeafe is owing to witchcraft, in which cafe their whole attention is employed in difcovering ir, which is the juggler's province. This perfonage begins with caufing himfelf to be fweated, and atter he has quite fatigued himfelf with fhouting, beating himielf, and invoking his genius, the firft out of the way thing that comes into his head, is that to which he attributes the caufe of the difeafe. There are fome who, before they enter the fove, take a draught of a compofition very proper, fay they, for difpofing them to receive the divine impulfe, and they pretend that the advent of the firit, is made manifeft by a rufhing wind, which fuddenly arifes; or by a bellowing heard under ground; or by the agitation and fhaking of the flove. Then full of his pretended divinity, and more like a perfon poffeffed by the devil than one infpired of heaven, he pronounces in a pofitive tone of voice on the ftate of the patient, and fometimes gueffes tolerably juft.

The fraternity of quacks have devifed a very fingular method of exempting themfelves from being refponfible for events. As foon as they fee the patient in danger of dying, they never fail to give a prefcription, the execution of which is fo difficult, as to be almolt impofible to perform anith any degree of exactnefs, fo that they eafily find fome omiffion to juftify themfelves. It is fcarce conceivable what extravagancies they prefcribe on thofe occafions; fome patiens they order to counterfeit madnefs; in certain difeafes they prefribe dances, generally extremeVol. II.

$$
178)
$$

ly lafcivious, and one would almoft alway think, that they meant not fo much to cure as to kill the patient : but what proves the power of imagination over men is, that thefe phyficians with all their abfurdities cure to the full as often as our own.

In fome countries, when the patient is defpaired of, they difpatch him to keep him from languifhing. In the canton of Onnontague they put to death young children who have loft their mothers before they are weaned; they even bury them alive with them, from a perfuafion that no other woman could fuckle them, and that they would languif away their lives; I do not, however, know whether they have not lately renounced this barbarous cuftom. Others abandon their fick, the moment they are given over by the phyficians, and leave them to die of hunger and thirft. And fome there are who, in order to hide the contortions of vifage in the dying perfon, fhut his eyes and mouth, as foon as he begins to be in agony.

In Accadia the quacks were called Autmoins, and it was commonly the chief of the village who was invefted with this dignity. Thus they had much more authority than the other jugglers, although they were neither poffeffed of greater abilities nor lefs impoftors. When they happened to be called upon to vifit a patient, they firft infpected him for a confiderable time, after which they breathed upon him. If this produced nothing, " of certainty," faid they, " the devil is " within him; he muft, however, very foon " go out of him; but let every one be upon " his guard, as this wicked fpirit will, if he can " out of fpite, attack fome here prefent." They then fell into a kind of rage, were fhaken with agonies, fhouted out aloud, and threatened the pretended demon; they fpoke to him as if they had feen him with their eyes, made feveral paffes at him, as if they would ftab him, the whole being only intended to conceal their impofture.

On entering the cabbin they take care to fix into the ground a bit of wood, to which a cord is made faft; They afterwards prefent the end of the cord to the fpectators inviting them at the fame time to draw out the bit of wood, and as fcarce any one ever fucceeds in it, they are fure to tell him that it is the devil who holds it; afterwards making as if he would ftab this pretended devil, they loofen by little and little the piece of wood, by raking up the earth round it, after which they eafily draw it up, the crowd all the while crying out, A miracle! To the underpart of this piece of wood, was faftened a little bone, or fome fuch thing, which was not at firf perceived, and the quacks fhewing it to the company: "Behold," cried they, " the caufe of the dif" eafe, it was neceffary to kill the devil to " get at it."

This farce lafted three or four hours, after which the phyfician ftood in need of reft and refrefhment; he went away affuring them, that the fick perfon would infallibly be cured, provided the difeafe had not already got the better, that is to fay, provided the devil before his retreat, had not given him his death's wound. The bufinefs was to know whether he had or not. This the autmoin pretended to difcover by dreams, but he took care never to fpeak clearly, till he faw what turn the difeafe took. On perceiving it incurable, he went away, every one likewife after his example abandoning the patient. If after three days were expired, he were ftill alive: "The devil,", faid the phyfician, " will neither allow him to be " cured, nor fuffer him to die; you muft "out of charity put an end to his days." Immediately the greateft friend of the patient went to fetch cold water and poured it upon his face till he expired. The enchantment was fuch, that befides making vaft acknowledgements to the autmoin, for his extraordinary care and attendance, they alfo largely gratified him.

$$
\mathrm{N}_{2} \text { the }
$$

Some fouthern nations have quite contrary maxims, and never pay the phyfician till after the cure is performed; and if the patient happen to die, the phyfician who attended him, is in danger of his life. According to the Iroquois, every difeafe is a defire of the foul, and people die only becaufe this defire has not been fatisfied. I muft now conclude, Madam, becaufe the article of the dead would lead me too far, and becaufe every thing is getting ready for my departure; I hall probably very foon find leifure leifure to write you again, but with very little profit to you, as from hence to the country of the Illinois, there is is no likelihood of my meeting with any opportunity of forwarding my letter to you; fo that if I write you before my arrival there, you will, perhaps, receive it at the fame time with that I fhall write you, when I am at my journey's end.
( 18 I )

> I am, &c.

LE T T ER XXVI.

Departure from the Fort of the River St. Jofeph. Sources of the Theakiki: What paffes at the Death of the Indians; of their Funerals and Tombs. Of their Mourning and Widowbood. Of the Fefival of the Dead.

Source of the River Theakiki, September $\mathbf{1 7}$, $\mathbf{1} 72 \mathrm{I}$.

Madam,

Idid not imagine I fhould have fo foon taken up. my pen again to write you; but my guides have juift now broken their canoe, and I am detained a whole day in a place that affords nothing to attract the curiofity of a traveller, fo that I cannot do better, than employ my leifure time in endeavouring to divert you.

I believe I gave you to underftand in my laft, thut I had, two routs to chufe, in order to gain the country of the Illinois; the firft was by returning to lake Michigan, coafting along the fouthern coaft, and entering the tittle river of Chicagou. After afcending five or fix leagues up this river, there is a paffage to that of the Illinois, by means of two carrying places, the longeft of which is not above a league and a quarter; but being informed that at this feafon of the year, there is not water fufficient for a canoe, I have taken the other route, which has likewife its inconveniencies, and is far from being fo agreeable, but it is more certain.

I departed yefterday from the fort of the river St. Jofeph, and failed up that river about fix leagues. I went afhore on the right, and walked a league and a quarter, firft along the water-fide, and afterwards acrofs a field in an immenfe meadow, entirely covered with copfes of wood, which produce a very fine effect; it is called the, meadow of the Buffaloes bead, becaufe it is faid a head of that animal of a monitruous fize was once found there. Why might not there have been giants among the brutes? I pitched my tent on a very beautiful fpot, called the Fort of the Foxes, becaufe the foxes, that is to fay, the Outagamies had not long ago a village there, which was fortified after their fafhion.

This morning I walked a league farther in the meadow, having my feet almoft always in the water ; afterwards I met with a kind of pool or marfh which had a communication with feveral others of different fizes, but the vargeft not above a hundred paces in circuit. Thefe are the fources of the river Theakiki, which by a corrupted pronounciation our Indians call Kiakiki. Theak fignifies a wolf, in I do not remember what language, but this river bears that namé, becaufe the Mahingans, who are likewife called the wolves, had formerly taken refuge on its banks.

We put our canoe which two men had carried thus far into the fecond of thofe fprings, and we embarked ourfelves, but we had fcarce water fufficient to keep her afloat. Ten men would in two days make a ftreight and navigable canal, which would fave a great deal of trouble and ten or twelve leagues of way; for the river at its fource is fo very narrow, and fuch fhort turns muft of neceffity be conftantly made, that there is danger of damage every moment to the canoe, as has juft now happened to us. But we fhall now return to the Indians, and after having feen in what manner they are treated during ficknefs, we fhall take a view of them whilft they are a-dying, and of what paffes after their death.

For the moft part, when they believe themfelves paft hopes of recovery, they put on a refolution truly ftoical, and even fee their death haftened by thofe perfons who are deareft to them, without teftifying the leaft chagrin. No fooner has the phyfician pronounced fentence on a dying perfon, than he makes an effort to harrangue thofe who are about him. If he is the head of a family, he makes his funeral oration before-hand, which he concludes with giving his children the beft advice he can; afterwards he takes his leave of every body, gives orders for a feaft, in which all the provifions remaining in the cabbin muft be confumed, and laftly, receives prefents from his family.

While this paffes, they cut the throats of all the ' dogs they can catch, that the fouls of thefe animals may give information to the people in the other world, that fuch a perfu: is foon coming to join them; and they throw all their budies into the kettle in order to encreafe the feaft. The repaft being being over, they begin their lamentations, which are interrupted with taking their latt farewell of the dying perfon, wifhing him a good voyage, comforting him on his-feparation from his friends and relations, and affuring him that his children will maintain all the glory he has acquired.

It muft be confefled, Madan, that the indifference with which thefe people face death, has fomething admirable in it; and this fis fo univerfal that an Indizn has feldom been known to be unealy, on being informed that he has but a few hours to live; the fame genius and principle prevail every where, though the ufages with refpect to what I have been now relating vary greatly in the different nations. Dánces, fongs, invocations and feafts are every where prefcribed by the phyficians, remedies almoft ail of them more likely, according to our notions, to kill a man in perfect health, than to recover a fick perfon. In fome places they are contented with having recourfe to the fpirits, who, if the patients recover their health, have all the honour of the cure, but the fick perfon is always the moft unconcerned about his fate.

On the other hand, if thefe people fhow little judgement in the manner of their treating the fick, it mult be confeffed that they behave with regard to the dead, with a generofity and an affection that cannot be too much admired. Some mothers have been known to preferve for years together the corpfe of their children, and others to draw the milk from their breafts and fprinkle it on their graves. If a village in which there are any dead corps happens to be fet on fire, the firft thing done is to remove them to a place of fafety: they ftrip themfelves of every thing moft valuable about them, in order to adorn the deceafed: they open their coffins from time to time, in order to change their habits; and they take victuals from their mouth, in order to carry them to their graves, and to the places where they imagine their fouls refort. In 2 word they are much more expenfive upon the dead than the living

As foon as the fick perfon has fetched his laft breath, the whole cabbin refounds with lamentations, which continues as long as the family is in a condition to furnifh the expence; for open table muft be kept during all that time. The carcafs adorned with its fineft robe, the face painted, the arms of the deceafed, with every thing he pofferfed laid by his fide, is expofed at the gate of the cabbin, in the fame pofture in which he is to lie in the tomb, and that is in many places, the fame with that of a child in the womb. It is cuftomary among fome nations for the relations of the deceafed to faft till the funeral is over, all which interval is paft in weeping and howling, in regaling all thofe who vifit them, in making the elogium of the dead, and in reciprocal compliments. Amongit other nations they hire mourners, who acquit themfelves perfectly well of their duty. They fing, they dance and weep inceffantly, and always in cadence; but this outward fhow of borrowed grief is not prejudicial to that which nature exacts, from the relations of the deceafed.

It appears to me that they carry the corps to the place of burial without any ceremony, at lealt I have found nothing upon this head in any relation; but when they are once in the grave, they take care to cover them in fuch manner that the earth does not touch them: fo that they lie as in a cell entirely covered with fkins, much richer and better adorned than any of their cabbins. A poft is afterwards 'erected, on which they fix every thing capable of expreffing the efteem in which they held the deceafed. His portrait is fometimes placed upon it, with whatever elfe can ferve to make paffengers acquainted with his fate and condition, and fignify the moft remarkable actions of his life. Frefh provifions are carried to the place every morning, and as the dogs and other beafts do not fail to take advantage of this, they would fain perfuade themfelves that it is the foul of the deceafed, who comes to take fome refrefhment.

After this, it is not to be wondered at if the Indians believe in apparitions: in fact they have numberlefs ftories of that kind. I have feen a poor man, who merely by the ftrength of hearing them talked of, imagined he had always a troop of dead men at his heels; and as people took a pleafure in terrifying him, he at laft became ftark mad. After, however, a certain term of years, they ufe as much precaution to efface the remembrances of thofe they have loft from their minds, as they had before taken care to preferve it, and this they do entirely to put an end to the grief they felt on that occafion.

Some of our miffionaries afked of their converts, one day, why they deprived themfelves of the moft neceffary things in favour of their dead? " It " is," anfwered they, " not only to teftify to our "s neighbours the love we bore them, but likewife "s to prevent our having always before our eyes, " objects, which being conftantly ufed by them, "s muft inceffantly renew our grief." It is likewife for for this reafon, they refrain during a certain time from mentioning their names; and that, if any other of the family hears it, he quits it all the time the mourning continues. This likewife is probably the reafon, why the higheft affront that can be offered to any one, is to tell him: Your fatber is dead, or Your mother is dead.

When an Indian dies in the time of hunting, his body is expofed on a very high fcaffold, where it remains till the departure of the company, who carry it with them to the village. There are fome nations who have the fame cuftom, with refpect to all their dead; and I have feen it practifed among the Miffifaguez at the Narrows. The bodies of thofe who are killed in war are burnt, and the afhes carried back, in order to be depofited in the fepulchres of their anceftors. Thefe fepulchres, among thofe nations who are beft fixed in their fettlements, are a fort of burial grounds near the village. Others inter their dead in the woods at the foot of fome tree, elfe dry them, and preferve them in boxes till the feftival of the dead, of which I fhall prefently fay fomewhat; but in fome other places, a ceremonial ridiculous enough is put in practice, with refpect to thofe who have been drowned or ftarved to death by the cold.

Before I enter on the defrription of it, it will be proper to take notice, Madam, that the Indians believe when fuch accidents happen, that the fouls are angry, and will not be appeafed till the bodies are found. Then the preliminaries of weeping, dancing, finging and fea ing being firt over, the body is carried to the burial-place, or if that is at too great a diftance, to the place where it is to remain main till the feftival of the dead. A very large ditch is dug here, and a fire kindled. Then the young men approach the carcafe, cut the flefh from thofe parts which had been marked out by the mafter of the ceremonies, and throw it into the fire, together with the bowels. During this whole operation, the women and efpecially the relations of the deceafed, continue turning round thofe who are at work, exhorting them to acquit themfelves well of their duty, and putting grains of porcelain in their mouths; as we do fugar plums in the mouths of children, when we would have them do any particular thing.

The burial is followed by prefents, which are made to the family afflicted, and this is called covering the dead. Thefe prefents are made in name of the village, and fometimes in that of the nation. The allies likewife fend prefents at the death of confiderable perfons, But before this, the family of the deceafed make a feaft in his name, accompanied with games, for which prizes are propofed. There are a fort of jufts or tournaments carried on in this manner: one of their chiefs throws upon the tomb three buttons, about a foot in length, a young man, a woman and a girl take each of them one, and thofe of the fame age, fex and condition endeavour to wreft them out of their hands. The perfons with whom they remain are reckoned the conquerors. There are likewife races, and fometimes they fhoot at a mark; in a word, by a cuftom eftablifhed through all Pagan antiquity, an action wholly melancholy in itfelf, concludes with fongs and fhouts of victory.

It is true, the family of the deceafed take no part in thefe rejoicings; but on the contrary obferve ferve in their cabbin after the obfequies are over, a mourning the laws of which are very fevere. They mult have their hair cut off, and their faces blacked; they muft have their head in an erect pofture, their head wrapped up in a covering, without looking upon any one, making any vifits, or eating any thing hot; but muft deprive themfelves of all pleafures, having fcarce any cloathing on their bodies, and never warming themfelves, even in the midft of winter. After this grand mourning they begin another more moderate, which lafts for two or three years longer, but which may yet be mitigated a little; but nothing prefcribed is ever difpenfed with, without the permifion of the cabbin, to which the widow and widower belong'; and thefe permiffions as well as the conclufion of the mourning, are always attended with a feaft.

Laftly, they are not at liberty, by the laws of widowhood, to engage in fecond nuptials, without the confent of thofe on whom they depend. And fhould there be no hufband found for the widow, fhe is very little concerned about it, in cafe fhe has maie children old enough to provide for her fupport; fhe may ftill remain in the flate of widowhood without fear of being reduced to want. If fhe has a mind to marry again, fhe is at liberty to chufe for herfelf, and the perfon the marries becomes the father to her former children, enters into all the rights, and is fubject to all the obligations of the firtt hufband. A hufband never weeps for the lofs of a wife; tears in the opinion of the Indians, being looked upon as unworthy of men; but this does not hold true amongft all the nations.

The women, on the contrary, bewail their hufbands a year, are eternally invoking him, and fill the villages with their cries and lamentations, and efpecially efpecially at the rifing and fetting of the fun, at noon, and in fome parts when they go forth to their labour or return from it. Mothers mourn in much the fame manner for their children. The chiefs moürn for fix months only, after which they are free to marry again.

Laftly, the firft and oftentimes the only falutation paid to a friend and even to a ftranger on his entering their cabbins, is to bewail the relations they loft fince they laft faw them. They lay their hand on his head and fignify the perfon they lament, but without naming him. This is entirely founded on nature, and favours nothing of the barbarian; but what I am going to relate to you appears inexcufable in every refpect. This is the conduct which thefe nations obferve, with regard to all who have died a violent death, even in war and in the fervice of their country.

They have taken it into their heads, that the fouls of thefe perfons in the other world, have no commerce with the reft; and on this principle they burn them or bury them immediately, and even fometimes before they are quite dead. They never lay them in the common burying-ground, and allow them no fhare in the grand ceremony, which is repeated every eight years among fome nations, and every ten years amongft the Hurons and Iroquois.

This is called the feftival of the dead, or of fouls. The following is what I have been able to collect, and is the moft uniform as well as moft remarkable account, of this moft fingular and extraordinary act of religion known amongft the Indians. They begin with agreeing upo: the place where the aftembly affembly is to be held, afterwards they make choice of a king of the feaft, whofe bufinefs is to take order for every thing, and to invite the neighbouring villages. On the day appointed they affemble, and go in proceffion, two and two to the burialplace; there every one falls to work to uncover the dead bodies, and afterwards they remain fome time in filent contemplation of a fpectacle, fo capable of furnifhing the moft ferious reflections. The women are the firft who break this religious filence, by raifing lamentable cries, which ftill add to the horror with which every fpectator is feized.

This firt act ended, they take up the carcafes and gather the dry and loofe bones, with which they load the perfons who are appointed to carry them. They wafh fuch bodies as are not entirely corrupted, take away the putrid flefh with all other filth from them, and wrap them in new robes of beaver fkins. Afterwards they return in the fame order they came, and when the proceffion reaches the village, each perfon depofites his load in his own cabbin. During the march, the women continue their wailings, and the men wear the fame marks of grief, as on the day of the death of the perfon whofe remains they are thus carrying. This fecond act is followed with a feait in each cabbin, in honour of the dead of the family.

On the following days there are publick feaftings, which are accompanied, as on the day of the interment, with dances, games, and combats; for which there are alfo prizes propofed. Fron time to time they raife certain cries, which they call the cries of the fouls. They make prefents to the frangers amongt whom there are fometimes perfons who have come a hundred and fifty leagues off, and receive prefents again from them. They even make ufe of thefe opportunities to treat of their common affairs, as the election of a chief: all paffes with a great deal of order, decency and modefty; and every perfon prefent appears filled with fentiments proper to the occafion; every thing, even the very dances and fongs, breath fuch a forrowful air, that the heart is penetrated with the moft lively forrow, fo that the moft indifferent perfon muft be ftruck at the fight of this fpectacle.
Vol. II. O and

After fome days have paft, they go in proceffion to a large council-room built on purpofe, where they hang up againft the walls the bones and carcaffes, in the fame condition in which they were taken up, and they difplay the prefents deftined for the dead. If amongft the relt there happen to be the remains of fome chief, his fucceffor gives a grand repaft in his name, and fings his fong. In feveral places the dead bodies are carried from canton to canton, where they are always received with great demonftrations of grief and tendernefs, and every where prefents are made them : laftly, they carry them to the place where they are to remain for eternity. But I forgot to tell you, that all thefe proceffions are to the found of inftruments, accompanied with the fineft voices, and that every perfon obferves an exact cadence in his motion.

This laft and common place of burial, is a great ditch lined with the fineft furs and with whatever is moft precious. The prefents deftined for the dead are placed apart, and in proportion as the proceffion arrives, each family places itfelf on a kind of fcaffolds erected around the ditch. The moment the dead bodies are depofited, the women begin their their cries and lamentations. Afterwards all the fpectators go down into the ditch, when every one takes a fmall quantity of earth which he preferves with the greateft care, from a belief that it brings good luck at play. The dead bodies and bones are placed in proper order, being covered with new furs, over which is a layer of bark, and above all are thrown flones, timber and earth. Every one afterwards retires to his own home, but the women continue to return for feveral days to the fame place, to depofite fome fagamity by way of food for the departed.

( 195 )

$$
1 \mathrm{am}, & \mathrm{c}_{0}
$$

LE T T ER XXVII.

Voyage to Pimiteouy. Of the river of the Illiz nois; Reception of prifoners of war among/t that people. Manner of burning them. Some particulars of their manner of living.

Piniteouy, Oct. 5; 1721,

Madam,

ON the night between the 17 th and 18 th of laft month, the froft, which for eight days before had been pretty fenfible every morning, was confiderably encreafed; this was early for the climate in which we were, it being in 40 deg. 40 min . horth latitude. The following days we continued our voyage, failing from morning till night, being favoured by a pretty ftrong current, and fometimes by the wind; we made, indeed, a great deal of way, but yet advannced very little in our courfe; after having failed ten or twelve leagues, we often found ourfelves fo near our laft encampment, that from the one place to the other we could have feen one another, or even converfed together at leaft by means of a fpeaking trumpet.

We were a little comforted for this inconvenience by the extreme plenty of game on the river and its banks, which were fattened by the wild oars then in their maturity. I likewife gathered fome ripe grapes, of the fize and figure of a mufket-ball, and fufficiently tender, but of a bad relifh. Thefe are, to all appearance, the fame with what are called Prune Grapes in Louifiana. The river, by degrees, takes a ftraiter courfe, but its banks are not pleafant till at the diftance of fifty leagues from its fource. It is even throughout that whole fpace very narrow, and as it is bordered with trees which have their roots in the water, when any one happens to fall it bars up the whole river, and a great deal of time is loft in clearing a paffage for a canoe.

All thefe difficulties being paffed the river at the diftance of fifty leagues from its fource, forms a fmall lake, after which it grows confiderably broader. The country becomes beautiful, confifting of unbounded meadows, where buffaloes are to be feen grazing in herds of two or three hundred; but here it is neceffary to keep a good look out, for fear of being furprized by the Sioux and Outagamies, whom the neighbourhood of the Illinois, their mortal enemies draws hither, and who give no more quarter to thofe French whom they happen to meet in their way. The misfortune is, that the Theakiki lofes in depth, in proportion as it encreafes in breadth, fo that we were often obliged to unload the canoe and travel on foot, which is never done without fome danger, by which means I fhould have been greatly embarraffed, if I had not been furnifhed with an efcorte at the river St. Jofeph.

(199)

I was not a little furprized at feeing fo little water in the Theakiki, notwithftanding it receives a good many pretty large rivers, one of which is more than 120 feet in breadth at its mouth, and has been called the River of the Iroquois, becaufe fome of that nation were furprized on its banks by the Illinois, who killed a great many of them. This check mortified them fo much the more, as they held the Illinois in great contempt, who indeed for the moft part are not able to ftand before them.

The 27 th of September we arrived at the Forks, that being the name given by the Canadians to the place where the Theakiki and the river of the Illinois join. This laft, notwithftanding it is fixty leagues from its fource is ftill fo very fhallow, that I have feen a buffalo crofs it, without being up to the mid-leg in water. The Theakiki on the contrary, befides, that it brings its waters from the diftance of a hundred leagues, is a moft beautiful river. Here, however, it lofes its name, without doubt, becaufe the Illinois having fettled it in feveral places from the other, have communicated to it their own. Being enriched all of a fudden with this junction, it does not yield in largenefs to any of our rivers in France; and, I can affure ycu, Madam, it is not poffible to behold a finer and a better country than this which it waters, at leaft as far as the place from whence I write. But it does not acquire a depth correfpondent to its breadth, till fifteen leagues below the Forks; though in that interval many other rivers fall into it.

The largeft of thefe is called Pificoui, and proceeds from the fine country of the Mafcotins. At its, mouth is a fall, or a rapid ftream, which is called le Cbarboniere, or the Coal-pit, from the great quantity of fea coal found in the places adjacent. Nothing is to be feen in this courle but immenfe meadows, interfperfed with fmall copfes of wood, which feem to have been planted by the hand; the grafs is fo very high that a mann is loft amongft it, but paths are every where to be found as well trodden as they could have been in the beft peopled countries, though nothing paffes that way excepting buffaloes, and from time to time fome herds of deer, and a few roe-buck.

A league below the coal-pit you fee a rock on the right, entirely round, extremely high, and its fummit in the form of a terrafs; this is called the Fort of the Miamis, becaufe thefe Indians had formerly a village there. A league beyond this on the left, is feen another rock, quite fimilar to the former, and which has got the fimple appellation of the Rock. This is the point of a very high terras, ftretching the fpace of two hundred paces, and bending or winding with the courfe of the river which is very broad in this place. This rock is iteep on all fides, and at a diffance one would take it for a fortrefs. Some remains of a palifado are ftill to be feen on it,' the Illinois having formerly caft up an entrenchment here, which might be eafily repaired in cafe of any irruption of the enemy.

The village of thefe Indians ftands at the foot of this rock in an inland, which, together with feveral others, all of a wonderful fertility, divides the river in this place into two pretty large channels. I went afhore here in the evening about four o'clock, where I met with fome of my countrymen, who were trading with the Indians. I had farce landed wher when I received a vifit from the chief of the village, who is a man of about forty years of age, well-made, of a mild temper, a good countenance, and very well fpoken of by the French.

1 afterwards went up to this rock by a pretty eafy, but very narrow afcent. I found here a very level terras, and of a great extent, where twenty men might defend themfelves againft all the Indians of Canada, provided they had fire-arms, and could be fupplied with water; but that is only to be had from the river, and to obtain it they would be obliged to expofe themfelves. The only refource of the befieged would be the natural impatience of thofe barbarians. In finall parties they will wait with pleafure for eight or ten days behind a bufh, in the hope that fome one may pafs, whom they may kill or take prifoner ; but, in large bodies, if they do not fucceed at the firft, they are foon tired, and lay hold of the firft pretence to retire, which is never wanting, a dream, real or pretended, being all that is neceffary for that purpofe.

The rain, and much more a fpectacle which ftruck me with horror, prevented me from making the tour of thefe rocks, from whence I imagined I fhould difcover an extenfive country. I perceived at the extremity, and immediately above the village, the bodies of two Indians who had been burnt a few days before, and whom they had left according to cultom, to be devoured by the birds, in the fame pofture in which they were executed. The manner of burning prifoners amongft thefe fouthern nations is fomewhat fingular, and they have fome cuftoms different from the others in their manner of treating thofe unhappy wretches.

When they have met with fuccels in any millzary expedition, the warriors contrive their march in fuch a manner, that they always arrive at the village in the evening. As foon as they are come near it, they halt, and when night is come, depute two or three young people to the chief, to inform him of the principal events of the campaign. On the morrow at day-break they attire their prifoners in new robes, drefs their hair with down, paint their faces with different colours, and put into their hands a white ftaff furrounded with the tails of deer. At the fame time, the war-chief fhouts, and the whole village affembles at the water-fide, provided it happens to be near a river.

As foon as the warriors appear, four young perfons well-dreffed embark on board a Pirogue ${ }^{*}$, the two firft carry each of them a calumet, and proceed finging at the fame time to fetch the prifoners whom they conduct as in triumph to the cabbin where they 'are to be judged. The mafter of the cabbin, to whom it belongs to determine their fate, begins with giving them to eat, and holds a council during the repaft. In cafe they grant any one his life, two young perfons untie him, and take him each by a hand,' and fo make him run with all his might towards the river, into which they throw him headlong. They alfo throw themfelves into it after him, and when they have well wafhed him, conduct him to the perfon whofe flave he is to be.

As for thofe who are condemned to die, as foon as fentence is pronounced, the cry is made to affem-

[^3]ble the village, and the execution is put off no longer than till the neceffary preparations are made. They begin with ftripping the fufferer ftark" naked; they fix two pofts in the ground, to which they make faft two crofs pieces, one two foot from the ground, and the other fix or feven feet higher, and this is what they call a fquare. They caufe the perfon, who is to fuffer to mount the firf crofs piece, to which they tie his feet at fome diftance from each other ; they afterwards bind his hands to the two angles formed by the upper crofs piece, and in this pofture they burn him in all the different parts of his body.

The whole village, men, women, and children crowd round him, every one being at liberty to infult and torment him at pleafure. If none of the fpectators happen to have any particular reafon to prolong his torments, his fufferings are foon over, and the common way is to difpatch him with arrows, or elfe they cover him with bark to which they fet fire. They then leave him to himfelf in his fquare, and in the evening vifit all the cabbins, ftriking with rods againft the furniture, walls, and roof, in order to frighten the foul from harbouring: there, to revenge the mifchiefs they have done his body. The reft of the night paffes in rejoicing.

If the party hath met with no enemy, or if they have been obliged to fly, they enter the village in the day-time, obferving a profound filence; but if they have been beaten, they make their entry in the evening, after having given notice of their return by a death cry, and named all thofe they have loft, either by ficknefs or the fword of the enemy. Sometimes the prifoners are judged and executed before they they arrive at the village, and efpecially, if they have any grounds to fear their being refcued. Some time ago, a Frenchman having been taken by the Outagamies, thefe barbarians held a council on their march to determine what they fhould do with him. The refult of their deliberation was to throw a ftick upon a tree, and if it remained there to burn the prifoner, but not to throw it above a certain number of times. Happily for the captive, the ftick fell always to the ground, though the tree was extremely buhy.

I remained twenty-four hours at the rock, and to oblige the favages, and to teftify an entire confidence in them, though all my guides encamped on the other fide of the river, I lay in a cabbin in the middle of the village. I paffed the night quietly enough, but was very early awaked by a woman that dwelt in the neighbouring cabbin ; on her awakening, fhe happened to call to mind the remembrance of a fon fhe had loft fome years before, and fhe immediately fell a weeping or finging in a very mournful tone.

The Illinois have the character of bold and dexterous thieves, which is the reafon why I caufed tranfport all the baggage to the other fide of the river; but in fpite of this precaution, and the watchfulnefs of my people, when we came lto fet out we found a mufquet and fome other trifles wanting, which we could never afterwards, by any means recover. The fame evening we paffed the laft part of the river, where you are obliged to carry your canoe, from this place forwards, it is every where, both in breadth and deepnefs equal to moft great rivers in Europe.

On this day, likewife, I faw parrots for the firft time; there are fome it is true, on the banks of the Theakiki, but only in the fummertime; but thefe I now faw were only ftragglers on their paffage to the Miffiffippi, where they are found at all feafons of the year. They are no bigger than a blackbird, their head is yellow, with a red fpot in the middle; in the reft of their plumage green is the predominant colour. The two following days we croffed a charming country, and on the third of October towards noon found ourfelves at the entrance of Lake Pimiteouy; this is a widening of the river, which, for three leagues is a league in breadth. At the end of thefe three leagues you find on the right a fecond village of the Illinois, fifteen leagues diftant from that of the rock.

Nothing can be more delightful than its fituation ; oppofite to it is the profpect of a moft beautiful foreft, which was then adorned with all the variety of colours, and behind it, is a plain of an immenfe extent, fkirted with woods. The lake and river fwarm with filh, and the banks of both with game. I likewife met in this village four French Canadians, who informed me, that I was between four parties of enemies, and that I could neither go backwards nor forwards with fafety; they alfo told me, that on the way I had come there was an ambufcade of thirty Outagamies, that an equal number of the fame Indians were hovering about the village of Pimiteouy, and that another body, to the number of fourfcore, were pofted lower down the river in two companies.

This account made me reflect on what had paft the evening before; we had flopt at the extremity of an inland to look for buftards on which fome of my guides had fired; and we heard fomebody cutting wood in the middle of the ifland. The nearnefs of the village of Pimeteouy made us of opinion that this muft be fome of the Illinois, and we were pleafed with this thought; but there is a ftrong likelihood that thefe were fome Outagamies, who having difcovered us, and not daring to attack us, as I had twelve men well armed, had a mind to draw fome of us into the wood, concluding probably they would eafily manage the reft; but our little curiofity faved us from this misfortune, which I fhould certainly not have fhunned, if my efcort had not been commanded by a man wha had no mind to any idle delays.

What confirmed us fill the more in the belief of the four Frenchmen, is that thirty warriors of Pemiteouy, and thefe too commanded by the chief of the village, were in the field, to try to get more certain information of the enemy, and that a few days before their departure, there had been a fharp action in the neighbourhood, in which the two parties had taken each one prifoner; the Outagami had been burnt at the diftance of a mufket-hot from the village, and was fill in his fquare. The Canadians who were prefent at his execution, told me it had lafted fix hours, and that this unhappy perfon maintained to his laft breath that he was an Illinois, and had been taken when a child by the Outagamies, who had adopted him.

He had however fought with extreme valour: and had it not been for a wound he received in one of his legs, he had not been taken; but as he could give no proofs for what he advanced, and had been very near making his efcape, they did not chufe to credit him on his word. In the midft of his torments he made it appear, that bravery and the courage to endure pain, are two very different virtues, and not always found in one and the fame perfon; for he fent forth lamentable fhrieks, which ferved only to animate his tormentors: it is true, an old Illinois woman, whofe fon had been formerly killed by the Outagamies, did him all the mifchief that fury infpired by revenge could invent; at laft, however, taking pity on his cries, they covered him with ftraw, to which they fet fire, and as he was ftill found to breathe after this was confumed; he was pierced with arrows by the children: for the moft part, when a victim does not die like a brave man, he receives his death's wound from a woman or from children; he is unworthy, fay they, to die by the hands of men.

In the mean time, Madam, I found myfelf very much embaraffed. On the one hand, my guides did not imagine it prudent to advance any farther; and on the other it was very inconvenient for me to winter at Pimiteouy. I fhould even have been obliged to follow the Indians to their winter encampment, by which means I fhould have loit a whole year. But at laft two of the four Canadians I found at Pimiteouy, having offered to join our efcort, every one took heart. I determined to fet out on the morrow, being the 4th of October; but the rain and fome other things that happened prevented me all that day.

( 208 )

In the afternoon the warriors who had gone out on the difcovery returned, without raifing any fhouts, becaufe they had feen nothing. They all filed off before me with a pretty fierce air, being armed only with arrows and a buckler of buffaloe's hide, and made not the leaft appearance of feeing me ; for it is a cuftom among the warriors not to take notice of any body whilft they are in an armed body; but fcarce had every one returned to his cabbin, when the chief came to pay me a vifit of ceremony. He is a man of about forty years of age, of a good ftature, a little thin, of a mild difpofition, and extreme good fenfe. He is, befides, the beft foldier of the nation, and there are none of the Hlinois who better deferve the firname of nodas wuvs, which Homer gives by way of preference to the hero of his Iliad, than he. This is faying a great deal, for the Allinois are perhaps the fwifteft footed people in the world; and there are none but the Miffouris who can difpute this piece of excellence with them.

Perceiving a crofs of copper and a fmall image of the Virgin fufpended at the neck of this Indian, I imagined he had been a Chriftian, but was informed it was quite otherwife, and that he had dreffed himfelf in that manner only to do me honour: I was likewife told a ftory, which I am now going to relate to you, without defiring you fhould give it any more credit than its authors deferve, who were Canadian travellers, who affuredly have not invented it, but have heard it affirmed for a certain fact.

The image of the Virgin which this Indian carried about with him having fallen into his hands, I know know not how, he was curious to know what it reprefented: he was told that it was the mother of God, and that the child fhe held in her arms was God himfelf, who had made himfelf man for the falvation of the human fpecies: the myftery of this ineffable incarnation was explained to him in a few words, and he was further told, that in all dangers the Chriftians conftantly addreffed themfelves to this holy mother, who feldom failed to extricate them. The Indian liftened to this difcourfe with a great deal of attention, and fometime afterwards being hunting by himfelf in the woods, an Outagami, who had been lying in ambufh came upon him juft as he had difcharged his piece, and levelled it at his head. Then recollecting what he had been told about the Mother of God, he invoked her protection, and the Outagami endeavouring to difcharge his piece it miffed fire. He cocked it a fecond time, but the fame thing happened five tintes running. In the mean time, the Illinois having loaded his piece, levelled in his turn at the head of his enemy, who chofe rather to furrender than to fuffer himfelf to be fhot. Ever fince this adventure, the Illinois chief will never ftir out of the village without carrying his fafeguard with him, by means of which he believes himfelf invulnerable. If this fact be true, there is good reafon to believe that it has only been thro' the neglect of the miffionary that he has not as yet become a Chriftian, and that the Mother of God having thus preferved him from a temporal death, will likewife procure him the grace of a fin cere converfion *.

[^4]> Vol. II.

P Scarce

Scarce had the chief left me, when going abroad myfelf, in order to vifit the neighbourhood about the village, I perceived two Indians going about from cabbin to cabbin, and making lamentations nearly in the fame manner with the woman of the rock, whom I have already mentioned to you. The one had loft his friend in the laft expedition, and the other was the father of the deceafed. They walked at a great rate, laying both their hands on the heads of all they met, probably to invite them to partake in their grief. Thofe who have fought for refemblances between the Hebrews and Americans, undoubtedly would not have failed to take notice of this manner of weeping, which from fome expreffions in the fcriptures, th fe hunters after conjectures might have- had room to to imagine had been in ufe amongft the people of God.

Towards evening the chief fent me an invitation to meet him at a houfe where one of the miffionaries had lodged fome years before, where probably they ufed to hold their councils; I went thither and found him with two or three of the elders. He began with telling me that he wanted to inform me of the greatnefs of the danger to which I fhould expofe myfelf by continuing my journey; and that after having well confidered every thing, he advifed me to fufpend my departure till the feafon of the year fhould be a little farther advanced, in the hopes that the parties of the enemy might in the meantime withdraw and leave the way open. Sufpecting that he might have his views in detaining me at Pimiteouy, I gave him to underftand that his reafons had no great weight with me, and added that I had fiill more cogent ones to haften my departure. My anfwer feemed to give him pain, and

I foon perceived that it proceeded entirely fromi his affection to me, and his zeal for our nation.
"Since your refolution is fixed, faid he to me,
" I am of opinion that all the Frenchmen here
" fhould join you, in order to flrengthen your con"s voy. I have already declared my fentiments to " them on this head, and have reprefented to them " in a very ftrong manner, that they fhould for " ever lofe their honour if they fuffered their fa" ther to expofe himfelf to fuch danger without "partaking it with him. I earneftly wifh I could " accompany you myfelf at the head of all my fol-
" diers, but you are not ignorant that my village " is every day on the eve of being attacked, and " it is not proper that in fuch a juncture I fhould " either be abfent myfelf, or leave it unprovided " of defence. As to the French, nothing can de" tain them here but a piece of felf intereft, which " they ought to facrifice to the care of your pre"fervation. This is what I have given them to " underftand, and I have added that if any one of " them fhould fall into the hands of the enemy, it " would only be the lofs of a fingle inan, where" as a Father is himfelf alone worth many, and " that there is nothing which they ought not to " hazard, in order to prevent fo great a misfor" tune."

I was charmed, Madam, with the good fenfe of this man, and ftill more with his generofity, which carried him fo far as, out of regard for me, to difpenfe with the affiftance of four men, which ought not to have been indifferent to him in the fituation wherein he then was. I have not even doubted that he wanted to keep me with him, in order to profit of my efcort for his defence. I made him a great many acknowledgments for his care and good intentions towards me, and affured him that I was very well fatisfied with the French, two of whom I fhould leave with him for his defence, and that the other two fhould accompany me till I fhould be in a place of fafety, and that with this reinforcement I believed I was in a condition to travel over all the country without fear of any thing. He infifted no farther, and I retired.

This morning he came to pay me a fecond vifit, attended by his mother-in-law, who carried a little infant in her arms. "You fee before you, faid he, ad" dreffing himfelf to me, a father in great affliction. " Behold my daughter who is a-dying, her mother "s having already loft her life in bringing her into "s the world, and none of our women have been "s able to fucceed in making her take any nourifh" ment. She throws up every thing fhe fwallows, " and has perhaps but a few hours to live : you "s will do me a great favour if you will baptize her, "t that he may fee God after her death." The child was indeed very ill, and appeared to be paft all hopes of recovery, fo that without any hefitation I performed the ceremony of baptifm on her.

Should my voyage in every other refpect be entires ly fruitlefs, I own to you, Madam, I fhould not regret all the danger and fatigue I have undergone, fince, in all probability, had I not been at Pimiteouy, this child would never have entered into the kingdom of heaven, where I make no doubt but it will foon be. I even hope this little angel will obtain for her father the fame grace which he has pro-

$$
\begin{aligned}
& \text { cured for her. I fhall fet out in an hour, and } \\ & \text { have given this letter to the two Frenchmen whom } \\ & \text { I leave here, and who are refolved to lay hold } \\
& \text { of the firt opportunity to return to Canada. }
\end{aligned}
$$

I am, $\mathcal{E}_{\mathrm{c}}$.

L E T T E R XXVIII.

Voyage from Pimiteouy to Kafkafquias. Courfe of the River of the Illinois, Of the Copper Mines. Of the Miffouri, Of the Mines of the River Marameg. D'scription of Fort Chartres, and of the Miffion of Kafkafquias. Of the Fruittrees of Louifiana. Defcription of the Miffiffippi above the Illinois. Different Tribes of that Nation. Some Traditions of the Indians. Their Notions about the Stars, Eclipfes and Tbunder. Tbeir Manner of calculating Time.

Kafkafquias, Ottober 20, 1721.

Madam,

Imuft ingenuoufly confefs to you, that at my departure from Pimiteouy, I was not quite fo undaunted as I pretended to be, as well for my own honour as not entirely to difhearten tho who accompanied me, fome of whom had much ado to diffemble their fear. The alarm in which I found the Illinois, their mournful fongs, the fight of the dead bodies expofed upon the frames, terrible objects, which every moment reprefented to my imagination what I muft expect, fhould I have the misfortune to fall into the hands of thefe barbarians: all this made fuch an impreffion upon me, that I had not the command of myfelf, and for feven or eight days I was not able to fleep with tranquillity.

I was not, indeed, apprehenfive of an open attack from the enemy, becaufe I had fourteen men with me, well armed and under a good commander; but every thing was to be dreaded from furprizes, there being no labour which the Indians will not undergo, in order to draw their enemies into the fnares which they lay for them. One of the moft common is to counterfeit the cry of fome wild beaft, or the voice of fome bird, in the imitation of which they are fo dexterous, that people are every day deceived by them. For inftance, being encamped at the entrance of a wood, they imagine that they hear the cry of a buffalo, deer, or wild duck; two or three run thither in hopes of finding game, and frequently never return.

The diftance between Pimiteouy and the Miffiffippi, is reckoned to be feventy leagues: I have already faid, that from the rock to Pimiteouy, there is fifteen; the former of thefe two villages is in forty one degrees, north lat. and the mouth of the river of the Illinois in forty; fo that from the rock, the courfe of this river is weftward inclining a little to the fouth, but with feveral windings or circuits. There are iflands fcattered up and down in it, fome of which are pretty large; its banks are but low in feveral places. During the fpring fpring the meadows on the right and left are for the moft part under water, and afterwards are covered with very tall grafs. It is pretended this river abounds every where with fifh, but we had not time to catch any, nor had we any fuch nets as the depth of its waters would require. We would much rather have killed a buffalo or roebuck, and of thefe we had our choice.

On the fixth, we perceived a number of buffaloes fwimming acrofs the river, with a great deal of precipitation, which we doubted not had been purfued by fome of the enemy's parties, of whom we have already fpoken; this obliged us to continue our voyage all night in order to get at as great diftance as poffible from fuch dangerous neighbours. On the morrow before day-break we paffed by the Saguimont, a large river which comes from the fouth, and five or fix leagues below that we left on the fame fide a fmaller one, called the liver of the Macopines; thefe are a large kind of root, which eaten raw is a rank poifon, but which when roafted five or fix hours or more before a flow fire, lofes all its pernicious quality. Betwixt thefe two rivers, and at an equal diftance from either, is a marh called Machoutin, precifely half way between Pimiteouy and the Miffifippi.

Soon after paffing the river of the Macopines, we perceived the banks of the Miffiffippi, which are extremely high. Notwithftanding which we were above four and twenty hours, and that frequently under full fail, before we entered it; for at this place the river of the Illinois changes its courfe from weft to fouth and by eaft. One might fay, that out of regret to its being obliged to pay the tribute of its waters to another river, it endeavours to return back to its fource.

At its entrance into the Miffiffippi, its channel runs eaft-fouth-eaft. On the ninth of this month a little after two in the afternoon, we found ourfelves in this river, which makes at prefent fo great a noife in France, leaving on our right a large meadow, whence iffues a fmall river, in which there is a great quantity of copper. Nothing can be more delightful than this whole coaft. But it is quite another thing on the left, there being on that fide very high mountains, interfperfed with rocks, amongft which grow a few cedars; but this is only a narrow chain, and conceals behind it very fine meadows.

On the tenth about nine in the morning, after failing five leagues on the Miffifippi, we arrived at the mouth of the Miffouri, which lies north-weft and fouth-fouth-eaft. Here is the fineft confluence of two rivers that, I believe, is to be met with in the whole world, each of them being about half a league in breadth; but the Miffouri is by far the moft rapid of the two, and feems to enter the Miffiffippi like a conqueror, carrying its white waters unmixed acrofs its channel quite to the oppofite fide; this colour it afterwards communicates to the Miffiffippi, which henceforth it never lofes, but hurls with precipitation to the fea itfelf.

We lay this night in a village of the Caoquias and the Tamarouas, two Illinois tribes which have been united, and together compofe no very numerous canton. This village is fituated on a fmall river which runs from the eaft, and has no water but in the fpring feafon fo that we were obliged to walk above half a league, before we could get to our cabbins. I was aftonifhed they had pitched upon fo inconvenient a fituation, efpecially as they had fo many better in their choice; but I was told that the Miffifippi wafhed the toot of that village when it was bult, that in three years it has loft half a league of its breadth, and that they were thinking of feeking out for another habitation, which is no great affair amongft the Indians.

I paffed the night in the miffionaries houre, who are two Ecclefafticks from the feminary of Quebeck, formeriy my difciples, but they muft now be my mafters. M. Taumur the eldeft of he two was abient; I found the youngeft M. le Mercier fuch as he had been reprefented to me, rigid to himfelf, full of charity to others, and difplaying in his own perfon, an amiable pattern of virtue. But he enjoyed fo ill a ftate of health, that I am afraid he will not be abe long to fupport that kind of life, which a miffionary is obliged to lead in this country.

On the eleventh after failing five leagues farther, I left on my right the river Marameg, where they are at prefent employed in fearching for a filver mine. Perhaps, your Grace may not be difplealed if I inform you what fuccefs may be expected from this undertaking. Here follows what 1 have been able to learn about this affair from a perion who is well acq ainted with it, and who has refided for feveral years on the foot. In the year 1719, the Sieur de Lochon being fent by the Weft-India company in quality of founder, having dug in a place which had been marked out to him, drew up a pretty large quantity of ore, a pound whereof, which which took up four days in melting, produced as they fay two drams of filver; but fome have fufpected him of putting in this quantity himielf. A few months afterwards he returned thither, and without thinking any more of the filver, he extracted from two or three thoufand weight of ore, fourteen pounds of very bad lead, which flood him in fourteen hundred franks. Difgufted with a labour which was fo unprofitable, he returned to France.

The company, perfuaded of the truth of the indications which had been given them, and that the incapacity of the founder had been the fole caufe of their bad fuccefs, fent in his room a Spaniard called Antonio, who had been taken at the fiege of Penfacola, had afterwards been a galley-llave, and boafted much of his having wrought in a mine at Mexico. They gave him very confiderable appointments, but he fucceeded no better than had done the Sieur de Lochon. He was not difcouraged himfelf, and others inclined to believe he had failed from his not being verfed in the conftruction of furnaces. He gave over the fearch after lead, and undertook to make filver; he dug down to the rock which was found to be eight or ten feet in thicknefs; feveral pieces of it were blown up and put into a crucible, from whence it was given out, that he extracted three or four drams of filver; but many are ftill doubtful of the truth of this fact.

About this time arrived a company of the king's miners, under the direction of one La Renaudiere, who refolving to begin with the lead mine, was able to do nothing ; becaufe neither he himfelf nor any of his company were in the leaft acquainted with the conftruction of furnaces. Nothing could be more furprizing than the facility with which the company at that time expofed themfelves to great expences, and the little precaution they took to be fatisfied of the capacity of thofe they employed. La Renaudiere and his miners not being able to produce any lead, a private company undertook the mines of Marameg, and the Sieur Renaud one of the directors, fuperintended them with care. In the month of June laft he found a bed of lead two foot in thicknefs, runinng to a great length over a chain of mountains, where he has now fet his people to work. He flatters himfelf that there is filver below the lead. Every body is not of his opinion, but time will difcover the truth.

Yefterday I arrived at Kafkafquias about nine o'clock in the morning. The Jefuits have here a very flourifhing miffion, which has lately been divided into two, thinking it convenient to have two cantons of Indians inftead of one. The moft numerous is on the banks of the Miffiffippi, of which two jefuits have the fpiritual direction: half a league below ftands fort Chartres, about the diftance of a mufket-fhot from the river. M. Dugué de Boifbrillard, a gentleman of Canada, commands here for the company, to whom this place belongs; the French are now beginning to fettle the country between this fort and the firft miffion. Four leagues farther and about a league from the river, is a large village inhabited by the French, who are almoft all Canadians and have a jefuit for their curate. The fecond village of the Illinois lies farther up the country, at the diftance of two leagues from this laft, and is under the charge of a fourth jefuit.

The French in this place live pretty much at their eafe; a Fleming, who was a domeftic of the jefuits, has taught then to fow wheat which fucceeds very well. They, have black cattle and poultry. The Illinois of their part manure the ground after their fafhion, and are very laborious. They likewife bring up poultry, which they fell to the French. Their women are very neat-handed and induftrious. They fin the wool of the buffaloe, which they make as fine as that of the Englifh fheep; nay fometimes it might even be miltaken for filk. Of this they manufacture ftuffs which are dyed black, yellow, or a deep red. Of thefe ftuffs they make robes which they few with thread made of the finews of the roe-buck. The manner of making this thread is very fimple. After ftripping the flefh from the finews of the roebuck, they expofe them to the fun for the fpace of two days; after they are dry they beat them, and then without difficulty draw out a thread as white and as fine as that of Mechlin, but much fronger.

The French canton is bounded on the north by a river, the banks of which are extremely high, fo that though the waters fometimes rife five and twenty feet, they feldom overflow their channel. All this country is open confifting of vaft meadows to the extent of five and twenty leagues, which are interfperfed with fmall copfes of very valuable wood. White mulberries efpecially are very common here; but I am furprized that the imhabitants fhould be fuffered to cut them down for the building of their houfes, efpecially, as there is a fufficient quantity of other trees equally proper for that purpofe.

( 223 )

The moft remarkable of the fruit-trees, peculiar to this country, are the Pacane, the Acimine, and the Piakimine trees. The Pacane is a nut of the fize and fhape of a large acorn. The fhell of fome of them is very thin, while others have it harder and thicker, but the fruit is fo much the lefs on that account. All have a very fine and delicate tafte; the tree rifes to a great height ; in its wood, bark, fmell and fhape of its ieaves, it feems to me greatly to refemble the filbert trees of Europe.

The Acimine is a fruit of the length of a man's finger, and an inch in diameter. Its pulp is tender and fweetih, and full of a feed much refembling that of the water melon. The tree grows to no great height or thicknefs; all thofe I have feen being nothing but fhrubs, the wood of which is very tender. Its bark is thin, its leaves long and large like thofe of the chefnut, but of a deeper green.

The Piakimine is in fhape fike a damafk plum, though fomewhat larger : its fkin is tender, its fubftance watery, and colour red; and has befides a very delicate flavour. It contains feeds which differ only from thofe of the Acimine, in being fomewhat fmaller. The Indians make a pafte of this fruit, which they bake into loaves of the thicknefs of a man's finger, and of the confiftence of a dried pear. The tafte feems at firft fomewhat difagreeable, but people are eafily accuftomed to it. It is very nourifhing, and a fovereign remedy, as they pretend, againft a loofenefs and bloodyflux. The tree which bears this fruit, is a very fine one, and about the fize of our ordinary plumtress. Its leaves have five points, its wood is of a middling hardnefs, and its bark very rough.

The Ofages, a pretty numerous nation fettled on the banks of the river, bearing their own name, which runs into the Miffouri about forty leagues from its confluence with the Miffifippi, depute fome of their people once or twice every year to fing the calumet among the Kafkafquias, and they are now actually here at prefent. I have juft feen a Miffourian woman who tells me, her nation is the firft we meet with in going up the Miffouri ; from whence we have given it this name, on account of our not knowing its proper appellation. Their fettlement is eighty leagues from the confluence of that river with the Miffifippi.

A little higher we find the Canfez, then the OEFotatas, called by fome the Mactotatas ; afterwards the Aïouez, and laftly the Panis, a very numerous nation, and divided into feveral cantons, which have names very different from one another. This womanhas confirmed to me, what I had before learn* ed from the Sioux, that the Miffouri rifes from very high and bare mountains, behind which there is another large river, which probably rifes from thence alfo and runs to the weftward. This teftimony is of fome weight, becaufe no Indians we know of are accuftomed to travel fo much as the Miffouris.

All thefe nations of whom I have been fpeaking, dwell upon the weftern bank of the Miffouri, excepting the Aiouez who live on the eaftern, and are neighbours to the Sioux and their allies. The moft confiderable rivers which fall into the Miffifippi

- (225 )

Ilfippi above the river of the Illinois, are in the firt place, the river of Buffaloes, which is as the diftance of twenty leagues from the former, and comes from the weitward; a fine falt-pit has been difcovered in its neighbourhood. Pits of the fame kind have been found on the banks of the Marameg, twenty leagues from hence. About forty leagues farther is the AJJenefipi, or river at the rock; becaufe its mouth is directly oppofite to a mountain placed in the river itfelf, where travellers affirm rock-chryftal is to be found.

Twenty-fiye leagues higher up, we find on the right hand the Ouiforfing, by which father Marquette and the Sieur Joliet entered the Miffifippi, when they firft difcovered it. The Aifouez who are fettled in this place, lying in 43 deg. 30 min . north latitude, who are grear travellers, and as is faid march five and twenty or thirty leagues a day, when without their families, tell us that after leaving their country we fhould in three days arrive amongtt a people called Omans, who have white fkins and fair hair, efpecially the women. They add, that this people is continually at war with the Panis and other more remote Indians towards the weft, and that they have heard them fpeak of a great lake very far from their country, on the banks of which are people refembling the French, withbuttons on their cloaths, living in cities, and ufing horfes in hunting the Buffalo, and cloathed with the fkins of that animal ; but without any arms except the bow and arrow.

On the left fide about fifty leagues above the river of Buffaloes, the river Moingona iffues from the midft of an immenfe medow, which fwarms

Vol. II.
Q
with
with Buffaloes and other wild beafts: at its entrance into the Miffifippi, it is very fhallow as well as narrow ; neverthelefs, its courfe from north to weft, is faid to be two hundred and fifty leagues in length. It rifes from a lake and is faid to form a fecond, at the diftance of fifty leagues from the firft.

Turning to the left from this fecond lake we enter into Blue River, fo called from its bottom, which is an earth of that colour. It difcharges itfelf into the river of St. Peter. Going up to the Moingona, we find great plenty of pit coal, and a hundred and fifty leagues from its mouth there is a very large cape, which caufes a turn in the river, in which place its waters are red and ftinking. It is affirmed, that great quantities of mineral ftones and fome antimony have been found upon this cape.

A league above the mouth of the Moingona, there are two rapids or ftrong currents of a confiderable length in the Miffifippi, where paffengers are obliged to unload and carry their pirogues: and above the fecond rapide, that is about twenty leagues from the Moingona, there are lead mines on both fides of the river, which were difcovered fome time ago, by a famous traveller of Canada called Nicholas Perrot, whofe name they ftill bear. Ten leagues above the Ouifconfing, and on the fame fide is a meadow fixty leagues in length, and bounded by mountains which afford a delightful profpect; there is another on the weft fide, but it is not of fuch a length. Twenty leagues higher than the extremity of the firft meadow, the river grows wider, and is here called le lac de bon Secours. This is a league over and feven leagues in circuit. Nicholas Perrot built a fort on the right fide.

On leaving this lake you meet with $i \bar{T}$ ife Peléé, or Bald Illand, fo named from its having no trees upon it; this is a very fine meadow: and the French of Canada have frequently made it the center of their commerce for the weftern parts, and many have even wintered there, all this country being very plentiful of game. Three leagues above Bald Inand you leave on your right hand the riviere de Sainte Croix, or river of the Holy Crofs, which proceeds from the neighbourhood o: Lake Superior; copper is faid to have been found near its mouth. Some leagues farther you leave on the left the river of St. Peter, the banks of which are inhabited by the Sioux, and its mouth is at no great diftance from St. Anthony's fall. Beyond this great cafcade the Miffifippi is altogether unknown.

To return to the Illinois; if what I have heard afferted in feveral places be true, and which the Miffouri woman above-mentioned has alfo confirmed to me, that they and the Miamis come from the banks of a very diffant fea, to the weftward *, it would feem that their firft flation after they made their defcent into this coun ry was the Moingona : at leaft it is certain, that one of their tribes bears that name. The reft are known under the [^5]names of Peorias, Tamarouas, Caoquias, and Kaf. kafquias ; thefe tribes are at prefent very much confounded, and are become very inconfiderable. There remains on'y a very faiall number of the Kafkafquias, and the two villages of that name are almoft entirely compofed of the Tamarouas and Metchiganoias, a foreign nation adopted by the Kafkafquias, and originally fettled on the banks of a fmall river you meet with going down the Miffifippi.

This is, Madam, all I can at prefent inform you of with refpect to Louifiana, which country I have but juft entered; but before I conclude this letter, I muft impart to you a few circumftances which I have learned on my journey from the river St. Jofeph to this place, and which will ferve as a fupplement to what I have already faid of the Indians in general.

You might have feen in the fable of Atahentfic expelled from heaven, fome traces of the firft woman driven out of the terreftrial paradife, as a punifhment of her difobedience; and of the deluge, as alfo of the ark in which Noah faved himfelf with his family. This circumftance prevents me from agreeing to the opinion of P. de Acofta, whe alledges that this tradition does not refpect the univerfal deluge, but another peculiar to America. In effect, the Algonquins and all the nations who fpeak their language, fuppofing the creation of the firft man, fay that his pofterity having almoft entirely perifhed by a general inundation, a perfon named Meflon, whom others call Saketcbak, who faw the whole world overwhelmed by the waters from the overflowing of a lake, fent a raven to the bottom of the abyfs in order to bring him fome earth; that this raven having failed to execute his commiffion, he fent a mufk rat which had better fuccefs; with the fmall quantity of earth which this animal brought him, he reftored the world to its former ftate and condition; that he flot arrows into the trunks of trees which ftill appear, and that thofe arrows were changed into branches: that he performed feveral other wonders; and that out of gratitude for the fervice the mufk-rat had done him, he married a female of his fpecies, by whom he had children who repeopled the earth: that he had communicated his immortality to a certain favage, which he gave him in a little packet, forbidding him, at the fame time to open it, under the penalty of lofing fo precious a gift.

The Hurons and the Iroquois fay, that Taronbinagon, the king of heaven, gave his wife fo rude a blow with his foot, that it made her tumble down from heaven to earth; that this woman fell upon the back of a tortoife, who by removing the waters of the deluge with his feet, at laft difcovered the earth, and carried the woman to the foot of a tree, where the brought forth twins, and that the elder whom they call Tabouifaron, killed his younger brother.

It is not at all furprifing; that thefe people fo indifferent about the paft, and to whom the confideration of the future gives fo little uneafinefs, fhould know almoft nothing of the heavens, and make no difference between the planets and fixed flars, unlefs it be their dividing thefe laft as we do, into conftellations. The Pleiades, they call the Dencers, and give the name of the Bear to the four firft itars of that conftellation, which we call the Great Bear ; the three others which compofe its tail are, according to them, three hunters who purfue the bear; and the little ftar which accompanies that in the middle, is, with them a kettle with which the fecond is loaded. The Indians of Acadia call this and the next conftellation fimply the Great and Little Bear; but is there not reafon to fufpect, that when they fpoke in this manner to the Sieur Lefcarbot, they only repeated what they had before heard from the French themfelves.

(230)

The Indians, for the moft part, call the polar ftar, the flar which has no motion: It is this which directs their courfe by night, as the fun ferves them for a compafs by day. They have likewife other marks by which to diftinguifh the north. They pretend to have obferved that the tops of trees incline a little to that fide, as alfo that the interior pellicles of their bark are thicker on that fide. They do not, howevert, truft fo entirely to this, as to neglect other precautions to prevent their wandering, and to help them to find their way back to a place from whence they had fet out.

As to what regards the courfe of the flars, the caules of the celeftial phenomena, the nature of meteors, and other fuch like things; they are with refpect to all thefe, as with refpect to every thing which does not affect the fenfes, profoundly ignorane and perfectly indifferent. When an eclipfe happens, they imagine there is a great battle in heaven, and fhoot arrows in the air, in order to drive away the pretended enemies of the fun and moon. The Hurons in an eclipfe of the moon, were perfuaded fhe was indifpofed, and in order to recover her out of her diftemper, ufed to make a great noife, accompanied with abundance of ceremonies and with prayers. Particularly, they never failed to throw ftones at the dogs and beat them cruelly with fticks to make them cry, imagining the moon to be fond of thefe animals.

Thefe Indians, as well as many others, could never be brought to believe, that an eclipfe was an indifferent thing and purely natural: they drew good or bad auguries from it according to the place of the fky in which that ftar happened to be obfcured. Nothing aftonifhed them more than to fee with what exactnefs the miffionaries foretold thefe phenomena, and they concluded from thence, that they ought likewife to forefee their confequences.

Thefe people are equally ignorant of the nature of thunder; fome taking it to be the voice of a particular fpecies of men, who fly in the air, while others imagine this noife proceeds from certain unknown birds. According to the Montagnais, it is the effort of a certain genius, in order to vomit up a ferpent he had fwallowed, and they fupport this opinion by alledging that when thunder falls on a tree they difcover a figure on it, fomething refembling that animal.

$$
\text { Q } 4 \text { All }
$$

( 232 )

All of them reckon by lunar months; for the moft part the year has but twelve; fome, however, give it always thirteen. There are no great inconveniencies attending this diverfity amongtt people who have no annals, and whofe affairs do not depend on annual epochas. There is likewife a great variety in the names of the feafons and months amongft them; becaufe in all thefe countries the feafons for hunting and fifhing, feed-time and harveft, the birth and fall of the leaf, the paffages of particular beafts and birds, the time when the roe-bucks change their hair, and when different animals are in rut, ferve to diftinguifh all there things which, befides, vary confiderably in the different cantons.

In fome nations, the years are reckoned by the figns, except when a perfon intends to fpecify his age, and on fome occafions, when they make ufe of lunar months. There is no where any diftinction of weeks, and the days have no name in any of their languages. They have four fixed points in the day, to wit, fun-rifing and fun-ferting, midday and mid-night, with refpect to which or any other time of the day, they are never deceived. But the aftronomical exactnefs to make the lunar years agree with the folar, of which the Baron de la Hon$\tan$ does them the honour, is a mere imagination of that writer.

They have no chronological fupputation, and if they preferve the epochas of certain remarkable events, they do not reckon the time elapfed fince to a fcrupulous exactnefs; but content themfelves with retaining the facts themfelves; and have invented vented feveral means whereby to perpetuate the memory of them. For inftance, the Hurons and Iroquois have porcelain in their publick treafures on which are painted figures, which recal the remembrance of memorable incidents. Others make ufe of knots tied after a certain fafhion, and if the imagination is fet at work to found out their meaning, they are not therefore deceived. Laftly , all of them reckon by units till the number ten, and then by decads or tens to a hundred, and fo by hundreds to tens of hundreds or thoufands, farther than which they never carry any calculations.

LET TER XXIX.

Of the Colony of the Illinois. Voyage to Akanfas. Defcription of the Country.

Kafkafquias, November 8, $172 \mathbf{I}$.
Madam,
Y Y laft letter is now gone for Canada, whence I am affured it will foon be forwarded for France, by the way of Cape Breton. Befides, fhould it mifcarry by the way, the lofs would not be very great: I begin this letter likewife at Kafkafquias, but, in all probability, fhall not finifh it here, having been above a month in this place, and now haftening my departure as faft as poffible.

As I have feen nothing of Louifiana as yet, except this poft, being the firlt of them all with refpect to antiquity ; I cannot form any judgement of it, by comparing it with the reft. What feems certain to me is, that this has a double advantage, one of which can never be difputed, and the other, at leaft at prefent renders it neceffary to the whole province.
province. The firft is its fituation, which is very near Canada, with which it will at all times preferve a communication, equally ufeful to both colonies. The fecond is, that it is capable of becoming the granary of Louifiana, which it is able to furnifh with corn in abundance, even fhould it be peopled quite to the fea.

The foil is not only extremely proper for wheat, but, befides, refufes nothing neceffary or ufeful for human life. The climate is extremely temperate, lying in thirty-eight degrees, thirty-nine minutes north latitude; cattle and fheep would multiply here wonderfully, even the wild Buffaloes might be tamed, and great advantages drawn from a trade of their wool and hides, and from their fupplying the inhabitants with food. The air is very wholfome, and if fome diftempers are feen in it, they ought to be imputed to the poverty or libertinifm of the inhabitants, and perhaps, in fome meafure, to the lands being newly cleared; but this laft inconvenience cannot always laft, and the change of climate will be nothing to thofe who may happen to be born here afterwards: In the laft place, we are more affured of the friendhip of the !llinois, than of any other Indian nation in Canada, the Abenaquis excepted. They are almoft all Chriftians, of a mild difpofition, and extremely well affected towards the French.

Here I am, Madam, at the diftance of a hundred and fifty leagues from the place where I began this letter: I fhall finifh it here, and give it to a traveller, who reckons to be much fooner at NewOrleans than I , as he intends to ftop no where, whereas I thall be obliged to make fome ftay among the Natchez. Befides, I had laid my account of two things at my departure from the Illinois; firt, that having a very rapid river to defcend, where there was no danger of being ftopt by thofe falls and rapides, fo frequent in the rivers of Canada, I fhould not be long on my voyage, though I had the fpace of four hundred leagues to traverfe, by means of the circuits the river makes; next, that as my courfe lay always to the fouthward, I hould have no occafion to take any precautions againt the cold; but I have been deceived in boch thefe particulars. I have been obliged to make a much flower paffage than I had formerly on the lakes, and have felt a cold full as piercing as I ever knew at Quebec.

It is true, it was quite otherwife at Kafkafquias fome days ago, when 1 left it; but I have fince learned on my way hither, that the river was at firft frozen over in fuch a manner that people croffed it in carriages, notwithftanding it is at that place half a league broad, and more rapid than the Rhone. This is the more furpiifing, as for the moft part, excepting a few nlight frofts occafioned by the north and north-weft winds, the winter is in this country hardly fenfib'e. The river has not been frozen wherever I have been, but as I was obliged to remain all the day in an open boat, and confequently, was expofed to all the injuries of the weather, and had taken no precautions againt a cold I did not forefee, I have fuffered very great hardfhips.

Could I have made more hafte, I fhould have found a fenfible diminution of this inconvenience every day; but it is neceffary to ufe great caution in failing on the Miffifippi. People do not chufe to venture themfelves in canoes of bark, by reafon that that the river conftantly carries down with the current a number of trees, or elfe receives them from other rivers which fall into it ; and many of thefe trees ftopping on fome point of land or on fome fhoal, there is danger every moment of running foul of a branch or a root under water, which would be fufficient to break thefe frail vehicles to pieces, efpecially when in order to avoid an enemy or for fome other reafon you are obliged to travel by night, or to fet out before day.

They muft therefore fubftitute pirogues in room of canoes of bark, that is to fay, trunks of trees hollowed, which are not fubject to thefe inconveniencies, but are bad going veffels, and not fo eafily managed. I have one made of a wall-nut-tree, but fo narrow that it cannot carry fail; and my guides being accuftomed to thofe little paddles made ufe of in canoes, are far from being expert at the management of the oar. Befides, if the wind rifes ever fo little, the water comes into the pirogue; and this often happens at this feafon of the year.

On the tenth of November at funfet, I embarked in the little river of Kafkafquias, and though it was not two leagues to the Miffifippi, yet I was obliged to encamp at half way, and the next day I could not get further than fix leagues down the river. The leaves fall fooner in this place than in France, and do not begin to bud till about the end of May, notwithftanding that it fnows very feldom here, and alchough, as I have already obferved, the winters are exceeding temperate. What then can be the reafon of this backwardnefs of the fpring: for my part I can fee no other than the thicknefs thicknefs of the forefts, which prevents the earth from being warmed by the fun foon enough to caufe the fap to afcend.

On the $\mathbf{1 2 t h}$, after having advanced two leagues, I paffed Cape St. Antbony on the left hand. Here the firft canes are feen; thefe bear a great refemblance to thofe growing in Europe, but are taller and ftronger. It is pretended they never appear but in good lands; but thefe lands muft be very moift and wet, and confequently fitter to bear rice than wheat. When the cane lands are to be cleared, the canes are not to be plucked up by the roots; this would be a very difficult tafk, their knotty roots lying very deep, and being twined or linked together by a great number of fibres, which extend very far. Thefe roots have naturally a beautiful varnifh, not a little refembling thofe of the bamboos of Japan, of which thofe fine canes are made, which are fold by the Dutch under the name of rattans.

When a field overgrown with thefe canes is to be cultivated, it is fufficient to cut them clofe to the ground: they are afterwards left to dry, and are then fet on fire, the afhes ferving for manure, and the fire for opening the pores of the earth, which is afterwards tilled up, and fown with rice, maiz, water-melons, and in a word, with all forts of grain and pulfe, excepting wheat, which in thefe fat lands exhaufts itfelf by running up into ftraw, and produces no grain. This defect might be eafily remedied, by ftrewing the ground with fand, and fowing it for fome years with maiz or Indian corn.

The high lands and other kinds of foil, not $\mathrm{li}^{-}$ able to be overflowed by the river, are even already very well adapted for producing corn, and if the trials made in fome places have not fucceeded, becaufe the corn has been blafted or mildewed; it is owing to this circumftance, that the country not being cleared, the wind has not free accefs to difperfe thofe noxious vapours which generate mildews. An evident proof of which may be drawn from this, that amongft the Illinois, where there is more meadow than wood-land, wheat thrives and ripens as well as in France.

On the thirteenth, after a very warm night, we advanced about three leagues, in fpite of a foutherly wind, which till encreafed, and at laft became fo violent that we were obliged to halt. A heavy rain fell towards the evening, and 'about midnight the wind fprung up at north-weft, which brought on that exceffive cold I have already fpoken of. To compleat our misfortune, an accident detained us all the following day, though we were not fafe to remain where we then were. Not long ago the Cherokees maffacred thirty Frenchmen near this place; they were commanded by a fon of M. de Ramezar governor of Montreal, and a fon of the Baron detLonguevil King's-lieutenant of that city. Befides thefe Indians who are not as yet reconciled with us, we were kept in continual alarms for fear of the Outagamies, Sioux and Chacachas; and I had not above three men in my company.

On the fifteenth, the wind changed to the north, and the cold continued to encreafe. We advanced four leagues to the fouthward, and then found that the river run four leagues more towards the north. Immediately after this uncommon winding we paffed on the left the fine river Ouabache, by means of which there is a paffage as far as the country of the Iroquois, when the waters are high. This river, at its entrance into the Miffiffippi, is not lefs than a quarter of a league in breadth. There is not, in my opinion, a place in all Louifiana more proper for a fettlement than this, nor where it is of greater importance to us to have one. The whole country watered by the Ouabache and Obio, which runs into it, is extremely fertile confifting of vaft meadows, which feed thoufands of buffaloes. Befides its communication with Canada is as eafy as that by the river of the Illinois, and the paffage much fhorter. A fort with a good garrifon would keep the Indians in awe, efpecially the Cherokees, who are the moft numerous nation on this continent.

Six leagues below the mouth of the Ouabache, and on the fame fide, we found the coaft extremely high, and the earth of a yellow colour, from whence fome have imagined that there are mines of iron in this place. We made a good progrefs this day which was the fixteenth, but fuffered extremely by the cold : it continued to encreafe the following days, though the wind had changed to fouth-fouthweft : we were even obliged as we advanced to break the ice, which was formed on the, furface of the water. On the nineteenth we got four leagues farther on our way, after which we were ftopped by a fouth wind. I never found a north wind colder than this. It is probable, this was ftill the north-welt wind which continued to blow, but that the land reflected it fometimes on one fide, fome-times on another, according as our courfe lay upon the river.

$$
\text { Vol. II. } \mathbf{R} \text { times }
$$

There is a fpecies of wild cats called Pijoux, very numerous in thefe parts. Thefe bear a great refemblance to ours, but are larger. I obferved that fome of them had very fhort tails, and others again much longer and thicker: they have likewife a very fierce look, and I have been informed they are very ravenous and good hunters. The forefts are full of wall-nut-trees, refembling thofe of Canada, and their roots have feveral properties not obferved in the others. They are very foft, and their bark affords a black dye; but their principal ufe confifts in medicine. They ftop a loofenefs, and furnifh an excellent emetick.

On the twentieth, there fell a great deal of fnow, fo that we did not ftir from the place where we were, all that day; next day it grew milder, but the following night a wind at fouth-weft cleared the fky, and the cold began afrefh. Next day in the morning, the brandy left in the pirogue was found as thick as frozen oil, and the Spanifh wine I ufed for mafs, was quite frozen. The further we defcended the more windings we found in the river, the wind followed all its meanders', and from whatever fide it came, the cold ftill continued exceffive. In the memory of man nothing like it had been feen in this country.

This day, we perceived a poft erected, on the right fide of the river, on taking a near view of it, we found it was a monument fet up by the Illinois, on account of an expedition they had made fometime ago againft the Cbicachas. There were two figures of men without heads, and fome others entire. The firft reprefented the dead, and the fecond the captives. One of my guides informed me upon this occafion, that when any French were amongft either, they were reprefented with their arms upon their haunches, in order to diftinguifh them from the Indians, whofe arms were left in a hanging pofture. This diftinction is not merely arbitrary, but proceeds from their having obferved the French to make ufe of this attitude frequently, which is never done amongtt them.

( 243 )

Garcilaffo de la Vega mentions the Chicachas, in his hiftory of the conqueft of Florida, and places them nearly in the fame part of the country where they are at prefent. He reckons them amongtt thofe nations of Florida who fubmitted to the Spaniards; but this pretended fubmiffion lafted no- longer than the Spaniards were in their neighbourhood, and it is certain they fold the victory they gained over them very dear. They are ftill accounted the braveft foldiers in Louifiana, and were much more numerous in the time of Ferdinand de Soto, than at prefent : but as to the riches which this hiftorian attributes to them, I neither underftand whence they had them, nor how the fource of them comes to be dried up, for at prefent they are neither more opulent nor better civilized than the reft of the Indians.

Our alliance with the Illinois has fet us at variance with the Chicachas, and the Englifh of Ca rolina blow up the diffention. Our fettlement in Louifiana is a great eye-fore to them : as it is a barrier which we have placed between their powerful colonies in North-America and Mexicos and we muft expect they will employ every method in their power to deftroy it. The Spaniards who fee us with fo much jealoufy ftrengthening ourfelves in this country, are not as yet fenfible of the important fervices wé thereby render them. A few days after we paffed by this monument of the Illinois, the Chicachas had their revenge of two Frenchmen, who followed me in a pirogue. Thefe Indians lying in ambufh among the canes on the barks of the river, as foon as they faw the French oppofite to them, made a rufting among the canes without fhewing themfelves; the two men believing it was a bear or fome other wild beaft drew near in order to take it ; but juft as they were going to land, they difcharged their mufkets at them, which laid them dead on the fpot. I was very lucky not to be perceived by them; for my people would lofe no opportunity of hunting.

On the twenty-third, after a very cold night, we had a very fine day, and though the ground was ftill covered with fnow, the cold was fupportable. On the morrow we paffed by the river of the Chicachas, which is but narrow though it has a long courfe. Its mouth lies north and fouth. From hence to Kafkafquias are reckoned eightyfix leagues; but the way by land would be fhorter by one half. Nothing could have been more agreeable than this navigation had the feafon been milder : the country is delightful, and in the forefts there are a number of ever-green trees; the few meadows there likewife preferve their verdure, and a confiderable number of well wooded inlands. fome of whom are pretty large, form very beautiful canals through which the largeft fhips may fafely pafs : it being affirmed that there is fixty fathom water in this river above a hundred and fifty leagues from the fea.

As to the forefts which almoft entirely cover this immenfe country, there is nothing, perhaps, in nature comparable to them, whether we confider the fize and height of the trees, or their variety, and the advantages which may be drawn from them : for, excepting dye-wood, which require a warmer foil, and are only to be met with between the tropiciss, there is hardly any fort of trees, which can be mentioned, that are not to be found here. There are forefts of cyprefs, eight or ten leagues in extent, all the trees of which are of a thicknefs proportionable to their height, furpaffing every thing we have of that kind in France. That fort of ever-green laurel, which we have called the tulip-tree on account of the fhape of its flower, is now beginning to be known in Europe. This grows to a greater height than the chefnut-tree of India, and its leaf is much more beautiful. The palm is ftill larger and thicker, and yields a balm not much inferior to that of Peru. All the known fpecies of nuttrees are likewife to be found here in great quan-- tities, and all the woods proper for building or carpenter's work; but care muft be had to avoid thofe which grow on the banks of the river, or in that fpace which is liable to be overflowed by the rifing of the ftream, for their roots being continually foaked in water, they would be too heavy and apt to rot very foon.

At length I arrived at the firf village of the Akanjas on the feçond of December about ten o'clock in the morning. *This village ftands in a fmall meadow on the weftern bank of the MiffifGupi. There are three others within the fpace R 3 of eight leagues, every one of which contains a nation or particular tribe, and in one of the four there are even two tribes, but all of them are comprehended under the general name of the Akanfas. The Indians inhabiting the village where I am now revifiting, are called Ouyapes. The weftern company have here a magazine or warehoufe at which goods are foon expected, and they have likewife a factor here who is very uneafy at being obliged to wait for them fo long.

The river of Akanfas, which is faid to have its rife at a great diftance, difcharges its waters into the Miffimppi at two mouths, about four leagues from each other. The firft is about eight leagues from hence. This river, it is faid, has its rife in the country of a nation of Indians called Black Panis, who, I believe, are better known under the name of Panis Ricaras. I have with me a flave of that nation. It is very difficult to get up the river of the Akanfas, on account of the great number of rapides; and the water being in many places fo flallow that travellers are obliged to drag their pirogues.

The river divides at the diftance of feven leagues above the fecond and laft of its mouths, and at the diftance of two leagues only, above the firf. A fine river, called the White River, which comes from the country of the Ofages, falls into it. Two leagues higher up are the Torimas and Topingas, who inhabit one village. Two leagues farther are the Southouis. The Kappas are fituated a little higher up. This nation was very numerous in the time of Ferdinand de Soto, nor had they much decreafed when M. de la Sale difcovered the Miffilfippi. Oppofite to their village may be feen the melancholy melancholy ruins of Mr. Law's grant, of which the company now remain the proprietors.

It was to this place, that the nine thoufand German palatinates were to have been fent; and it has been a great lofs that that defign proved abortive. There is not, perhaps, a country in all Louifiana, excepting that of the Illinois, where there is a better foil, for producing all forts of grain and feeding of cattle. Mr. Law has been very ill ufed, as well as the greateft part of thofe to whom grants were given. In all probability, it will be fome time before fuch levies are made again, there is occafion for them in the mother country; and befides, we commonly regulate our conduct upon the firtt fuccefs of fuch enterprizes, without confidering what has occafioned their failure, in order to correct it for the future.

I found the village of the Ouyapes in the greateft defolation. Some time ago, a Frenchman paffing this way was taken ill of the fmall-pox : the infection was at firf communicated to a few of the Indians, and foon after to the whole canton. The burial-place appeared like a wood of ftakes and pofts newly erected, on which was fufpended almoft every thing in ufe amongt thefe barbario ans.

I pitched my tent pretty near the village, and all the night I heard nothing but weeping, in which the men joined as well as the women, inceffantly repeating the word nibabani, as I have heard it among the Illinons, and pretty ruch in the fame tone. The evening before, I faw a woman weeping over her fon's grave, and pouring a great quantity of fagamity upon it. Another had lighted a fire befide a neighbouring tomb, probably in order to warm the deceafed perfon. The Akanfas are reckoned the largeft and handfomeft men of all the Indians of this continent, and are called by way of diftinction les beaux bommes, or the handfome men. It is believed, and perhaps for this reafon, that they have the fame origin with the Canfez of the Miffouri, and the Poutewatamies of Canada. But my pirogue is now loaded and I have only time to clofe my letter, affuring you, that I am, &c.

Akanfas, December 2, 172 I .

LETTER XXX.

Voyage from the Akanfas to the Natchez. Defcription of the Country. Of the River of the Yafous. Of the Cuffoms, Manners, and Religion of the Natchez.

At the Natcbez, December 25, 1721.

Madam,

ISet out from the village of the Ouyapes on the third of December, fomewhat late in the evening; I however pitched my tent that night a little below the firft mouth of the river of the Akanfas, which feems to be about five hundred paces in breadth. Next day I paffed the fecond, which is very narrow, and, on the fifth, pufhed as far as the Pointe Coupeé, or Cut Point. This was a pretty high point, which run out into the river on the Weft fide, and which the river has cut fo that it is become an ifland; but the new channel is not, as yet, navigable, unlefs when the waters are high. From this place to the principal branch of the river of the Akanfas, are reckoned two and twenty leagues, but there cannot be above ten in a ftreight line; for the river is very ferpentine, during the fpace of feventy leagues, which muft be traverfed in going from the village of the Ouyapes to the river of the Yafous, or Yachous, which I entered on the ninth in the afternoon. There has not fallen any fnow in this place, as amongft the llinois, but there has been a hoar froft, which has fhattered the young trees, with which the low points and wet lands are covered, in fuch manner, that it looks as if all their branches had been purpofely broken off by a ftick.

The entrance into the river of the Yafous lies North-Weft and South-Eaft, and is about an $A r$ pent in breadth. Its waters are of a reddifh colour, and are faid to affect thofe who drink them with the bloody flux. The air is, befides, extremely unwholefume. I had three leagues to travel before I reached the fort, which 1 found all in mourning, on account of the death of Monf. Bizart, its governor. Wherever I had been in Louifiana, I had heard the higheft character of this officer from all my countrymen. He was a native of Canada, and fon of a Swifs major of Montreal. At the Yafous I was told moft extraordinary things of his religion, piety, and zeal, to which, at laft, he fell a victim. I hey all regretted him as their father, and agreed that the colony had fuffered an irreparable lofs.

He had built the fort in a bad fituation, and, before he died, had thought of removing it a league farther off, to a fine meadow, where the air was more wholefome and where there was a village of the Yafous, mixed with the Couroas and Ofogoulas, who altogether may fend about two hundred fighting men into the fie d. We live in pretty good correfpondence with them, but, at the fame time repofe no great confidence in them, on account of the connections which the Yafous particularly maintain with the Englifh.

There are a great many alligators in this river, and I have feen two of them from twelve to fifteen feet in length. They are never heard but in the night-time, and their cry fo much refembles the bellowing of bulls, that people are frequently deceived by it. Our people, notwithftanding, bathe in this river as freely as in the Seine. On my teftifying my furprize at this, I was told, That they had nothing to fear ; that indeed, when in the water, they were conftantly furrounded by thefe animals, but that none of them came near them, and feemed only to watch them, in order to fall upon them, the moment they were going to leave the river: that then, in order to drive them away, they made a fplafhing in the water with a ftick, which they took care to be provided with, and which made thefe animals tly to fuch a diftance, that they had fufficient time to fecure themfelves.

The company has a ware-houre at this port, as they have at the Akanfas; but the fort and territory belong to a private company, conifting of M. Le Blanc, fecretary of ftate ; M. le Comte de BelleInle, M. le Marquis d' Arsfeld, and M. le Biond, brigadier Ingeneer. This laft refides in the colony in quality of director-general of the company. I cannot well comprehend what has made them pitch upon the river of the Yafous for the place of their grant. They had affuredly much better lands, and more advantageous fituations in their choice. 'Tis true, it is a matter of importance to fecure this river, the fource of which is not far from Carolina; but a fort with a good garrifon would have been fufficient for this purpofe, as well as to keep the Yafous Yafous in awe, who are allies to the Chicahas. The being obliged to be always on their guard againft the Indians, who border upon the Englifh, is not the way to fettle a grant upon a folid foundation.

I left the Yafous on the tenth, and, on the thirteenth, had it not been for a Natché Indian, who afked his paffage from me in order to return to his own country, I hould have been loft in a whirlpool, with which none of my guides were acquainted, and which cannot be perceived till one is fo far engaged with it, that it is impoffible to get clear of it. It lies on the left, at the foot of a large cape, where it is faid, there is a very good ftone quarry : this is what people are moft afraid of wanting in this colony', but, to make amends, they may eafily make as many bricks as they will.

On the fifieenth we arrived at the Natchez. This canton, the fineft, moft fertile, and beft peopldd of all Louifiana, lies at the diftance of forty leagues from the Yafous, upon the fame fide of the river. The landing place is oppofite a high and rugged bank, at the foot of which runs a fmall rivulet, which is capable of receiving only fhallops and pirogues. From this firft bank we go up a fecond, or rather a hill, whofe afeent is tollerably eafy, on the fummit of which ftands a redoubt, enclofed by a fimple palifade. The name of a fort has been given to this entrenchment.

Several little hills appear above this laft, and, when thefe are once paft, we fee, on all fides, very large meadows feparated from one another by fmall copfes of wood, which produce a very fine effect. The trees moft common in thefe woods are the oak and and nut-trees ; and the foil is every where excellent. The late M. d'Iberville, who firft entered the Miffiffippi by its mouth, having penetrated as far up as the Natchez, found the country fo delightful, and fo advantageoully fituated, that he concluded the metropolis of the new colony could no where be better placed; and accordingly traced out the plan of it, and intended to call it by the name of Rofalie, which is that of the lady of the chancellor of Portchartrain. But it fhould feem this project was not to be put in execution fo foon, tho' our geographers have always thought fit to lay down in their maps the town of Rofalie at the Natchez.
' 'Tis certain it was neceffary to begin by a fettlement nearer the fea; but if ever Louifiana becomes a flourifhing colony, as it may very well happen, it is my opinion there cannot be a better fituation for a capital than this. It is not liable to be overflowed by the river, has a very pure air, and a great extent of country; the foil is $!$ well watered, and proper for producing every thing. Nor is it at too great a diftance from the fea, and there is nothing to prevent fhipping from going up to it. Laftly, it is at a convenient diftance from all thofe places where there can be any defign of making fettlements. The company have a magazine, and keep a principal factor here, who, as yet, has very little to do.

Amongft a great number of private grants, which are already in a condition to produce fomething valuable, there are two of the largeft extent that is allowed, being each four leagues fquare; one belonging to a company of Meloins, the inhabitants of it, and which they bought of M. Hubert, commiffary commiffary in chief, and prefident of the council in Lovifiana; and the other to the company, who have fent work-men thither from Clerac, in order to make tobacco. Thefe two grants are fituated in fuch a manner, as to form a perfect triangle with the fort, the diftance of one angle from the other being one league. Half way between the two grants lies the great village of the Natchez. I have carefully vifited all thefe places, and here follows what I have obferved moft remarkable in them.

The grant of the Maloins is well fituated, and nothing is waning to make it turn out to advantage but Negroes, or hired fervants. I fhould rather chufe to employ the latter, becaufe, the time of their fervice being expired, they become inhabitants, and increafe the number of the king's natural fubjects; whereas the former always continue aliens: and who can be certain but that, by being multiplied in our colonies, they may not one day become our moft formidable enemies! Can we depend upon flaves who are only attached to us by fear, and who never can have the pleafure of calling the place in which they are born by the endearing name of their native country?

The firt night I lay in this fettlement, there happened a great alarm about nine o'clock in the evening; upon afking the reafon of it, I was told there was, in the neighbourhood, a beaft of an unknown fpecies, of an extraordinary bulk, and whofe cry did not in the leaft refemble that of any known animal. Nobody however could fay he had feen it, and they formed a judgment of its fize entirely from its ftrength : it had already carried off fome fheep and calves, and worried fome cows. I told thofe who gave me this account, that an enraged wolf might very well have done all this, and that, as to its cry, people were deceived in thefe matters every day. I could perfuade nobody, they ftitl would have it that it was fome monftrous beaft. It was heard again, and every one ran out armed with what he could find, but it was to no purpofe.

The company's grant is ftill more advantageoufly fituated than that of the Maloins. The fame river waters both, and falls into the Miffiflppi, two leagues from this place; a magnificent foreft of cyprefs trees forms a barrier to it, and covers all the back fettlements.

I have feen in the garden of the Sieur le Noir, the principal factor, a very fine cotton tree, and, a little lower, we begin to find wild Indigo. A trial of it has not yet been made, but there is reafon to believe that it will fucceed as well as that which was found on the inland of Sc. Domingo, where it is as much efteenie as the Indigo tranfported from foreign parts. Befides, experience informs us that a foil which produces this plant naturally is very well adapted to reccive iortign feed.

The great village of the Natchez is at prefent reduced to a fmall number of cabbins; the reafon of which, I am told, is, that the Indians, whore great chief has a right to take every thing from them, remove to as great a diftance from him as they poffibly can, by which means feveral villages of thefe people have been formed at fome diftance from this. The Tious, their allies and ours, have one likewife in their neighbourhood.

The

The cabbins of the great village of the Natchez, the only one I have feen, are in the form of, fquare pavilions, yery low, and without windows. Their roofs are rounded pretty much in the fame manner as an oven. Moft of them are covered with the leaves and ftraw of maiz. Some of them are built of a fort of mud, which feemed tolerably good, and is covered outfide and infide with very thin mats. That of the great chief is roughcaft very handfomely in the infide : it is likeways larger and higher than the reft, being placed in a more elevated fituation, and has no cabbins adjoining to it. It fronts a large fquare, which is none of the moft regular, and looks to the north. All the moveables I found in it were a bed of planks very narrow, and raifed about two or three feet from the ground; probably when the chief lies down he fpreads over it a matt, or the fkin of fome animal.

There was not a foul in the village, all of them having gone to a neighbouring village, where there was a fettival. All their doors were open, but there was not any thing to be feared from thieves, as nothing remained but the four walls. Thefe cabbins have no vent for the fmoke, notwithftanding thofe into which I entered were tolerably white. The temple ftands at the fide of the chief's cabbin, facing the eaft, and at the extremity of the fquare. It is built of the fame materials with the cabbins, but of a different fhape, being an oblong fquare, forty feet in length, and twenty in breadth, with a very fimple roof, in the fame form as ours. At each extremity there is fomething like a weather-cock of wood, which has a very coarfe refemblance of an eagle.

The

The gate is in the middle of the length of the building, which has no other opening: on each fide there are feats of fone. What is within is quite correfpondent to this ruftic outfide. Three pieces of wood, joined at the extremity, and placed in a triangle, or rather at an equal diftance from one another, take up almont the whole middle fpace of the remple, and burn flowly away. An Indian, whom they call keepet of the temple, is obliged to tend them, and to prevent their going out. If the weather is cold he may have a fire for himfelf, for he is not allowed to warm himfelf at this, which burns in honour of the fun. This keepef was alfo at the feftival; at leaft I did not fee him, but his brands occafioned a fmoke which almoft blinded us.

Ornaments I faw none, nor any thing indeed which could inform me that this was a temple. I faw only three or four boxes lying in diforder, with a few dry bones in them, and fome wooden heads on the ground, of fomewhat better workmanhip than the eagles on the roof. In fhort, if it had not been for the fire, I thould have believed this temple had been deferted for fone time, or that it had been lately plundered. Thofe cones, wrapt up in fkins, the dead bodies of the chiefs ranged in a circle within a temple intirely round, and terminated in the manner of a dome, thofe altars, $\mathcal{E}^{c}$. of which fome accounts make mention, of all thefe I have feen nothing; and, if ever fuch things were to be feen, they have been giteatly changed fince that time.

But, as no one ought abfolutely to be condemned while there is a fhadow of an excufe for him, it is Vol. II.
poffible that the neighbourhood of the French made the Natchez apprehenfive of lofing the dead bodies of their chiefs, and whatever was moft precious in their temple, for which caufe they have carried them elfewhere; and that the little regard they pay to their temple at prefent is owing to its having been ftript of whatever was held moft facred amongft them. It is however true, that, clofe by the wall, and oppofite to the gate, there is a table, the dimenfions of which I was not at the trouble to take, as I had then no fufpicion of its being an altar. I have been fince informed, that it is three feet in height, five in length, and four in breadth.

I have further heard, that they make a fmall fire on it with the bark of the oak, which never goes out, but this is falfe, for I faw no fire, nor any thing from which it could be imagined there ever was a fire there. They fay likeways that four old men lie in the temple by turns, in order to keep up this fire ; that he who is upon guard muft not go out during the eight days he is upon duty; that they take the lighted charcoal of the logs that are burning in the middle of the temple, to put upon the altar; that twelve men are employed in providing oak-bark; that there are monkeys of wood, and the figure of a rattlefnake, likewife of wood, placed upon the altar, to which they pay great honours: that when their chief dies he is buried, and, when they imagine his flefh is confurned, the keeper of the temple takes up his bones, wathes them, wraps them up in their moft precious robes, places them in large bafkets made of canes, which he covers with deer fkins, and difpofes them before the altar, where they remain till the death of the reigning chief; and that then he fhuts them up within the altar itfelf, in order to make room for the bones of him who died laft.

With refpect to the laft article, I can eafily fay, that I faw a few bones in one or two of the trunks; that they would not have made one half of thofe belonging to the human body; that they feemed very old, and lay not on the table which is called the altar. As to the other articles, firt, as I never was in the temple but in the day time, I am entirely ignorant of what paffes there during the night; and, in the next place, there was no watch in the temple when I was there. I obferved, as I have already faid, fome wooden monkeys, but faw no figure of a ferpent.

What I have feen in fome relation, of this tentple being hung with tapeftry, of its pavement being covered with matts of canes, of its being kept in the greateft neatnefs, and of their carrying to it every year the firft fruits of their harveft, muft certainly be read with great allowances. On the contrary, I have never feen any thing more flovenly, or in greater diforder. The billets of wood were burning updn the bare ground, on which there was no matts, no more than on the walls. M. le Noir, who was with me, only told me, that every day he put a frelh billet to the fire, and, at every new moon they provided wood for the whole month. He had this however only from hear-fay, for this was the firft time he had feen the temple as well as myfelf.

Here follows what I have been able to learn of the nation of the Natchez in general. In their external appearance they differ in nothing from the other Indians of Canada and Louifiana. They $\mathrm{S}_{\mathrm{z}}$ - feldom feldom make war, and do not place their glory in deftroying their fellow creatures. What diftinguifhes them more particularly is the form of their government, which is entirely defpotic; the great dependance in the fubject, which reaches even to a fort of flavery; a greater degree of haughtinefs and grandeur in their chiefs, and a pacific !pirit, from which however, for fome years paft, they have deviated a little.

The Husons believe, as well as they, their chiefs defcended from the fun, but there are none of them who will be his nave, and follow him to the other world to have the honour of ferving him there, as frequently happens among the Natchez. Garcilaffo de la Vega fpeaks of this nation as a very powerful people, and it is not quite fix years fince that they reckoned four thoufand warriours amongtt them. It appears that they were ftill more numerous in the time of M. de la Sale, and even when M. d'Iberville difcovered the mouth of the MiffiTippi, whereas at prefent they cannot fend two thoufand fighting men into the field. This decreafe of their numbers is attributed to contagious diftempers, which for fome year's paft have made great havock amongtt them.

The grand chief of the Natchez bears the name of Sun, and, as among the Hurons, the fon of his neareft female relations always fucceeds him. This perfon has the quality of woman-chief, and great honours are paid her, tho fhe feldom meddles in affairs of government. She has, as well as the chief himfelf, the power of life and death, and it is an ufual thing for them to order their guards, whom they call Allouez, to difpatch any one who has the misfortune to be obnoxious to either.

Go rid me of this dog, fay they, and they are inftantly obeyed. Their fubjects, and even the chiefs of their villages, never come into their prefence without faluting them thrice, and raifing a cry, or rather a fort of howling. They do the fame thing when they withdraw, and always retire going backwards. When they meet them they are obliged to ftop, range themfelves in order on the road, and howl in the manner above mentioned till they are paft. They are likeways obliged to carry them the beft of their harveft; and of the product of their hunting and filhing. In fine, no one, not even their neareft relations, and thofe who compofe their nobility, when they have the honour to eat with them, have a right to drink ous of the fame cup, or put their hands in the fame dif.

Every morning, as foon as the fun appears, the grand chief ftands at the door of his cabbin, turns his face towards the eaft, and howls thrice, proftrating himfelf to the ground at the fame time. A calumet is afterwards brought him, which is never ufed but upon this occafion; he fmoaks, and blows the tobacco firft towards the fun, and then towards the other three quarters of the world. He acknowledges no mafter but the fun, from whom he pretends he derives his origin. He exercifes an abfolute power over his fubjects, whofe lives and goods are entirely at his difpofal, and they can demand no payment for any labour he requires of them.

When the grand chief, or the woman chief, die, all the Allouez are obliged to follow them to the other world, nor are they the only perfons who have this honour :, for it is certainly reckoned one, and as fuch, greatly fought after. The death of a chief has been fometimes known to coft the lives of above a hundred perfons, and I have been told there are few Natchez of any confider ble note who die without being attended to the country of fouls, by fome of their relations, friends, or fervants. It appears from the different relations I have feen of thefe horrible ceremonies that there is much variation in them. Here follows an account of the obfequies of a woman chief, which I had from a traveller who was an eye-witnefs of it, and on whofe fincerity I have good reafon to depend.

The hufband of this woman not being noble, that is to fay, of the family of the fun, his eideft fon, according to cuftom, ftrangled him. Afterwards every thing was taken out of the cabbin, and a fort of triumphant car was erected of it, on which were placed the body of the deceafed and that of her hufband. Immediately after, twelve little children whom their parents had ftrangled, by order of the eldeft fon of the woman chief, who fucceeded to her dignity, were laid around the carcaffes. This done, they erected in the publick fquare fourteen fcaffolds adorned with branches of trees and ftuffs, on which were painted varlous figures. Thefe fcaffolds were defigned for an equal number of perfons, who were to attend the woman-chief to the other world, Their relations food round them, looking upon the permiffion given them, to facrifice themfelves in this manner, as the greateft honour that could be done to their families. They are fometimes ten years in foliciting this favour before-hand, and thofe who pbtain it, are obliged to 'fpin the cord themfelves with which they are to be frangled.

They

They appeared on the fcaffolds dreffed in their richeft habits, each having a large fhell in his righthand. Their neareft relation ftood on the fame hand, having a battle-ax in his left, and the cord which is to do the execution under his left-arm. From time to time he fings the death-cry, at which the fourteen victims come down from the fcaffolds, and dance all together in the fquare before the temple, and the cabbin of the woman-chief. This and the following days great refpect is paid them, each has five domeftics to attend him, and their faces are painted red. Some add, that during the eight days preceeding their death, they wear a red ribband on their leg, and that all that time every one is follicitous to regale them. Be this as it will, at the time I am now fpeaking of, the fathers and mothers of the ftrangled children took them in their arms, and difpofed themfelves on each fide of the cabbin, the fourteen deftined to die, placed themfelves in the fame manner, and were followed by the friends and relations of the deceafed, who had all their hair cut off, which is their way of mourning : all this time they made the air refound with fuch frightful cries, that one would have thought all the devils in hell had broke loofe, in order to come to howl in this place; this was followed with dances and fongs; thofe who were to die danced, and the relations of the woman-chief fung.

At laft the proceffion began. The fathers and mothers carrying their dead children appeared firft, walking two and two , and went immediately before the litter, in which was the corpfe of the womanchief, carried on the fhoulders of four men. The reft followed in the fame order. At every ten paces the children were thrown upon the ground, thofe who carried the litter trampling upon them, fo that when the proceffion arrived at the temple, their little bodies were quite torn to pieces.

While they were interring the corpfe of the wo-man-chief in the temple, the fourteen perfons deftined to die were undreffed and feated on the ground before the gate, having each two Indians about him, one feated on his knees, and the other holding his hands behind him. The çords were paffed round their necks, their heads were covered with the fkin of a roe-buck, and after being made to fwallow three pieces of tobacco, and to drink a glafs of water, the relations of the woman-chief, who fung all the time, drew the cords at each end till they were ftrangled. After which all the carcaffes were thrown together into a ditch and covered with earth.

When the grand chief dies, his nurfe, if ftill alive, muft die likewife. But it has often happened, that the French not being able to prevent this barbarity, have obtained leave to baptize the children who were to be ftrangled, and thus have prevented their accompanying thofe in whofe honour they were ftrangled, to their pretended paradife.

I know no nation on the continent, where the fex is more diforderly than in this. They are even forced by the grand chief and his fubalterns to proftitute themfelves to all comers, and a woman is not the lefs efteemed for being public. Though polygamy is permitted and the number of wives which a man may have is unlimited, yet every one, for the moft part contents himfelf with one, whom he may divorce at pleafure; but this, however, is a liberty never ufed by any but the chiefs. The women are tolerably well-looked for favages, and neat enough in their drefs, and every thing belonging to them. The daughters of a noble family are allowed to marry none but private men; but they have a right to turn away their huf band when they think proper, and marry another, provided there is no alliance between them.
( 265 )

If their hufbands are unfaithful to them, they may caufe them to be put to death, but are not fubject to the fame law themfelves: on the contrary, they may entertain as many gallants as they pleafe, without the hufband's daring to take it amifs, this being a privilege attached to the blood of the fun. He ftands in a refpectful pofture, in the prefence of his wife, never eats with her, falutes her in the fame manner as the reft of her domefticks, and all the privilege which this burthenfome alliance procures him, is an exemption from travel and fome authority over his wife's fervants.

The Natchez have two chiefs of war, two mafters of ceremonies for the temple, two officers to regulate the proceedings in treaties of peace and war, one who has the infpection of the works, and four more who are charged with the management of the publick feafts. The grand chief diipofes of thefe employments, and thofe on whom he confers them are refpected and obeyed as himfelf. Their harveft is in common, the chief appoints the day, and affembles the village. About the end of July he appoints another day, for the commencement of a feftival, to continue for three days which are fpent in games and feafting.

Every private perfon contributes to this,' from the produce of his hunting and fifhing, and from his other provifions, confifting of maize, beans and melons. The grand chief commonly called the fun, and the woman-chief prefide at this feftival in an elevated lodge, which is covered with foliage: they are carried thither in a litter, and the former holds in his hand a fort of fcepter adorned with feathers of various colours. All the nobility fit round them in a pofture of refpect. On the laft day the chief harrangues the affembly, and exhorts them all to be exact in fulfilling their duty, efpecially to preferve a great veneration for the firits who refide in the temple, and to give good inftructions to their children. If any one has fignalized himfelf by a publick-fpirited action, he makes his eulogium. Twenty years ago the temple was reduced to afhes by lightning, feven or eight women threw their children into the flames, in order to appeafe the genii; the chief immediately had thefe heroines before him, gave them publickly the higheft praifes, and concluded his difcourfe, by exhorting the reft of the women to imitate, when occafion offered, fo great an example.

The heads of families never fail to carry to the temple the firft fruits of all they gather, and the prefents made to the nation, are difpofed of in the fame manner. They are laid before the door of the temple, and the keeper after having offered them to the fpirits, carries them to the chief who difpofes them as he fees proper. The feed which is to be thrown into the ground is, in like manner, offered before the temple with great ceremony; but the offerings made of bread and flour at every new-moon, are for the benefit of the keepers of the temple.

The marriages of the Natchez differ but little from thofe of the Indians of Canada : the principal difference confifts in the bridegroom's making prefents to the parents of the young woman he is to efpoufe, and in the nuptials being followed by a great feaft. None but the chiefs have above one wife, the reafon of which is, that they having their lands cultivated by the people at no expence, do not find the number of their wives burthenfome to them. The chiefs marry with ftill lefs ceremony than the people. It is fufficient for them to give notice to the relations of the girl upon whom they have caft their eyes, that they enrol her into the number of their wives; but they keep only one or two in their own cabbins, the reft remaining with their relations, whom they vifit when they think fit. There is no fuch thing as jealoufy in thefe marriages; on the contrary, the Natchez, without any ceremony, lend one another their wives, and this is probably the reafon of the facility with which they part with them, in order to take other wives.

> When a war-chief wants to levy a party, he plants in a place appointed for that purpofe two trees adorned with feathers, arrows, and battle-axes ; all painted red as well as the trees, which are likewife marked on that fide on which the expedition is to fet out. Thofe who incline to enlift, prefent themfelves before the chief dreffed in the beft manner, with their faces dawbed all over with different colours, and make known their defire of learning learning the trade of arms under his conduct, and declare themfelves difpofed to endure all the fatigues of war, and ready to die, if neceffary, for the good of their native country.

When the chief has got the number of foldiers required for the intended expedition, he caufes prepare a beverage which is called the medicine of war. This is a vomit made with a root boiled in water : two pots of this drink are given to every one, which he mutt fwallow one after another and is fure to throw up again with the molt violent reaches. They are next bufied in making preparations, and untill the day fixed for their departure the warriors meet every morning and evening in the fquare, where, dancing and recounting their greateit exploits in arms, every one fings his death-fong. This people are no lefs fuperftitious with refpect to dreams than the Indians of Canada: there only wants a bad omen to make them return back, even after they have fet out on an expedition.

The warriors march in great order, and ufe great precaurion in encamping, and to enable them to rally again. Scouts are frequently fent out on difcoveries, but no centinels are fet during the night: they put out all the fires, recommend themfelves to the genii, and then go to neep in fecurity, the chief having firt warned every one not to fnore too loud, and to keep his arms always ready by him and in good condition. The idols are expofed on a branch which hangs towards the enemy, and all the warriors before they lie down pafs one after another, with their tomahawk in their hand, before thefe pretended divinities. Then they turn themfelves towards the enemy's country pouring forth great menaces, which the winds frequently carry to the other fide.

It does not appear that the Natchez during their march, exercife thofe cruelties on their prifoners which are ufual in Canada. When thefe unhappy wretches arrive at the great village, they are made to fing and dance 'feveral days running before the temple, after which they are delivered up to the relations of thofe who have been killed in the campaign; who upon receiving them burft out into lamentations, and then drying up their tears with the fcalps which the warriors have brought home, they tax themfelves, in order to recompence thofe who have given them the flaves, whofe lot is always to be burnt.

The warriors change their names as they perform new exploits; they receive them from the old warchiefs, and thefe names always bear fome relation to the action by which they have merited this diftinction; thofe who for the firt time have taken a prifoner or cut off a fcalp, mult, for the fpace of a month, refrain from feeing their wives or eating meat. They imagine, that thould they fail in this, the fouls of thofe they have killed or burnt would occafion their death, or that the firft wound they fhould receive from an enemy would prove mortal, or at leaft, that they would gain no farther advantages over their enemies. If the grand chief commands his fubjects in perfon, great care is taken that he do not expofe himfelf too much, lefs, perhaps, out of zeal for his prefervation, than out of fear that the other chiefs of war and principal men of the party, may run the rifk of being put to death, for not having taken better care of him.

The jugglers of the Natchez bear a great refemblance to thofe of Canada, and treat the fick much in the fame manner. They are well rewarded, if the fick perfon recovers, but if he dies, it often cofts them their lives. There is another fpecies of jugglers among this people, who run no lefs rifks than the phyficians. Thefe are fome worthlefs old fellows, who, in order to procure fubfiftence for their families, without being obliged to work, undertake to procure rain or fine weather, according as either is wanted. In fpring the people tax themfelves, in order to buy from thefe pretended magicians a favourable feafon for the fruits of the earth. If rain is required, they fill their mouths with water, and then with a pipe, the extremity of which is pierced into feveral holes like a funnel, they blow into the air on that fide where they pers ceive a cloud, and all the time playing on a chichikoué in one hand, and lifting up their manitou into the air with the other, they invoke the clouds with frightful cries, to water the fields of thofe who have fet them at work.

If good weather is demanded, they mount upon the roof of their cabbin, making figns to the clouds to pafs by, and if they pafs and diffipate they dance and fing round their idols, then fwallow the fmoke of tobacco, and offer their calumets towards heaven. All the time thefe operations laft, they obferve a rigorous faft, and do nothing but dance and fing; if they obtain what they have promifed they are well rewarded, but if not they are put to death without mercy. But the fame perfons do not undertake to procure rain and fine weather; their genii, fay they, have it not in their power to give both.

Mourning amongtt thofe Indians confifts in cutting off their hair, in forbearing to paint their faces, and in abfenting themfelves from the affemblies; but I am ignorant how long it lafts. Nor have I been able to learn whether they celebrate the feftival of the dead, of which ceremony I have already given you a defcription; it feems, that in this nation where all are in fome manner flaves to thofe who command, funeral honours are fet apart for thefe alone, and efpecially for the grand chief and the woman-chief.

Treaties of peace and alliance are concluded with a great deal of form and ceremony, in which the grand chief conftantly maintains his dignity like a real fovereign. So foon as he is informed of the day of the arrival of Ambaffadors, he gives orders to the mafters of the ceremonies to make preparations for their reception, and appoints thofe who are to take their turns of maintaining the envoys. For it is at the expence of his fubjects that he defrays the charge of an embaffy. On the day of the entry of the Ambaffadors, every one has his place appointed according to his rank, and when thefe minifters are at the diftance of five hundred paces from the grand chief, they make a halt and fing the peace-fong.

An embaffy, for the moft part, confifts of thirty men and fix women. Six of the beft voices put themfelves at the head of the train and fing, the reft following them, whilft a chichikoué regulates the meafure. When the grand chief makes a fign to the ambaffadors to draw near, they again begin their march ; thofe who carry the calumet dance and fing, turning themfelves on all fides, and making a thoufand antick motions, grimaces, and contortions.
conntortions. They play the fame farce over again round the grand chief, as foon as they have come into his prefence; then they ftroak him with the calumet from head to fpot, and afterwards return to their company.

And now they fill the calumet with tobacco, and holding the fire in one hand, advance all together towards the grand chief, and prefent him the calumet lighted. They fmoke along with him, blow ing the firt vapour of their tobacco towards the fky , the fecond towards the earth, and the third all round the horizon. This done they prefent their calumet to the relations of the grand chief and to the inferior chief. Afterwards they ftroak the ftomach of the grand chief with their hands, and then rub themfelves over the body; laftly, they lay their calumets on forks over againtt the grand chief, whon the orator of the embaffy begins his harangue, which continues for an hour.

This being over, a fign is made to the ambaffadors, who had hitherto continued itanding, to fit down, on feats placed for them, near the grand chief, who makes anfwer to their difcourfe, and likewife holds forth for a whole hour. This done, the mafter of the ceremonies lights a great calumet of peace, and gives it to the ambaffadors who fmoke with it, and fwallow the firft draught. Then the grand chief enquires after their health, ali thofe who affift at the audience pay the fame complinent, and then they are conducted to the cabbin appointed for their refidence, where a grand repaft is prepared for them. On the evening of the fame day the grand chief pays them a vifit ; but when they are informed he is about to leave his apartment, in order to do them this honour, they goin queft queft of him, carry him on their fhoulders to their cabbin, and feat him on a large fkin. One of them places himfelf behind him, leaning with both his hands on his fhoulders, and gently fhaking him for fome time, whilft the reft feated on the ground in a circular form, fing their great exploits in war.

Thefe vifits are renewed every morning and evening, but at laft the ceremonial is changed. The ambaffadors erect a poft in the middle of their cabbins, round which they all feat themfelves: the warriors who accompany the grand chief, being dreffed in their richeft habits, dance and ftrike upon the poft by turns, recounting at the fame time their gallant feats in war; after which they make prefents to the ambaffadors. On the next day, thefe, for the firft time, have liberty to walk about in the village, and every evening fettivals are prepared for them, confifting only of dances. When they are about to depart, the mafters of the ceremonies furnih them with the provifions requifite for their journey, which is always done at the expence of private perfons.

The greateft part of the nations of Louifiana, had formerly their temples as well as the Natchez, and in all thefe temples a perpetual fire is kept up. It fhould even feem, that the Maubilians enjoyed a fort of primacy in religion, over all the other nations in this part of Florida; for when any of their fires happened to be extinguifhed through chance, or negligence, it was neceffary to kindle them again at theirs. But the temple of the Natchez is the only one fubfifting at prefent, and is held in great veneration by all the favages inhabiting this vaft continent, the decreafe of whofe numbers is as confiderable, and has been ftill more fudden, than that Vor. II.

T
of

(274)

of the people of Canada, without its being polfible to affign the true reaion of this event. Whole nav tions have entirely difappeared within the fpace of forty years at moft ; and thofe who ftill remain, are no more than the fhadow of what they were, when M. de Sale difcovered this country. I mult now take my leave of your Grace, for reafons which I fhall foon have the honour to explain to you,

$1 \mathrm{am}, \& \mathrm{c}$.

LETTER XXXI.

Voyage from the Natchez to New Orleans. Description of the Country and of Several Indian Villages, with that of the Capital of Louifiana.

New Orleans, January 10, 1722.
Madam,

Iam now at lat arrived at this famous city of Nouvelle Orleans, New Orleans. Thole who have given it this name, mut have imagined Orleans was of the feminine gender. But of what consequence is this? Cuftom, which is fuperior to all the laws of grammar, has fixed it fo.

This is the firft city, which one of the greateft rivers in the world has feen erected on its banks. If the eight hundred fine houses and the five parishes, which our Mercury beftowed upon it two years ago, are at prefent reduced to a hundred barracks, placed in no very good order; to a large ware-houfe built of timber ; to two or three houris which would be no ornament to a village in France; to one half of a forry ware-houfe, formerly fet apart for divine fervice, and was fearce appropriated for that purpofe, when it was removed to a tent: what pleafure, on the other hand, muft it give to fee this future capital of an immenfe and beautiful country increafing infenfibly, and to be able, not with a figh like Virgil's hero, when fpeaking of his native country conlumed by the flames, et campus ubi Troje fuit, but full of the beft grounded hopes to fay, thit this wild and defart place, at prefent almoft entirely covered over with canes and trees, fhall one day, and perhaps, that day is not very far off, become the capital of a large and rich colony.

Your Grace will, perhaps, afk me upon what thefe hopes are founded? They are founded on the fituation of this city on the banks of a navigable river, at the diftance of thirty three leagues from the fea, from which a veffel may come up in twenty-four hours; on the fertility of its foil; on the mildnefs and wholefomenefs of the climate, in thirty degrees north latitude; on the induftry of the inhabitants; on its neighbourhood to Mexico, the Havanna, the finift iflands of America, and laft $y$, to the Englifh colonies. Can there be any thing more requifite to render a city flourifhing? Rome and Paris had not fuch confiderable beginnings, were not built under fuch happy aufpices, and their founders met not with thofe advantages on the Seine and the Tiber, which we have found on the Miffiffippi, in comparifon of which, thefe two rivers are no more than brooks. But before I eng ge in the defcription of what is curious in this place, I hall, to preferve due order, refume my journal where I left off.

1 fayed among the Natchez much longer than I expected, which was owing to the deflitute condition in which I found the French with refpect to Spiritual affiftance. The dew of heaven has not as yet fallen upon this fine councry, which is more than any other enriched with the fat of the earth. The late M. d'Iberville had defigned a jefuit for this place, who accompanied him in his fecond voyage to Louifiana, in order to eftablifh Chriftianity in a nation, the converfion of which he doubted not would draw after it, that of all the reft; but this miffionary on paffing through the village of the Bayagoulas, imagined he found more favourable difpofitions towards religion there, and while he was thinking on fixing his refidence amongft them, was recalled to France, by order of his fuperiors.

An ecclefiaftic of Canada was in the fequel fent to the Natchez, where he refided a fufficient time. but made no profelites, though he fo far gained the good graces of the woman chief, that out of refpect to him, the called one of her fons by his name. This miffionary being obliged to make a voyage to the Mobile, was killed on his way thither by fome Indians, who probably had no other motive for this cruel action, but to plunder his baggage, - as had before happened to another prieft, on the fide of the Akanfas. From this time forth all Louifiana, below the Illinois, has been without any ecclefiaftick, excepting the Tonicas, who for feveral years have had a miffionary whom they love and efteem, and would even have chofen for their chief, but who has not been able, notwithftanding all this, to perfuade one lingle perfon to embrace Chriftianity.

But how can we imagine meafures are to be taken to convert the infidels, when the children of the faith themfelves are, almoft all of them, without paftors? I have already had the honour to inform your Grace, that the canton of the Natchez is the moft populous of this colony; yet it is five years fince the French there have heard mafs, or even feen a prieft. I was indeed, fenfible, that if the greateft number of the inhabitants had an indifference towards the exercifes of religion, which is the common effect of the warit of the facraments; feveral of them, however, expreffed much eagernefs to lay hold of the opportunity my voyage afforded them, to put the affairs of their confcience in order, and I did not believe it my duty, to fuffer myfelf to be much entreated on this occafion.

The firft propofal made to me was to marry, in the face of the church, thofe inhabitants, who by virtue of a civil contract, executed in prefence of the commandant and principal clerk of the place, had cohatited togecher without any fruple, alledging, for excufe, along with thofe who had authorized this concub nage, the neceffity there was of peopling the country, and the impoffibility of procuring a prieft. I reprefented to them, that there were priefts at the Yafous and New Orleans, and that the affair was well worth the trouble of $a$ voyage thither; it was anfwered, that the contractirg parties were not in a condition to undertake fo long a journey, nor of being at the expence of procuring a prieft. In fitort, the evil being done; the queftion was only how to remedy it, which 1 did. After this, I confeffed all thofe who offered themfelves; but their number was not fo great as 1 expected.

Nothing detaining me longer at the Natchez, 1 fet out from thence on the 26 th of December pretty late, in company with M. de Pauger, King's engineer; who was employed in vifiting the colony, in order to examine the proper places for building forts. We advanced four leagues, and encamped on the banks of a fmall river on the left; next day we reimbarked two hours before it was light, with a pretty ftrong wind againft us. The river in this place makes a circuit or winding of fourteen leagues, and according as we turned, the wind being reflected by the land, and the iflands which are here in great number turned with us, fo that we had it the whole day in our teeth. Notwithftanding we got ten leagues farther, and entered another fmall river on the fame fide. The whole night we heard a very great noife, which I imagined was the effect of the winds growing ftionger; but I was told that the river had been very calm, and that the noife which kept us awake had been occafioned by the filhes beating the water with their tails.

On the 28 th, after advancing two leagues far * ther, we arrived at the river of the Tonicas, which at firft appears to be no more than a brook; but at the diftance of a mufket-fhot from its mouth, forms a very pretty lake. If the river continues to carry its ftream or courfe towards the other fide, as it has done for fome time paft, all this place will become inacceffable. The river of the Tonicas rifes in the country of the Tcbactas, and its navigation is very much interrupted with falls or rapid currents. The village ftands beyond the lake on 2 pretty eminence; yet its air is faid to be unwholfome, which is attributed to the bad quality of the water of the river; but $I$ am rather of opinion, it is owing to the flagnation of the waters in the lake. This village is built round a very large fquare, and is indifferently populous.

The chief's cabbin is finely decorated for an Indian's, on the outfide; on which there are figures in retief, not fo badly executed as one would expect. It is very obfcure within doors, and I could fee nothing in it but chefts, full, as I was told, of goods and money. The chief received us very politely, he was dreffed after the French fathion, and feemed in no-ways incommoded with his cloaths. Our commandants repofe greater confidence in this man, than in any other of the Indians of Louifiana: he loves our nation, and has no reafon to repent the fervices he has done us. He carries on a trade with the French, fupplying them with korfes and poultry, and is very expert at bult efs. He has learned from us the art of laying up money, and is accounted very rich. He has long left off wearing the Indian habit, and takes great pride in appearing always well-dreffed.

The reft of the cabbins in this village are partly fquare, like that of the chief, and partly round, as at the Natchez; the fquare upon which they all ftand is about a hundred paces in diameter, - where though it was that day extremely hot, the young people were diverting themfelves at a fort of truck, not unlike ours in Europe. There are two other villages belonging to this nation at no great diftance from this, which are all that remains of a people heretofore very numerous. I have already obferved, that they had a miffionary whom they greatly efteemed, but have fince learned they once expelled him, on account of his fetting their temple on fire, which, however, they have not rebuilt or rekindled its fire, a certain proof of their indifference with refpect to religion: foon after they even recalled the miffionary, but he in his turn has now left them, on finding they liftened to all he was able to fay with an indolence which he was unable to get the better of.

From the bottom of the lake or bay of the Tonicas, were we to ufe canoes of bark, by a carrying place of two leagues, ten might be faved in the navigation of the river. Two leagues lower than the Tonicas, on the right-hand, is Red river, or Rio Colorado, at the entrance of which the famous Ferdinand de Soto, the conqueror of Florid , ended his exploits and life together. This river runs eaft and weft for fome time, and then turns to the fouth. For the fpace of forty leagues it is navigable for pirogues, beyond which are nothing but impaffible moraffes. Its mouth feems to be about two hundred toifes in breadth; ten leagues above, it receives on the right-hand Blackriver, otherwife called the river of the Ouatchitas, which runs from the north, and for feven months in the year, has little or no water in it.

Notwithftanding, fome grants have been obtained here, which, in all probability, never will be good for any thing; the motive for thefe fettlements is the neighbourhood of the Spaniards, which has ever been a fatal temptation to this colony, and through the hopes of trading with them, the beft lands in the world have been left uncultivated. The Natcbitocbes are fettled on the banks of the Redriver, and we have thought proper to build a fort amongft them, in order to prevent the Spaniards from fixing themfelves nearer us. We encamped on the 29 th, a little below the mouth of the Redriver, in a very fine creek.

On the 3oth, after advancing five leagues, we paffed a fecond pointe coupée, or cut point; the ris ver makes a very great turning in this place, and the Canadians, by means of digging the channel of a fmall brook, have carried the waters of the river into it, where fuch is the impetuofity of the fream, that the point has been entirely cut through, and thereby travellers fave fourteen leagues of their voyage. The old bed is now actually dry, having never any water in it, but in the time of an in ${ }^{-}$ undation; an evident proof that the river inclines its channel towards the eaft, and a circumftance which cannot be too much attended to, by thofe who fettle on either fide. This new channel has been, fince that time, founded with a line of thirty fathoms, without finding any bottom.

Immediately below and on the fame fide, we faw the feeble beginnings of a grant, called Sainte Reine, belonging to Meffrs. Coetlogon and Kolli. It is fituated on a very fertile fpot, and has nothing to fear from the overllowing of the river; bue from nothing, nothing can proceed, efpecially, when people are not induftrious, and in fuch a fituation this fettlement appeared to be. Advancing a league farther this day, we arrived at the grant of Madame de Mezieres, where the rain detained us all the following day. A few huts covered with the leaves of trees, and a large tent made of canvas, are what the whole of this fettlement at prefent confifts of. Planters and goods are expected from the Black-river, where the warehoufes are, which they feem refolved not to abandon. But I am very much affraid, that by endeavouring to make two fettements at once, both will probably mifcarry.

The foil where this laft is begun is very good, but it mult be built a quarter of a league from the river, behind a cyprefs wood, where the bottom is marlhy, which may be employed in raifing rice or garden-ftuff. Two leagues farther within the woods is a lake cwo leagues in circuit, the banks of which are covered with game, and which perhaps would alfo furnifh abundance of fifh, were the alligators with which it fwarms at prefent, deitroyed. At this place I learned fome fecrets which I fhall communicate to your Grace at the price they coft me ; for I have not had time to make trial of them.

The male cyprefs in this country bears a fort of of huik, which, as they fay, muft be gathered green, and yields a balm which is fovereign to the cure of cuts or wounds. The tree from which the copalm diftills, has, among other virtues, that of curing the dropfy. The roots of thofe large cotton trees, which I have already fpoken of and which are found all along the road from lake Ontario, are a certain remedy tor all kinds of burns; the interior pellicle muft be boiled in water, the wound fomented with this water, and afterwards the afhes of the pellicle itfelf laid upon it.

On the firft day of the new year we faid mafs; about three leagues from the habitation of Madam de Mezieres, in a grant belonging to M . Dison d'Artaguette infpector-general of the troops of Louiliana. We had here a monttruous large tortoife brought us; and we were told that theie animals had juft broke through a large bar of iron; if the fact is true; and to believe it I hould have feen it, the fpittle of thefe animals muft be a ftrong diffolvent : I fhould not, indeed, chofe to truft my leg in their throat. What is certain is, that the creature I faw was large enough to fatisfy ten men of the ftrongeft apperites. We ftaid the whole day in this grant, which is no farther advanced than the reft, and is called le Baton rouge, or the Red-ftaff Plantation.

The next day, we advanced eleven leagues, and encamped a little below the Bayagoulas, which we left upon our right, after having vifited the ruins of an ancient village, which I have already mentioned. This was very well peopled about twenty years ago; but the fimall pox deftroyed part of the inhabitants, and the reft have difperfed in fuch a manner, that no accounts have been heard of them for feveral years, and it is doubted if fo much as one fingle family of them is now remaining. Its fituation was very magnificent, and the Meffrs. Paris have now a grant here, which they planted with white mulberries, and have already raifed very fine filk. They have likewife begun to cultivate tobacco and indigo with fuccefs. If the proprietors of the grants were every-where as induftrious, they would foon be reimburfed their expences.

On the third of January, at ten in the morning, we arrived at the litcle village of the Oumas, which ftands on the left, and has fome French houfes in it. A quarter of a league farther within the country ftands the great village. This nation is very well affected towards us. Two leagues above this, the Miffifippi divides into branches: on the right, to which fide it has a conftant propenfity, it has hollowed out for itfelf a channel called the fork of the Chetimachas or Sitimacbas, which, before it carries its waters to the fea, forms a pretty large lake. The nation of the Chetimachas is almoft entirely entirely deftroyed, the few that remain being flaves in the colony.

This day we advanced fix leagues beyond the Oumas, and paffed the night upon a very fine fpot, where the Marquis d'Ancenis has a fertlement, which the burning of the publick ware-houfe and feveral other accidents happening one after another, have reduced to ruin. The Colapiffas had built a fmall village here, which fubfifted no long time. On the fourth before noon, we arrived at the great village of the Colapiffas. This is the fineft in all Louifiana, though there are not above two hundred warriors in it, who, however, have the reputation of being very brave. Their cabbins are in the form of a pavilion, like thofe of the Sioux; and like them they light fires in them very feldom. They have a double covering, that within being a tiffue of the leaves of Lataniers trees, and that without confifts of matts.

The chief's cabbin is thirty-fix feet in diameter : I have not hitherto feen any of a larger fize, that of the chief of the Natchez being no more than thirty. As foon as we came in fight of the village, they faluted us with beat of drum, and we had no fooner landed than I was com limented on the part of the chief. I was furprized, on advan-1 cing towards the village, to fee the drummer dreffed in a long fantaftical parti- coloured robe. I enquired into the origin of this cuftom, and was informed that it was not very ancient; that a governor of Louifiana had made a prefent of this drum to thefe Indians, who have always been our faithfull allies; and that this fort of beadle's coat, was of their own invention. The women here are handfomer handfomer than thofe of Canada, and are, befides, extremely neat in their drefs.

Abstract

After dinner we made a progrefs of give leagues farther, and flopt at a place called Cannes brulées, or Burnt-canes, belonging to M le Comte d'Artagnar, who has a fettement here, which is to ferve him as an entrepot, or ftaple, provided it do not fhare the fame fate with moft of the reft. This plantation ftands on the left, and the firft object that attracted my notice, was a large crofs erected on the banks of the river, round which I found them finging vefpers. This is the firft place of the colony, after leaving the country of the I1Jinois, where I faw this ceremony of our religion. Two Murquetaires, Meffrs. d'Artiguere and de Benac, are the managers of this grant, and it is M. de Benac who has the direction of the plantation of Cannes brulées, together with M. Chevalier, nephew to the mathematical mafler to the King's pages. They have no prieft which is not their fault, there having been one fent them, whom they were obliged to fend away for his drunkennefs, wifely concluding, that more harm than good was to be expected from a bad prieft, in a new fettlement, where there was no fuperior to watch over his conduct. Between the Colapiffas and the Cannes brulées, you leave on your right, a place where an Indian nation called the Taenfas were formerly fettled, and who, in the time of M. de la Sale, made a great figure in this colony, but have for fome years paft entirely difappeared. This has one of the moft beautiful fituations as well as one of the beft foils in all Louifiana. M. de Meufe to whom it has been granted has as yet done nothing in it, notwithftanding he maintains a director who has neither goods nor work-men.

We ftoped to dine, on the fifth, at a place called the Cbapitoulas, which is diffant only three leagues from New Orleans, at which place we arrived about five o'clock in the evening. The Chapitoulas and fome of the neighbouring plantations are in a very good condition, the foil is very fertile and has fallen into the hands of expert and laborious people. They are M. de Breuil and three Canadian brothers, of the name of Cbauvin, who having brought nothing with them to this country but their induftry, have attained to a perfection in that through the neceffity of working for their fubfiftence. They have loft no time, and have fpared themfelves in nothing, and their conduct affords an ufeful leffon to thofe lazy fellows, whofe mifery unjuftly difcredits a country, which is capable of producing an hundred fold, of whatever is fown in $i t$.

I am, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ}$.

LETTER

LET T ER XXXII.

Voyage from New Orleans to the Mouth of the Miffiffippi. Defcription of that River to the Sea. Reflections on the Grants.

IJand of T'bouloufe or Balife, Fanuary 26, 1722.

Madam,

THE country, in the neighbourhood of New Orleans, has nothing very remarkable; nor have I found the fituation of this city fo very advantageous, as it has been faid to be : there are fome who think otherwife, and fupport their opinion by the following reafors; and I thall aftefwards lay before you thofe which induce me to differ from them. The firft is, that a league beyond it, towards the north-eaft, there is a fmall river called le Bayouc de Saint Yean, or the Creek of St. John, Bayouc in the Indian language fignifying a rivulet, which, at the end of two leagues, difcharges itfelf into the lake Pontchartrain, which has a communication with the fea, by means of which it would be eafy, fay they, to keep up a Vol. II. ... U trade trade between the capital Mobile and Biloxi, and with all the other pofts we poffefs near the fea. The fecond is, that below the city the river makes a very great turning called le detour aux Anglois, or the Englith reach, which is imagined would be of great advantage to prevent a furprize. Thefe reatons are fpecious, but do not appear to me to be folid; for, in the firft place, thofe who reafon in this manner fuppofe, that the river at its entrance can only receive fmall veffels: now in this cafe, what is to be feared from a furprize, provided the city be fortified, as I fuppofe ir will foon be? Will an enemy come to attack it with Challops, or with veffels which carry no guns? Befides, in whatever place the town be fituated, ought not the mouth of the river to be defended by good batteries, and a fort which would at leaft give them notice to hold themfelves in readinefs to receive an enemy? In the fecond place, what neceffity is there for a communication, which can only be carried on by means of fhallops, with pofts which cannot beaffitted in cale they were attacked, and from which, on the other hand, but a feeble affiftance could be drawn, and which, for the moft part, would be good for nothing? To this it may be added, that when a veffel goes up the Englifh reach, the wind muft change every moment, fo that whole weeks may be fpent in advancing feven or eight leagues.

A little below New Orleans the foil begins to be very fhallow on both fides the Miffifippi, and its depth continues to diminifh all the way to the fea. This is a point of land which does not appear to be very ancient; for if it be ever fo little dug up, water is fure to be found, and the great number of fhoals and fmall illands, which within thefe twenty years have been formed at all the mouths of the river, leave no room to doubt that this neck of land has been formed in the fame manner. It appears certain, that when M. de Sale went down the Miffiffippi to the fea, the mouth of this river was quite different from what it is at prefent.

The nearer we approach the fea, the more fenfible this becomes: the bar has little or no water on the greateft part of the out-lets which the river has opened for itfelf, and which have been fo greatly multiplied by means of trees, which have been carried along with the current; and one of them being ftopt, by means of its roots or branches, in a place where there is little depth of water, is the occafion of ftopping a thoufand more. I have feen, two hundred leagues from hence, heaps of them, one of which alone would fill all the timberyards in Paris. Nothing can then feparate the mud from them which the river carries along with it; it ferves them as a cement, and covers them by little and little; every frefh inundation leaves a new bed, and after ten years at moft the canes and fhrubs begin to grow. It is in this manner, that the greateft part of thefe points of land and illands have been formed, which have fo often cauled a change in the courfe of the river.

I have nothing to add to what I have faid in the beginning of the foregoing letter, about the prefent flate of New Orleans. The jufteft notion you can form of it is, to imagine to yourfelf two hundred perfons, who have been fent out to build a city, and who have fettled on the banks of a great river, thinking upon nothing but upon putting themfilves under cover from the injuries of $\mathrm{U}_{2}$ the the weather, and in the mean time waiting till a plan is laid out for them, and till they have built houfes according to it. M. de Pauger, whom I have ftill the honour to accompany, has jutt fhown me a plan of his own invention; but it will not be fo eafy to put it into execution, as it has been to draw it out upon paper. We fet out on the 28 th, for Biloxi, where the general quarters are. There are no grants between New Orleans and the fea, the foil being of too little depth; but only fome fmall private fettlements and entrepots, or faples, for the large grants.

$$
(292)
$$

Behind one of thefe plantations, and immediately below the Enclifh reach, ftood, not long fince, a village of the Cbouachas, the ruins of which I have vifited. Nothing remains entire but the cabbin of the chief, which bears a great refemblance to one of our peafants houfes in France, with this difference only, that it has no windows. It is built of the branches of trees, the voids of which are filled up with the leaves of the trees called lataniers, and its roof is of the fame materials. The etief, like all the reft in Florida, is very abfolute; he hunts only for his pleafure, for his fubjects are obliged to give him part of, their game. His village is at prefent on the other fide of the river, half a league lower, and the Indians have tranfported thither even the bones of their dead.

A little below their new habitation, the coaft is much higher than any where elfe; and it feems to me, this would have been the beft fituation for a city. It is not above twenty leagues from the fea, and with a moderate fouth or fouth-eaft wind, fhips might get up to it in fifteen hours. On the
the evening of the 23 d , we quitted the fhallop which had carried us to this place, and embaked on board a brigantine, in which we lay by during the whole night. On the morrow at break of day we found we had paffed a new turn in the river, called le detour aux Piakimines, or the reach of the Piakimines.

We found ourfelves foon after among the parfes of the Miffifippi; here one muft fail with abundance of precaution, for fear of being drawn into one from whence it would be next to imporfible to extricate one's felf. Moft of them are only fmall ftreams, and fome are feparated only by Shallows almoft level with the water: The bar of the Miffiffippi is what has multiplied thefe paffes to fuch a degree, it being ealy to conceive, by the way in which I faid new lands are formed, how the river endeavouring after a paffage where there is the leaft refiftance, opens one, fometimes on one fide, fometimes on another; from whence it might happen, without great care to prevent it, that all the paffes might become impaffable to fhips. In the evening of the 24 th, we caft anchor without the bar, oppofite the Ifand Balife.

The contrary wind ftill detaining us, we refolved to make fome ufe of this delay. Yefterday being the 25 th, I began by finging grand mals in the inland called de la Balife, or the Buoy Inand, on account of a buoy erected upon it for the convenience of hipping. Afterwards I bleffed it, gave it the name of the ifland Thouloufe, and then fung Te Deum. This ifland together with another, which is feparated from it by a creek where there is always water, is not more than half a league in circumference. It is befides very low, excepting one place only which is never overflowed, and where there is room enough to build a fort and ware-houfes. Veffels might likewife unload here, which would have difficulty to get over the bar with their cargoes in.
circumfirence.

294 )

M. de Pauger founded this place with the lead, and found the bottom pretty hard and clayey, though five or fix fmall fprings rife from it, which do not throw up much water, but leave a very fine falt behind them. When the river is at its loweft, that is to fay during the three hotteft months of the year, the water is falt all round this ifland; but in the time of the floods it is entirely frefh, and the river preferves its frefhnefs a league out at fea. During the remainder of the year it is a little brackifh beyond the bar; confequently it is a meer fable, what has been afferted, that for the fpace of twenty leagues, the waters of the Miffifippi do not mix with thofe of the ocean.
M. Pauger and I fpent the reft of the day with M. Kerlafio, mafter of the Brigantine, in founding and furveying the only mouth of the river which was then navigable; -and here follow our obfervations on the condition in which we then found it, for I cannot anfwer for the changes which may have fince happened. It runs north-eaft and fouth-weft, for the fpace of three hundred fathoms from the fea to the inland of Thouloufe, oppofite to which are three fimall iflands, which have as yet no grafs upon them, al hough they are of a tolerable height. For the whole of this fpace, its breadth is about two hundred and fifty fathoms, and its depth about eighteen feet in the middle; but thofe who are not well acquainted muff keep the lead always going-

From thence, going up the river, the course lies fill north-weft, for the face of four hundred fathoms, having all along fifteen foot depth of water and the fame bottom; the anchoring ground is every where good, and under cover from all but the fouth and fouth-weft winds, which might, if violent, cause the veffels to drag their anchors, but without any danger; for they would run upon the bar, which is likewife a fort mud : the courfe is after this north-weft, and one quarter north-eaft, for the face of five hundred fathoms. This is properly the bar, having twelve foot water middle. depth, but much incumbered with banks and foals; on which account, great care mut be taken in working a veffel; this bar is two hundred and fifty fathoms broad betwixt the low-lands on each fides, which are covered with reeds.

In the eat channel, which is immediately above the bar, the courfe is due weft, for the face of a league: this is two hundred and fifty fathoms in breadth, and from four to fifteen in depth. Then all of a fudden no bottom is to be found. On taking the large channel after going over the bar, the courfe is north-weft, for the face of three hundred fathoms, where there is always forty-five feet depth of water. You leave the channel of Sanvole, on the right-hand, through which there is a paffage for fhallops to Biloxi, the courfe of which is northerly: this channel had its name from an officer whom M. d' Iberville, on his return to France, left commandant of the colong.

The courfe lies afterwards weft, one quarter north-weft, for the fpace of fifty fathoms in a fort of bay lying on the left, at the end of which there are three channels more, one running fouth-fouth-eaft, another fouth, and the third weft-fouthweft. This bay is but ten fathoms in depth and twenty over, and the channels have but little water. Continuing to fteer on the fame point of the compafs, and after running fifty fathoms more, you meet with a fecond bay on the fame fide, which is twenty fathoms over, and fifty in depth. This has two little channels, through which canoes of bark would have difficulty to pafs, fo that, for the moft part, no account is made of them.

From hence the courfe is wefterly for the fpace of five hundred fathoms, when you are oppofite to the paffe a la loutre, or the Otter channel, which lies on the right hand, and runs fouth-fouth-eaft, being a hundred fathom in breadth, but only navigable for pirogues. Afterwards you fteer fouthweft for the fpace of twenty fathoms, then due weft for three hundred: after this w eft, one quarter northweft, for the fpace of a hundred, as much weft-north-weft, and eight-hundred north-weft ; then you find on your left-had the fouth paffage, which is two hundred and fifty fathoms in breadth, having nine fathoms depth of water at its entrance on the river fide, and only two feet at its opening into the fea.

Two hundred and fifty fathoms farther, lies the fouth-weft paffage, nearly of the fame breadth but with never lefs than feven or eight feet water. The country in this place is not fo marfly as lower down, but is overflowed during four months of the year. It is bounded on the left by a feries of fmall lakes, lying at the end of the lake Chetimachas, and on the right by the ijes de la Cbandeleur, or the Candlemas iflands; it is believed that there is a channel for veffels of the greateft burthen, and that it would be very eafy to make a very fine harbour among thefe iflands. Large barks can get up from the fea to lake Chetimachas, and the fineft oaks in the world might be cut there, the whole coaft being covered with them.

I am likewife of opinion, that all the channels in the river ought to be ftopt up, excepting the principal one, which would be extremely eafy, nothing more being required, than to introduce into them thofe floating trees with which the river is always covered. The confequence of which would be, in the firt place, that the river would be no longer acceffible to barks and canoes, but upon one fide, which would put the colony out of all danger of being furprized; and, in the fecond place, the whole force of the current being united, the only opening, which the river would then have, would grow deeper as well as the bar. I ground this conjecture upon what has already happened at at the two cut points, of which I have already fpoken. In this cafe there would be no more to do than to keep up one channel, and to prevent the floating trees from flopping in it, which, as appears to me, would be no difficult affair.

The breadth of the river between the channels, that is to fay, for the fpace of four leagues from the Inland of Thouloufe to the fouth-weft channel, is never more than fifty fathoms. But immediately above this channel, the Miffifippi infenfibly refumes refumes its wonted breadth, which is never lefs, than one mile, and feldom more than two. Its depth continually encreafes beyond the bar, which is contrary to what happens in all other rivers which are commonly deeper as they approach nearer the fea.

( 298 )

Here, Madam, would be an opportunity to give you an account of what has occafioned the failure of thofel numerous. grants, which have made fo much noife in France, and upon which fo many had founded the greateft hopes; but I rather chufe to refer this to our firft meeting, and content myfelf, at prefent, with imparting to you fome reflections I have made on the mannner of fettling in this country, if our countrymen are not entirely difgufted at the bad fuccefs fo many repeated efforts, and ufelefs expences, have been attended with.

It appears to me, that the beft place for fettlements is not on the banks of the river, but at leaft a quarter if not half a league back in the country. I am not ignorant, that it is poffible to guard againft the ordinary inundations of the river by good ditches; but there is a great inconvenience in dwelling upon a foil, which affords water ever fo little below the furface, and where, of courfe, there can be no cellars. I am even of opinion, that it would be very advantageous to leave free room to the annual overflowing of the river, efpecially for the foil, which is not very dry and would not be ufelefs.

The flime, which remains upon it, after the waters are withdrawn, renews and fattens it ; and one part might be employed in pafturage, and the other fown with rice, pulfe, and, in a word, with every thing which thrives on fat and moift lands. So, that in time, nothing might be feen on both the banks of the Miffitfippi, but gardens, orchards, and meadows, which would fupply the inhabitants with food, and even furnifh commodities for carrying on a trade with our iflands and the neighbouring colonies. In a word, I believe, I may affirm that, having landed twice or thrice every day, when I was going down the river, there are almoft every where, at a very fimall diftance from the banks, high grounds, where houfes might be built on a folid foundation; and corn would grow extremely well, after the air had got free accefs to it, by means of clearing away the woods.

The navigation of the river upwards will always be extremely difficult, on account of the ftrength of the current which even obliges thofe who are going down to take great care, for it frequently drives them upon points of land and upon fhoals; fo that, in order to proceed with fafety, veffels muft be made ufe of which can both fail and row. Befides, as it is not poffible to advance in the night-time, thefe voyages will always be very tedious and expenfive; at leaft till the banks of the river fhall be well peopled, through the whole extent of country, from the Illinois to the fea.

Such, Madam, is the country which has been fo much talked of for fome years paft, and of which fo few entertain a juft idea. We are not the firt Europeans who have been fenfible of its goodnefs, goodness, and have at the fame time neglected it. Ferdinand de Soto went all over it, in the space of three years, and Garcilaffo de Vega his hiftorian has not been able to forgive him, for not having made a fold eftablifhment upon it. "Where could he have gone," fays he, "to " find a better."

In a word, I have met with none, who have been on the foot, who have fpoken difadvantageoufly of Louifiana, but three forts of perfons whole teftimony can be of no great weight. The firft are the failors, who, from the road at the inland of Dauphine, have been able to fee nothing but that inland covered with a barren fond, and the coaft of Biloxi fill more fandy, and have fuffered themselves to be perfuaded, that the entrance of the Miffiffirpi is impracticable to veffels above a certain bulk; and that the country is uninhabitable for fifty leagues up the river. They would have been of a very different opinion, had they had penetration enough to diftruft thole perfons who fpoke in this manner, and to difcover the motives which made them do fo.

The fecond are wretches, who being banifhed from France for their crimes or ill-behaviour, true or fuppofed, or who, in order to thun the purfuits of their creditors, lifted themfelves among the troops, or hired themfelves to the plantations. Both of them, looking upon this country as a pace of banifhment only, were confequently hocked with every thing: they have no tee to bind them, nor any concern for the progrefs of a colony of which they are involuntary members, and give themfelves very little trouble about the advantages it is capable of procuring to the ftate.

The third are fuch, who having feen nothing but mifery, in a country for which exceffive fums have been difburfed, attribute to it, without reflection, what ought folely to be laid to the incapacity or negligence of thofe who were charged with the fettling it. You are, befides, not unacquainted with the reafons for publifhing, that Louifiana contained in its bofom immenfe treafures; and that its value to us was very near equal to the famous mines of St. Barbe, and others ftill richer, from which we flattered ourfelves we fhould be able to drive the poffeffors with eafe: and becaufe thefe ridiculous tales found credit with fools, inftead of imputing the miftake to themfelves, into which their foolifh credulity had engaged them, they difcharged their ill humour upon this country, in which they found no one article that had been promifed them.

> I am, &xc.

LETTER

 - í and mido. $=1$ ( $\quad=$

L E T T ER XXXIII.

Defcription of Biloxi. Of the Plant Cafina or Apa-Cacbina. Of Myrtle-wax, of the Mobile. Of the Tcbactas, of the Bay of St. Bernard. Voyage from Biloxi to New Orleans, by the Way of Lake Pontchartrain.

From on board the Adour, April 5, 1722.

Madam,

ON the 26 th, after clofing my letter, I went on board and we got under fail; but after making a turn to the fouthward, the wind turning contrary, we were obliged to come to anchor again, where we remained the two following days. On the 2gth, we weighed early in the morning; but there was fo little wind and the fea ran fo high, that we got no farther than fourteen leagues, which was not above half the diftance we intended. On the 30 th, the wind was neither more favourable able nor the fea any calmer till towards four o'clock in the evening, when a fhower of rain cleared the fky, which was very foggy, and laid the fea: but about an hour or two after, the fog returned and became fo thick, that not being able to fee our courfe, we thought it beft to come to anchor. The next day, the mift fill continuing, M. Pauger and I failed in the fhallop to the road of the inand aux Vaiffenx, and about five in the evening went afhore at Biloxi.

This whole coaft is extremely flat, the merchant veffels not being abie to approach nearer than four leagues, and the fmalleft brigantines not nearer than two. Thefe laft are even obliged to get farther off, when the wind blows from the north or north-weft, or elfe ly dry, as happened that very night I landed. The road lies all along the illand aux Vaifeaux, which ftretches about a league from eaft to weft, but is very narrow. To the eaft of this ifland lies the ifland Daupbine, formerly called Ifle Mafacre, where there was a tolerably convenient harbour, which a blaft of wind deftroyed in the fpace of two hours, not much above a year ago, by choaking up its entrance with fand. To the weftward of the ine aux Vaifeaux are the ile des Cbats, or of Bienville, the ifle a Corne, and the iflands de la Cbandeleur.

Biloxi is the coaft of the main-land, lying to the northward of the road, which name it has from an Indian nation fettled here formerly, who have fince retired towards the north-weft, on the banks of a fmall river, called the river of pearls, on account of fome quantity of bad pearls having been found in it. A worfe place than this could not have been chofen for the general quarters of the colony, colony, feeing it can receive no affiftance from fhipping, nor afford them any, for the reafons already mentioned. Befides, the road has two great defects, the anchorage is not good, and is full of worms, which deftroy all the fhipping : and the only advantage that can be drawn from it, is its ferving for fhelter to veffels in a gale of wind, before they difcover the mouth of the Miffifippi, which, being low land, it would be dangerous to approach, in bad weather, without having firft feen it.

Biloxi is not of more value by land than by fea. The foil is very fandy, producing little but pines and cedars. Cafina, otherwife called Apalachina, grows here every where in abundance: it is a very fmall fhrub, the leaves of which, infufed like thofe of tea, are reckoned a good diffolvent and an excellent fudorifick, but their principal quality confifts in their being diuretick. The Spaniards make great ufe of it over all Florida : it is even their ordinary drink. It began to be in fome repute at Paris when I left it; but that was a bad time for making fortunes, they difappearing or vanifhing almoft as fuddenly as they were acquired. I know, however, that many who ufe Apalachina give it great commendations.

There are two forts of it, differing only in the fize of their leaves. Thofe of the large fpecies are more than an inch in length, the others are about half as long. In fhape and fubflance they are pretty much like the leaves of the box-tree, excepting that they are rounder towards the extremities, and of a brighter green. The name of

Vol. II. X Apalachina

A palachina, which we have given to this fhrub, is derived from the Apalaches, a nation of Florida, from whom the Spaniards learned the ufe of this plant; and here follows the manner of preparing it amonglt both nations.

A quantity of leaves is fet on the fire in an earthen pot, and roafted till they become of a reddifh colour ; they then pour boiling water flowly upon them till the pot is full. This water takes the colour of the leaves, and when decanted off, rifes and foams like beer. It is taken as warm as poffible, and the Indians would rather refrain from eating, than not drink it morning and evening; they believe they fhould fall fick fhould they leave it off; and it is faid the Spaniards in Florida entertain the fame notion.

Half an hour after it is taken, it begins to difcharge itfelf, and continues doing fo about an hour. It is difficult to conceive how a beverage, which does nothing almoft but run through one, can be fo nourifling, as this is faid to be: but it is eafier to underftand how it cleanfes the urinary paffages, and prevents diftempers in the reins. When the Indians want to purge, they mix it with fea-water, which occafions great evacuations; but if the dofe of fea-water be too ftrong, it may prove mortal, inftances of which are not wanting. I have feen it taken in France, but without that apparatus, and in the fame manner as they ufe tea; but the dofe is doubled, and it boils near half an hour, and 1 doubt not but that it is then very efficacious.

There

There is a fpecies of myrtle with very large leaves found in this country, and which I know to to be likewife very common on the coafts of Acadia, and in the Englifh colonies on the continent. Some have given it the name of laurel, but falfely, its leaf having the fmell of a myrtle, and the Englh have no other name for it, but that of the candle myrtle, le myrtle a chandelle. This fhrub bears a fmall grain, which during the fpring is full of a gluey fubftance, and being thrown into boiling water, fwims upon it, and becomes a kind of green wax, not fo fat and more friable than bees-wax, but equally fit for burning. The only inconvenience attending it is that it is very brittle; but it may be mixed with another wax extremely liquid, gathered in the woods of the American iflands, which, however, is not neceffary, unlefs it is intended to be made into tapers. I have feen candles of it which gave as clear a light and lafted as long as ours. Our miffionaries in the neighbourhood of Acadia mix it with tallow, which makes them liable to run; becaufe the tallow does nut incorporate well with the wax. The Sieur Alexander who is here, in the company's fervice, in quality of furgeon and botanift, ufes it without any mixture, and his candles have not this defect, their light being foft and very clear, and the fmoke, which they yield, has the very agreeable fmell of the myrtle. He even entertains hopes of making them perfectly white, and fhewed me a piece which was more than half fo *. He pretends, that had he five or fix of thofe flaves which are unfit for ordinary labour, he could

[^6]gather a quantity of the grains in a reafon, fufficient to yield a quantity of wax, enough to load a veffel.

Thirteen or fourteen leagues from Biloxi, towards the eaft, you find the river Mobile, which runs from north to fouth, and the mouth of which is oppofite to the ifland Dauphine. It takes its rife in the country of the Chicachas, its courfe being about an hundred and thirty leagues. Its channel is very narrow and extremely winding, which, however, does not prevent its being very rapid: but no veffels, excepting fmall pirogues, can get up it, when the waters are low. We have a fort upon this river, which has been a long time the principal poft of the colony; the foil, however, is not good, but there is an opportunity of carry= ing on a trade with the Spaniards, which was then our only object in view.

It is affirmed, that fome leagues beyond this fort, a quarry has been difcovered: if this difcovery is real, and the quarry is large, it may prevent the entire defertion of this poft, which feveral inhabitants had begun to leave, not caring to cultivate a foil, which would not anfwer the expences they were at. I do not, however, believe that we fhall ever evacuate the fort of Mobile, were it only to preferve our alliance with the Tchactas, a numerous nation which forms a neceffary barrier againft the Chicachas and the other Indians bordering on Carolina. Garcilaffo de la Vega, in his hiftory of Florida, makes mention of a village called Ma villa, which has without doubt given its name to the river and the nation fettled upon its banks. The Mauvilians were then very powerful, but there are hardly any traces of them now remaining.

309  )

Our people are at prefent employed in feeking a proper place for a fettlement, to the weftward of the Miffifippi, and it is believed, that a place is found about a hundred leagues from the mouth of the river, in a bay, which fometimes bears the name of St. Magdalen, fometimes that of St. Lewis; but moft commonly that of St. Bernard. It receives into it feveral pretty large rivers, and it was here that M. de la Sale firft made land, when he miffed the mouth of the Miffifippi. A brigantine has been fome time ago fent to make a furvey of it, but they met with Indians who feemed little difpofed to receive us, and who were not treated in fuch a manner as to gain their affections. l have juft now heard, that the Spaniards have been beforehand with us.

There is in reality fomewhat more preffing, and of greater confequence, than this undertaking. I am fenfible, that commerce is the foul of colonies, and that they are only ufeful to fuch a kingdom as ours by that means, and in order to prevent our neighbours from becoming too powerful; but if the cultivation of lands is not firft attended to, trade, after enriching a few private perfons, will foon fall to nothing, and the colony never be well fettled. The neighbourhood of the Spaniards may have its advantages; but, let us fuffer them to draw as near as they think fit, we are not in a condition, and we have no occafion, to extend our fettlements farther. They are fufficiently peaceable in this country, and they never will be ftrong enough to give us any difturbance: it is not even their intereft to drive us from hence; and if they are not as yet fenfible, they will foon be fo, that they cannot have a better barrier againft the Englifh than Louifiana.

( 310 )

The heats were very troublefome at Biloxi, from the middie of March; and, I imagine, when once the fun has taken effect upon the fand, the heat will become exceffive. It is indeed faid, that were it not for the breeze which fprings up pretty regularly between nine and ten every morning, and continues till fun-fet, it would not be poffible to live here. The mouth of the Miffiffippi lies in twenty nine degrees of latitude, and the coaft of Biloxi in thirty. In the month of February, we had fome piercing cold, weather, when the wind was at north and north-weft, but it did not laft: they were fometimes followed by pretty fharp heats, accompanied with florms and thunder, fo that in the morning we had winter, in the afternoon fummer, with fome fmall intervals of fpring and harveft betwixt the two. The breeze blows commonly from the eaft: when it comes from the fouth, it is only a reflected wind, and not near fo refrefhing; but it is ftill a wind, and when that is entirely wanting, there is hardly any fuch thing as breathing.

On the 24th of March, I fet out from Biloxi, where I had been ftopt above a month, by being taken ill of the jaundice, and took the route of New Orleans, where I was to embark in a veffel belonging to the company, called the Adour. I made this voyage in a pirogue and never made a more difagreeable one. The weft wind, which in three hours time had carried me five leagues from Biloxi, gave place to a fouth wind fo very violent, that I was obliged to halt. I had fcarce time to fet up my tent, when a dreadful fhower of rain, accompanied with thunder, laid us all under water.

( $3^{11}$ )

Two fmall veffels, which fet out at the fame time with me, took advantage of this wind which carried them a good way in a few hours, and I regretted very much my not doing the fame: but I foon learned that their fate was rather to be pitied than envied ; the firft was in continual danger of hipwreck, and the people on board arrived at New Orleans rather dead than alive. The fecond failed half-way, and five of the paffengers were drowned in a meadow, which the tempett had converted into a fwamp. The wind continued the whole night with the fame violence, and the rain did not ceafe till next day at noon. It began again in the evening, and lafted till day-light, accompanied with thunder.

When you range along within fight of this coaft, it feems to be very agreeable, but on approaching nearer, it appears to be quite another thing. It is all a fandy bottom as at Biloxi, and nothing but a bad fort of wood is found upon it. I have obferved here a fort of forrel, which has the fame tafte with ours, but its leaves are narrower, and occafion, as is faid, the bloody-flux. There is likewife in thefe places a fort of ahh, called bois d' Amourette; and its bark, which is full of prickles, is reckoned a fpeedy and fovereign remedy againft the tooth-ach'.

On the 26 th, it rained the who'e day, and though the fea was calm, we made but little progrefs. We advanced fomewhat farther on the twenty-feventh; but on the following night loft our way off the inland of Pearls. The next day we encamped at the entrance of lake Pontchartrain, having a little before left upon our right the river of pearls, which has three mouths. Thefe three branches feparate, about four leagues from the fea, a little above Biloxi.

In the afternoon, we paffed lake Pontchartrain, which is feven or eight leagues over; and at midnight entered Bayouc St. fean. Thofe who have failed the firft upon this lake found it, as they faid, fo full of alligators, that they could hardly make a ftroke with an oar without touching one of them. They are at prefent very fcarce, and we faw only fome marks of them at our encampment ; for thefe animals lay their eggs upon land. After repofing myfelf a little, at leaving the lake, I purfued my journey by land, and arrived before day aţ NewOrleans.

The Adour was no longer there, but was at no great diftance, and $I$ went on board the next day, being the firt of April. The inundation was now at its height, and, confequently, the river much more rapid than I had found it the month before. Befides, a fhip, efpecially a flute or pink, is not fo eafily wrought as a coafter; and, as our crew were not accuftomed to this navigation, we had a good deal of difficulty in getting out of the river. The fhip being driven fometimes on one fide, fometimes on the other, her yards and rigging frequently got foul of trees, and we were oftener than once obliged to cut the latter, in order to get clear.

It was fill much worfe, when we got the length of the channels; for the currents drove us always upon the firft with extreme violence. We were even involved in one of the fmalleft, and 1 know not to this day how we got rid of it. We were, however, quit for an anchor which we left there; having having already loft one two days before, fo that we had only two remaining. So difcouraging a circumftance gave us fome ferious thoughts, but the youth and little experience of thofe, to whofe management we were entrufted, occafioned us ftill greater uneafinefs.

The Adour is a very fine veffel, three hundred tons burthen, and left France extremely well manned, under the direction of a captain well acquainted with his bufinefs, and a lieutenant who had an exceeding good character. The latter was left fick at St. Domingo, and the captain, having had a difference with one of the directors of the company, was by him turned out of his employment. In order to fill up the room of thefe two principal officers, they pitched upon a young Maloin, whohad come three years before to Louifiana, in quality of a pilot or pilot's apprentice, and had in that time got the command of a coafter in the road of Biloxi, employed in carrying provifions, fometimes to the Mobile, and fometimes to New Orleans. He feems to have every thing requifite for forming an expert feaman; he loves and applies himfelf to his bufinefs : but we fhould be very well pleafed not to be obliged to fee his apprenticefhip, efpecially in a navigation attended with fo many difficulties.

He has for fecond, under him, an officer who came from France in quality of an enfign, who is ftill a young man, and very proper to be a fubaltern under experienced chiefs, who fhould leave him nothing but the care of executing their orders. It would be no eafy matter to find a hardier feaman in ftormy weather, which he has braved from his infancy in the Newfoundland filheries; and two or three fhip-wrecks, from which he has happily extricated himfelf, have infpired him with fuch a confidence, that I fhould be much furprized if in the end he does not come badly off.

Our firft pilot feems to be a little riper than thefe two officers, and great ftrefs is laid upon his knowledge of the gulph of Florida, which he has already once paffed through. This, however, is but little for an acquaintance with the moft dangerous paffage in the American feas, where fhip-wrecks happen by thoufands. Befides, I am afraid, that an air of felf fufficiency I perceive in him, may produce fome fatal confequences. He has two fubalterns who are good men ; and we have fifty failors of Bretaigne, a little mutinous, indeed, but ftrong and vigorous, moft of them having been at the cod-fifhery, which is a good fchool : their marine officers feem to me to be men of fenfe and execution.

In the mean time, notwithftanding all the delays I have fpoken of, we anchored on the fecond in the evening, within-fide of the bar; we paffed it on the third, but for want of wind could get no farther. Yefterday we were ftopped the whole day, and this night we had a gale of wind at fouth, which made us thankful we were not at fea fo near the fhore. I hope, Madam, to write you in a fhort time from St. Domingo, at which place our veffel is to take in a cargo of fugar, which lies ready for her. I take the opportunity of a coafter going up to New Orleans, to fend you this letter by a veffel which is bound directly to France.

I am, &c.

L E T TER XXXIV.

Voyage to the Gulf of Bahama. Shiproreck of the Adour. Return to Louifiana, along the Coaft of Florida. Defcription of that Coaf.

Biloxi, fune 5, 1722.

Madam,

TPromifed to write to you fhortly from St. Domingo. Behold me, after two months have paffed, as far from it as I then was. The account of the fad adventure, which has brought me back to this colony, and which has but too truly fulfilled what I forefaw, with a few obfervations on a country which I had thoughts of vifiting, will form the fubftance of this letter. I am not, however, in other refpects fo much to be pitied as you may imagine. I am fully recovered of my fatigues; I have run great hazards, but have been happily delivered from them: the paft misfortune is like a dream, and often like a very agreeable one.

About half an hour at moft, before I had clofed my laft, the wind coming about to the North

( 316 )

North-Weft, we made fail. I fhould have thought the fanctity of the feftival, which was that of Eaf-ter-day, would have prevailed with the captain to delay our departure till next day, efpecially as it was now afternoon. But as we were pretty fhort of provifions, a day's delay might be attended with difagreeable confequences. We foon loft fight of land, and after failing about an hour, after enjoying the curious fight of the mixture of the waters of the fea and of the Miffiffippi, but fo as to be ftill diftinguifhable, we at laft found ourfelves got to pure falt water.

I may poffibly be told, that we had quitted the right channel, and I will allow this might be the cafe. But the fight or ftruggle we obferved fo near the fhore, is no fign that the river gets the better to fuch a degree as to force itfelf a paffage, and for twenty leagues in the open fea, to give laws to the ocean itfelf. Befides, were this fact true, at leaft in the time of the great land floods, in the place where we then were, how could men be at fuch a lofs to find out the mouth of the river? The difference in the colour of its waters would have, fufficiently, guided the moft inattentive.

With regard to this colour, I have told you that the Miffifippi, after its junction with the Miffouri, takes the colour of the waters of this river, which is white: but would you believe it, of all the forts of water which are made ufe of in long voyages, there is none which keeps fo long as this! Befides it is excellent drinking after having been left to fettle in jars, at the bottom of which is found a kind of white tartar, which in all appearance ferves both to give it its colour, and to purify and preferve it.

On the twelfth at noon, after having fuffered by extreme heats for feveral days, and which were ftill more intolerable in the night than in the day time, we difcovered Cape de Sed on the North fhore of the ifland of Cuba, and very high land. At fun fet we were eaft of it, kept the Cape on our eaftern quarter, and fo failed along in fight of the fhore. On the morrow at day-break we were abreaft of the Havanna. This city is eighteen leagues from Cape Sed ; and half way to it, you difcover a pretty high mountain, the fummit of which is a kind of platform : they call it la table a Marianne, Marianne's table.

Two leagues beyond the Havanna, there is a fmall fort on the coaft which bears the name of la Hogue, and from which you firt difcover le Pain, or loaf of Matanzas. This is a mountain, the fummit of which is fhaped like an oven, or if you will a loaf. This ferves to diftinguifh the Bay of Matanzas, which is fourteen leagues from the Havanna. The heat continued to encreafe, for we were now on the limits or frontiers of the Torrid Zone. Befides, we had fcarce a breath of wind, and advanced only by favour of the current, which bore us to the eaftward.

On the fourteenth, towards fix in the evening, we faw from the top-maft head, the land of Florida. There is no prudent navigator who happens to have this profpect, without fix or feven hours daylight at leaft, but who tacks about and ftands out to the fea till morning; there being no fea in the whole ocean where there is a greater neceffity of a clear profpect, becaufe of the various currents, with which we can never, with reafon, believe ourfelves fufficiently acquainted. We have a recent enough example in the Spanifh Galleons, which were loft here fome years ago, for having neglected the precaution I have juft now mentioned. The Chevalier d'Here, captain of a thip who accompanied them, did his utmoft to prevail with the general of the Flota to wait for the day before he entered the Gulf : he could not prevail, and did not think proper to throw himfelf headlong with him over this precipice.

Our captain, who had very good advice given him on this head, was fully refolved to profit by it ; but too much eafinefs, on his fide, was attended with the fame confequences as the prefumption of the Spanifh general had been. His firft pilot, who imagined himfelf one of the moft expert men in the world, and his lieutenant, who did not know what it was to doubt of any thing, were of opinion to continue their courfe, and the captain had not courage to oppofe them. He advifed, indeed, to fteer at leaft north eaft, and the fequel fhewed, that if his opinion had been followed, we fhould have efcaped being fhipwrecked. But he could only obtain a north-north-eaft courfe; the pilot affuring him that the currents fet with impetuofity to the eaftward, which was indeed true near the lands on the other fide, but they fet to the weftward on that on which we were.

At feven o'clock, the land fill appeared at a good diftance, and we could not fee it at firft from the tops; half an hourafter, one of the failors, by means of the flathes of lightening, obferved that the water had changed its colour. He took notice of it, but his information was received with derifion, and he was told that was only the lightening which made the water look white. He ftill perfifted, and many of his companions foon came into his opinion : the officers would ftill have laughed at them, but they were in fuch numbers, and made fuch a noife, that at laft the captain ordered foundings to be tried.

Six fathoms of water were only found; the only fafe part we could then have taken, was to caft anchor immediately, but there were none in readinefs. It was propofed to wear the fhip, and perhaps it was ftill time, had expedition been ufed; but they amufed themfelves with founding again, when no more than five fathoms were found. The lead was caft a third time, and then there were only three. Conceive to yourfelf, Madam, a parcel of children, who faw themfelves hurried on to a precipice, and had all their attention employed about difcovering its depth, without taking any meafures to avoid it : fuch was precifely our cafe.

Immediately a confufed noife arofe, every one crying with all his might, fo that the officers could not make themfelves heard, and two or three minutes after the veffel ftruck : that inftant a ftorm arofe, followed by rain which laid the wind, but it foon fprung up again at fouth, and blew harder than before. The fhip immediately began to ftick faft by the rudder, and there was great reafon to fear that the mainmaft, which at every ftroke fprung up to a good height, fhould beat out a hole in her bottom; therefore it was immediately condemned in form, and cut away, the captain according to cuftom, giving it the firft ftroke with a hatchet.

The lieutenant upon this went on board the Ahallop, in order to difcover in what place we were, were, and what condition the fhip was in. He found that there was only four feet water a-head, that the bank on which we had ftruck, was fo fmall, that there was juft a place for the veffel, and all around it fhe would have been a-float. But had we efcaped this bark, we muft have fallen upon another, for it was furrounded by them, and certainly we could not have met with one that was more convenient.

The wind fill blew with violence, and the veffel continued to ftrike, and at every ftroke we expected fhe would have gone to pieces. All the effects of terror were painted on every face, and after the firft tumult formed by the cries of the failors who were working, and the groans of the paffengers, who laid their account with perihing every moment, was over, a dead and profound filence reigned throughout the whole veffel. We have fince learnt that fome few had fecrecly taken their meafures not to be furprifed in cafe the veffel fhould fall to pieces: not only the fhallop, but the canoe were launched and in readinefs, and fome trufty failors had warning given them to hold themfelves prepared for the firtt fignal. I was afterwards told, that they had refolved not to leave me behind.

What is certain, is, I paffed the night without clofing my eyes, and in the fituation of a man who never expects to fee daylight again. It however appeared, and fhewed us the land about two leagues from us, but it was not the fame which we had at firft feen, and which we ftill perceived, tho' at a great diftance, but a low land which did not feem at firft to be inhabited. This fight, however, did not fail to give us pleafure, and fomewhat to revive our fpirits.

We then examined if there was any prowability of getting the Adour a-float again, and as it was prudent to have more refources than one, we at the fame time confidered of the means of extricating ourfelves from our prefent uncomfortable fituation, on the fuppofition it was impoffible to recover the veffel. We then called to mind that we had a flat-bottomed boat on board, which was intended to be made ufe of in loading the fugars at St. Domingo. This was a very wife precaution taken by the captain, who had been informed that veffels were frequently detained longer in the road on that account, than was confiftent with the intereft of the owners, or the health of the crews; but providence had without doubt another view, when it infpired him with this thought. This boat was the inftrument of our fafety.

I do not know what paffed this day between the officers and the pilot, but there was no more talk of getting off the veffel. Many have pretended that all endeavours for that purpofe would have been in vain; but the captain has more than once complained to me that they would not fuffer him to make the attempts as he wifhed to do. It was therefore refolved to carry all the people ahore this fame day, and they were at work the whole morning in building a raft, that they might not be obliged to make feveral trips.

It was not, however, thought proper to abandon the fhip as yet; and the paffengers only were embarked in the fhallop and on the raft. At the diftance of a cannon fhot from the fhip we found the fea ran very high, and the bifcuit we carried with us was damaged by the water; a fmall pirogue which followed the fhallop, had a good deal of difficulty to live; and the raft which carried two and twenty men, was driven fo far out by the current, that we believed her loft.

[^7]
322 )

The fhallop in which I was, made all poffible hafte afhore, in order to go afterwards to the affiftance of the reft; but juft as we were ready to land, we perceived a large company of Indians, armed with bows and arrows coming down to the fea fide. This fight made us reflect that we had no arms; and we flopt fome time, not daring to advance. We even imagined, every thing confidered, it would be imprudent to go any further. The Indians perceived our embaraffiment, and eafily underfood the caufe. They drew near us, calling out in Spanifh, that they were friends. But feeing that this did not encourage us, they laid down their arms and came towards us, having the water up to their middle.

We were foon furrounded by them, and it is certain that encumbered as we were with baggage, in a boat where we could hardly turn ourfelves about; it would have been eafy for them to have deftroyed us. They afked us firt if we were Englifhmen, we anfwered that we were not, but good friends and allies to the Spaniards; at which they teftified a great deal of joy, inviting us to come afhore on their inand, and affuring us that we fhould be as fafe there as aboard our own veffel. Diftruft, on certain occafions, fhews only weaknefs, and befides gives rife to dangerous fufpicions. We therefore thought we ought to accept the invitation of thefe barbarians; fo we followed them to their inland, which we found to be one of the Martyrs.

What was pleafant is, that we were determined to take this refolution by the arrival of the pirogue, in which there were only four or five men, when we were parlying with the Indians: we certainly ran a great rifque in delivering ourfelves into their hands without arms, and we were afterwards fenfible of it: four or five men more could not have made them alter their defigns, fuppofing they had been bad towards us; and I never refiect on the confidence which fo flender a reinforcement infpired us with, but it brings into my mind, thofe perfons who are afraid to be by themfelves in the dark, but are at once encouraged by the prefence of a child, by its diverting their imagination, which is the only caufe of their fear.

We were no fooner-landed on the inland, than little fatisfied as we were with refpect to the Indians, we alfo fell into a diftruft of our officers. The captain of the Adour had attended us thus far, but as foon as he had fet us on fhore, he took leave of us, faying that he was obliged to return on board, where he had ftill a great many things to do, and that he would immediately fend us whatever we ftood in need of, efpecially arms. There was nothing in this but what was reafonable, and we eafily conceived that his prefence might be neceffary aboard the veffel; but we reflected that he had only taken the paffengers out of her, and that upon his return, the whole crew would be all together on board.

This made us furpect that the boat of which I have fpoken, was only a lure to amufe us, and that they had put us afhore, as being an encumbrance to them, in order to be able to make ufe of the fhalop and canoe, to tranfport themfelves to the

( 324 )

Havannah or St. Auguftin in Florida. Thefe fufpicions were ftrengthened in every one of us, when we perceived that we were all in the fame way of thinking, and this agreement made us imagine it was not without foundation; it was therefore refolved amongft ourfelves, that I fhould return to the veffel with the captain, in order to prevent fuch a violent refolution, fhould they attempt it, from taking effect.

I therefore declared to the captain, that as his chaplain was to remain on the ifland, it was not proper I fhould ftay likewife; that it would be better to feparate us, and that I was refolved to feep no where but aboard, whillt any one remained in the fhip. He feemed a little furprized at what I faid, but made no oppofition, and fo fet out. I found on getting aboard, that they had fet the fails, to try as they faid, to get her off; but a great many other things were to be done for that purpofe, which however they did not think proper to attempt.

Half an hour after, the wind turned to the eaft and blew very hard, which obliged us to furl the fails; this gale, however, was the faffety of thofe who were on the raft, which had been carried out very far in the offing. The waves drove her back towards us, and as foon as we perceived her, the captain lent the fhallop, which toak her in tow, and brought her along fide. Thefe unhappy men, were for the moft part, poor paffengers who looked for nothing but death; and we on our fide, began to defpair of being able to fave them, when providence raifed this little tempeft in order to preferve them from fhipwreck.

(325)

My prefence was more neceffary on board than I thought it would have been. Our failors, during the captain's abfence, had thought fit to drown the fenfe of their misfortunes in wine: in fpite of the Jieutenant, whom they did not much regard, and whom feveral did not love, they had broken open the captain's cafe of liquors, and had got almoft all of them dead drunk. I, befides, perceived in the crew, fome feeds of diffention from which 1 imagined every thing was to be apprehended, if not remedied in time; and the more fo as the captain, tho' well enough liked by the failors, could not make himfelf obeyed by his officers, moft of whom were difpofed to mutiny, and could not endure his lieutenant.

To increafe our perplexity, a number of the Indians had followed clofe after us, and we perceived if we had nothing to fear from their violence, it would not be eafy to get rid of their importunities, efpecially as it behoved us to be very watchful over them, to prevent their ftealing. He that feemed the principal man, called himfelf Don Antonio, and fpoke indifferent good Spanifh. He had been more fucceffful in imitating the gravity and manners of the Spaniards. Whenever he faw any one tolerably drefied, he afked if he was a Cavallero, having before told us that he was one himfelf and one of the greateft diftinction in his nation. His difpofitions, however, were not much of the gentleman; every thing that he faw he coveted, and if he had not been prevented, he and his people would have left us nothing they could have carried away. He afked me for my girdle, I told him I had occafion for it, and could not part with it; notwithftanding which, he continued to demand it with great earneftnefs.

We learned from this man, that almoft all the Indians of this village had been baptized at the Havannah, to which they made a voyage every year. This city lies at the diftance of forty-five leagues, and they make this paffage in fmall very flat pirogues, in which we fhould hardly truft our-felves'a-crofs the Seine at Paris. Don A ntonio, added they, had a king called Don Diego, whom we fhould fee to-morrow. He afterwards afked us what route we had refolved to take, and offered to conduct us to St. Auguftine. We thanked him for his offer, treated him and all his company handfomely, who returned to all appearance very well fatisfied with their reception.

ThefeIndians have a redder fkin than any of thofe I have yet feen : we could not learn the name of their nation : tho' they deferve no good character, yet they do not feem to be fo bad as the Calos or Carlos, fo infamous for their cruelty, whofe country lies at no great diftance from the Martyrs ; I do not believe they are Canibals, but perhaps they appeared fo tractable to us only becaufe we were ftronger than them. I do not know what has embroiled them with the Englifh, but we had great reafon to think that they did not love them. Perhaps Don Antonio had no other motive for his vifit, but to examine if we were of that nation, or if they fhould not run too great a hazard in attacking us.

On the fixteenth I went afhore to thofe left on the ifland, and fulfilled the promife we had made them the evening before. I fipent almoft the whole dáy with them, and in the evening at my return, found the whole veffel in confuiion. The authors of this diforder were the marine officers, and all the beft failors in the fhip had taken their fide. Their quarrel was with the lieutenant, who, they faid, had hitherto treated them with a great deal of haughtinefs and feverity. The wine, which they had at difcretion, had inflamed their paffions in fuch a manner, that it was fcarce poffible to make them liften to reafon.

The captain fhewed on this occafion a wifdom, firmnefs, and moderation, which could not well have been expected from his age, little experience and paft conduct : he knew how to make himfelf loved and feared by people who feemed to be guided by nothing but fury and caprice. The lieutenant on his part confounded the moft mutinous by his intrepidity, and having found means to feparate and employ them, in the end made himfelf obeyed. They had at laft drawn from the bottom of the hold the boat that had been fo long promifed, and had carried it to the ifland. This mult now be equipped, lodgings mutt be found till it could be got ready, provifions and ammunition mult be got from the fhip, and laftly, they muft fortify themfelves againft any furprize of the Indians. The captain employed in this fervice all fuch as he had moft need to make fure of, and begged of me to remain on board to affift the lieutenant in reftraining the reft within bounds.

On the twenty-feventh at day-break there appeared a fail within two large leagues of us; we hung out the fignal of diftrefs, and fometime afterwards we obferved that he had laid his fhip to, to wait for us. The lieutenant immediately embarked on board a canoe, and went on board to fee whether the captain would agree to receive all of us. But this was only a Y 4 brigantine brigantine of an hundred tons, that had been plundered by pirates, and which had for three days part done their utmoft to get out of this bay, into which the currents, ftronger this year than they had ever been known, had carried them in fpite of all their efforts, and tho' the wind was at eaft north eaft. 'Tis true, we did not come to know this but by the account of the officer, who was by fome imagined to have invented this fory in order to lay to the charge of the irregularity of the current, the miffortune into which his own obftinacy had hurried us.

Be this as it will, the Englifh mafter con'ented to embark twenty of our people, provided he was fupplied with provifions and water, of which he ftood in extreme want. The condition was accepted, and he accordingly drew near to caft anchor as clofe to us as poffible. But a frong fouth-weft wind arifing, he was obliged to continue his courfe, leaft by endeavouring to affift us he fhould expore himfelf to Chip-wreck.

On the twenty-ninth we had fight of three veffels more, and fent to make them the fame propofals we had formerly done, but without effect. They were Englifh too, and complained they had been plundered by pirates.

This very day, as there remained nothing on board the Adour which we could carry away with us, we bid her the laft farewel; and with ftill more regret, as for the four days fince the had been wrecked the had not made one drop of water, and we all went on fhore after fun-fet. Here we found tents, which had been made with the fails of the fhip, a ftrong guard-room, where centinels were kept day and night, with provifions difpofed in the beft manner in the magazine, where alfo a guard was kept.

The ifland, on which we were, was in appearance about four leagues round; there were others near it of different extent, and that on which the Indians had their tents was the fmalleft of all and the neareft to ours. Here they lived folely by firhing, and this whole coaft was as plentifully ftocked in that, as the land was deftitute of every article, for the fupport of human life. As to their drefs, a few leaves of trees, or a piece of bark was fufficient for them. They cover no part of their bodies but the part which all men from modefty conceal.

The foil of all thefe iflands is a fort of very fine fand, or rather a fort of calcined chalk, interfperfed with white coral, which is eafily broken. Thus you fee nothing on it but fhrubs and bufhes. The banks of the fea are covered with a pretty fort of fhells, and fome fpunges are likewife found on them, which feem to have been caft on fhore here by the waves in ftormy weather. 'Tis pretended that what keeps the Indians from leaving this place, is the number of hipwrecks that happen in the mouth of the gulph of Bahama, of which they never fail to make all the advantage poffible.

There is not fo much as a fingle fourfooted beaft on thefe iflands, which feem to have been curfed of God and man, and which would be utterly uninhabited, except by a fet of wretches, who fubfift on the deftruction and miferies of others, and by compleating what their ill deftiny only begun.

On the twentieth, Don Diego paid us a vifit. He is a young man of a ftature fomewhat under the middle fize, and with a very forry prefence. He is very near as naked as his fubjects, and the few rags on his back were hardly worth picking up at one's feet. He wore on his head a fort of fillet, made of I know not what fort of fluff, and which. fome travellers would not have failed to call a diadem. He was without attendance, or any mark of diftinction or dignity, or in fhort any thing to fignify what perfonage he was. A young pretty handfome woman, and decently clothed for an Indian, accompanied him, and was, we were told, the queen his wife.

> We received their majefties of Florida, in a cavalierlike manner enough ; we made a fort of amity with them however, and they feemed well enough fatisfied with us; but we could fee none of thefe Caciques, whofe power and wealth are fo much vaunted by the hiftorian of Florida. We faid a word or two to Don Diego concerning the offer, which Don Antonio had made us, of carrying us to St. Auguftin, and he gave us to hope for all the fervices that lay in his power. In order to induce him the more to perform his promife, I made him a prefent of one of my fhirts, which he received very thankfully.

He returned next day, having my fhirt above his own tatters, and it trailed upon the ground. He gave us to underftand, that he was not properly the fovereign of his nation, but held of a Cacique at fome diftance. He is, notwithftanding, abfolute in his own village, of which he lately gave us a convincing proof. Don Antonio, who feemed at leaft double his age, and who would have eafily beaten one double his ftrength, came to vifit us a fhort while after, and told us, that Don Diego had drubbed him twice very heartily, for getting drunk on board the Adour, where probably fome remainder of fpirituous liquors had been left. The moft fenfible difference to be found between the Indians of Canada, and thofe of Florida, is this dependance on their chiefs, and the refpect they fhew them. Thus we fee not in them as in the former thofe elevated fentiments, and that haughtinefs which is the effect of their independance, and which is fupplied in policied ftates by thefe principles of religion and honour, which are inftilled into the mind by education in their early and tender years.

On the twenty-fecond, Don Diego came frankly, and without flaying for any invitation to dine with us, clothed as on the preceding day. He feemed delighted with this drefs, which gave him however a very ridiculous air, and which, joined to the badnefs of his phyfiognomy, made him exactly refemble a man going to pay an amende bonourable, that is, fuffer fome fcandalous punifhment. Whether from religion or natural reluctance, we could never prevail with him to eat any flefh; we had ftill fome filh left, which he himfelf had fent us the evening before : he eat of this, and drank pure water.

After the repaft we were willing to fpeak about bufinefs ; but he told us at once, that after having maturely confidered the propofal we had made him, he could neither fpare us Don Antonio nor any other of his people for guides to conduct us to St. Auguftin, as there were numerous nations on the way we muft of necefity take, with whom he was actually at war. I do not know whether we now did not ferioully repent of having on fuch flight grounds abandoned the Adour; for after Don Diego left us, the canoe was fent to her, but thofe who vifited her reported, that the Indians had entirely demolifhed her, and that fhe was filling full of water.

On the twenty-third, the boat was finimed, and we began to think in good earneft of coming to fome final refolution. Two ways offered, on which the opinions were divided; the firf were for rifking the paffage to the Havannah, and the others for purfuing the coaft to St. Auguftin. The Jaft feemed to be the fafeft, as the firft was the fhorteft. But had this been folid, it ought to have been refolved upon the day after we were caft away, or rather we ought to have fent our longboat to inform the governor of our fituation, and pray him to fend us a brigantine. The rigging only of the Adour, would have been fufficient to have indemnified him for his expences.

Be this as it will, the greateft part of our company were for this laft refolution ; and it was impoffible for me to bring them to any other. They were forty in number, they demanded the longboat and canoe, and we were obliged to, comply. The captain of the Adour was of this number. Had it not been for this reafon, I fhould have thought myfelf obliged in duty to accompany them ; but there was a neceffity of dividing their fpiritual affiftance, as well as the victuals and other ftores. On the morrow after mefs, the chaplain, who was a Dominican, would have me to blefs the three velfels; I obeyed, and baptized the boat, to which I gave the name of the Saint Saviour. In the evening after prayers, I made one laft effort to bring the

( 333 )

the whole company to an unanimous way of thinking ; I eafily obtained that they fhould all fet out together next day, and encamp in the ifland which was fartheft in the offing, and take our refolution as the wind favoured.

We fet out in effect on the twenty-fifth at noon, and failed together for feveral leagues; but towards fun-fet we faw the long-boat thread the channel, which muft be croffed to get to the Havannah, without ever confidering the canoe, whofe provifions they had on board, and who not being in condition to follow them, was obliged to join us : we received them kindly, alcho' there was one among them with whom we had no reafon to be fatisfied. We landed on the ifland, where we intended to rendezvous, and where a body of Indians had already landed, with what defign we know not : we kept on our guard all night, and fet out early in the morning.

The weather was delightful, the fea calm and pleafant, and our crew began to envy the lot of the long-boat. They even began to murmur very foon, and our chiefs thought it prudent to feem defirous of fatisfying them. We therefore took the courfe of the channel. Two hours afterwards the wind blew frefher, and we thought we difcovered the appearances of an approaching ftorm. There was no body then who did not agree, that it would be a rafh thing to hazard fo long a paffage in fuch veffels as ours, nothing being weaker than our boat, which made water every where. But as in order to go to St. Auguftin, we fhould have been under a neceffity of failing back again the whole way we had come hitherto, we came to an unanimous refolution to return by the way of Biloxi.

We therefore made fail weftward, but could advance no great way that day, and were obliged to pafs the whole night in the boat, where there was far from room fufficient for all of us to lie at our whole length. On the twenty-feventh we encamped in an inland where we found the cabins abandoned, the roads beaten, and the traces of Spanifh fhoes. This ifland is the firt of thofe called the Tortues; the foil is the fame with that of the ifes aux Martyrs. I cannot conceive what men can have to do in fo wretched places, and fo remote from all manner of habitations. We continued to fail weftward, and advanced with a rapidity which could only come from the currents.

We advanced likewife confiderably on the twentyeighth till noon; altho' we had very little wind, the iflands feemed to ride poft paft us. At noon we took an obfervation of the latitude, and found ourfelves in twenty-four degrees, fifteen minutes north. Had our fea charts been correct we fhould have been at the weftern extremity of the Tortués. It was pretty hazardous to truft ourfelves in the open fea, and had I had the management, we had left all thefe inlands on our larboard fide; but our conductors were afraid of miffing the paffage between them and the continent. They had all reafon to repent it, for we were afterwards two whole days without feeing land, tho' we failed always north or north-eaft.

Then defpair feized our crew, and a fingle fquall of wind, fuch as wehad often experienced, could have fent us to the bottom. Even a calm was attended with inconveniences, as we were obliged to row all night, and the heat was excefive. The failors had reafon to be diffatisfied, the obftinacy of a few a few men having expofed us to the great hazard we were in ; but the evil was already done, fo that we wanted fomething different from murmuring to fet us to rights. Since our departure to Louifiana, I could never prevail with moft of them to approach the facraments, and very few of them had fulfilled the pafchal duties. I profited of this occafion to prevail with the whole of them to promife to confefs themfelves, and to communicate as foon as we fhould come on fhore. They had fcarce promifed this, when the land appeared.

We made ftrait towards it, and arrived before noon. On the twenty-fourth at noon, we were in twentyfix degrees, fifty-fix minutes. We had ftill the view of the main-land, without being able to approach it, it being fkirted with peninfulas and iflands, moftly very flat, barren, and between them fcarce a paffage for a canoe or bark. What we fuffered moft from was the want of water, there being none upon them. The following days we were often ftopt by contrary winds, but found fhelter every where, and fometimes a little hunting and fikhing. Water was the only thing we could not find; I made ufe of this delay to bring the whole company to fulfil their promife, to approach the facraments.

It appears there are but few Indians in this whole country, only we faw one day four of them who came out towards us in a pirogue: we waited for them, but when they difcovered us, they were afraid to come any farther, and made what hafte they could back to the flore. On the tenth, we were obliged to retrench the allowance of fpirituous liquors, which had been hitherto diftributed among the crew, there remaining but little, which was thought proper to referve for fome more preffing occafion; we began likewife to be very frugal and fparing of our provifion, efpecially the bifcuit, part of which was fpoiled; fo that we were now reduced to the pure neceffary, having often for a meal but a handful of rice, which we were obliged to boil in brackifh water.

This coaft is the dominion of oifters, as the great bank of Newfoundland and the gulf and river of St. Lawrence are that of the cod-fifhes. All thefe low-lands, which we failed along as near as poffible, are fkirted with mangroves, to which are ftuck a prodigious number of fmall oifters of an exquifite relifh; others much larger and lefs delicate are found in the fea in fuch numbers, as to form fhoals, which are at firft taken for fo many rocks level with the furface of the water. As we did not dare to go to any diftance from fhore, we often got into pretty deep bays or creeks, which we were obliged to coaft quite round, and which lengthened our courfe prodigiounly. But the moment the land difappeared, our crew thought themfelves wholly undone.

On the fifteenth in the morning, we met a Spanifh fhallop, in which were about fifteen perfons. Thefe were part of a Chip's crew that had been caft away near the river St . Martin. This misfortune had befallen them about five and twenty days before, and they had but a very fmall fhallop to contain forty-four perfons, fo that they were obliged to ufe it by turns, and confequently to make very fhort journies. This rencounter was to us a vifble interpofition of providence, for had it not been for the inftructions which the Spanifh captain gave us, we had never found the right courfe to fteer, and the uncertainty of what might become of us, might have prompted the mutineers amongft us to commit fome aft of violence, or perhaps even of defpair.

( 337 )

The night following we were expofed to very great danger. We were all afleep in a very fmall ifland, except three or four perfons who guarded the boat : One of them had lighted his pipe, and imprudently laid the match on the edge of the boat juft where the arms, powder, and provifions were kept in a cheft covered with a tarpaulin. He fell afleep afterwards, and whilft he was in this condition the covering of the cheft took fire. The flame awaked him as well as his other companions, and had they been a moment longer, the boat muft have been blown up or fhattered to pieces; and I leave you to think what muft have become of us, being without any thing but a canoe, which could not have contained above one fixth part of our company, without provifions, arms, or ammunition, in a fandy inand, on which nothing grew. but a few blades of wild grafs.

On the morrow, being the fixteenth, the canoe left us and joined the Spaniards. We had the wind contrary, and could not advance but with the lead in band, the coaft being fo flat and covered with fharp flints in fuch manner at the diftance of fix leagues from it; our boat, which drew no more than two feet water, was every moment in danger of ftriking her bottom out. We were fill under the fame apprehenfions the two following days, and on the twentieth we encamped on an inland, which forms the eaftern point of the Baye des Apalaches. All night we perceived fires on the continent, which we

Vol. II.
Z
we. were very near, and we had obferved the fame thing for fome days paft.

The twenty-firft, we fet out in a very thick fog, which being foon difperfed, we perceived the $b a$ lijes or fea marks, which the Spaniards directed us to follow. We did this by fteering north, and we faw that had it not been for this affiftance, it would have been impoffible for us to have flunned the fand-banks, with which this whole coaft is covered, and which are full of oifters. About ten o'clock we perceived a fmall ftone-fort, of a fquare form, with regular baftions; we immediately hung out the white-flag, and immediately after were told in French to proceed no farther.

We ftopt, and immediately difcovered a pirogue coming out to us, in which were threepeople. One of them was a native of Bayonne; he had been a gunner in Louifiana, and had the fame employment at St. Mark. After the common queftions, the gunner was of opinion, that the captain of the Adour and I only fhould go to fpeak with the governor: we went, and were very well received. This governor was a fimple lieutenant, but a man of good fenfe; he made no difficulty of letting us bring our boat oppofite to the fort ; invited our officers and the principal paffengers to dinner ; but not till he had firft examined our boat, and had tranfported into his magazine our arms and ammunition, on his parole to deliver them when we fhould want to depart.

This poft, which Monf. Delille has marked in his map under the name of Ste. Marie d' Apalacbe, was never known by any other but that of St. Mark. The Spaniards formerly had a very confiderable fiderable fettlement here, but which was already reduced to a very low eftate, when in 1704 it was entirely deftroyed by the Englifh of Carolina, accompanied with a great number of Alibamoü Indians. The Spanifh garrifon, confifting of thirtytwo men, were made prifoners of war; but the Indians burnt feventeen of them, amongtt whom were three Francifcan friars ; and of feven thoufand Apalacbes which were in this canton, and who had almoft all embraced the chriftian religion, there now remain only four hundred at St. Mark, who retired hither from the coaft of the Maubile, where moft of the nation now dwell.

The forefts and meadows near the fort are full of buffaloes and horfes, which the Spaniards fuffer to run about wild, and fend out Indians to catch them with noofes as they want them. Thefe Indians are likewife Apalaches, who had probably retired to a diftance during the irruption of the Englifh, and who came back after thefe were gone away. Moreover, this bay is precifely the fame that Garcilaffo de la Vega calls, in his hiftory of Florida, the port of Auté. The fort is built on a fmall eminence furrounded with marthes, and a little above the confluence of the two rivers, one of which comes from the north-eaft, and the other from the north-weft. Thefe are narrow and full of alligators, but for all that well ftocked with fifh.

Two leagues higher, on the river of the northweft, fands a village of the Apalaches, and another a league and an half from the firf, within the land. This nation, formerly exceeding numerous, and which, divided into feveral cantons, occupied a valt extent of country, is now reduced to a very low eftate. They have long fince embraced the chriftian religion; however, the Spaniards put no great confidence in them, and in fo doing act very wifely: for, befides that thefe chriftians, who have been deftitute of all fpiritual affiftance for many years, are only fuch in name; their conquerors at firft treated them with fo much feverity, that they ought always to confider them as enemies not quite reconciled. It is very difficult to make good chriftians of people, who were begun to be converted by making chriftianity odious to them.

We were told at St. Mark, that a refolution had been taken to re-effablifh it on its former footing, and that they expected five thoufand families: this is much more than the Spaniards, of Florida are capable of furnilhing. The country is charming, well wooded, well watered, and it is faid, the more you advance up the country, the more fertile the foil. They confirmed to us in the fort, what the Spaniards we had met with had told us, that the Indians at the Ifle of Martyrs, with their king Don Diego, were a good-for-nothing fort of folks, and that if we had not kept ftrictly on our guard, they had certainly played us fome fcurvy trick. They alfo told us, that a Spanifh brigantine had been lately caft away near the place, where we faw the four Indians in a pirogue, and that the whole crew had been empaled and eaten by thofe favages.

St. Mark is dependant on St. Auguftin, both in a civil and military refpect; as it is on the Havannah in fpiritual matters. The chaplain, however, is fent by the convent of the Francifcans of St. Auguftin. I met with one of them here, who was a very amiable perfon, and one who did us confiderable fervices: he gave us to underftand that the commandant of St. Mark intended to detain us, till he fhould fend advice of our arrival to the governor of St. Auguftin, and fhould receive his orders. I begged of this officer, that provided he had fufficient to maintain us all the time, we might be permitted to remain with him; as what provifions we had left, were fcarce enough to carry us to Louifiana. He acquitted himfelf extremely well of his commiffion, and the difcourfe he made, accompanied with fome prefents which he hinted we fhould offer the commandant, had all the effect we hoped for from it. This officer, even frankly, offered us the guides we afked to carry us to St. Jofeph, which lies thirty leagues from St. Mark, and to which they advertifed us the courfe was very difficult to find. This obliged us to tarry the next day, and I was not difpleafed at it; as, befides that I was as well lodged in the fort as the Franciican governor, (a diftinction fhewn to me alone, and which I owed to my habit) I was glad to furvey the parts adjacent to the fort. There is a way over land from St. Mark to St. Auguftin, the diftance of which is fourfcore leagues, and the road exceeding bad.

( 34 I )

We fet out the twenty third in the morning, and on the twenty fifth about ten o'clock, our guides made us undertake a traverfe of three leagues, to get into a kind of channel formed by the continent on one fide, and on the other by a feries of inlands of different extent. Had it not been for them, we durft never have ventured to engage in it, and fo had miffed the bay of St. Jofeph. However, we were out of provifions, and the difficulty of finding water encreafed every day. One evening that we dug ten paces from the fea on a pretty rifing $Z_{3}$ ground ground, we could find nothing but brackifh water, which we found impofible to drink. I bethought myfelf of making a hole of a fmall depth on the very brink of the fea, and in the fand; it was prefently filled with water, as fweet and clear as if it had been drawn from the moft limpid ftream ; but after I had drawn up one quart of it, the fpring dried up entirely, from whence I concluded it was rain water that had been collected in this fpot, having found the bottom very hard; and I imagine that to be very often the cafe.

After we had got a-head of the inland, we advanced under fail till ten o'clock. Then the wind fell, but the tide, which began to ebb, fupplied its place, fo that we continued to make way all the night: This is the firf time I obferved any regular tides in the Gulf of Mexico, and our two Spaniards told us that from this place to Penfacola, the flux is twelve hours, and the reflux the fame. On the morrow the twenty fixth, a contrary wind kept us till evening in an ifland indifferently well wooded, ten or twelve leagues long, and where we killed as many larks and wood-cocks as we could defire: we alfo faw a great number of rattle-fnakes. Our guides called it the Inand of Dogs; and from the firt part of it we came to, they reckoned ten leagues to St. Mark and fifteen to St. Jofeph ; but they were certainly deceived with refpect to this laft article, there being at leaft twenty, and thefe very long.

On the twenty feventh ateleven at night, we fruck upon a bank of oifters, which were about the fize of the crown of my hat, and we were about an hour in getting clear of it. We went to pafs the reft of the night in a country houfe belonging to a captain of the garrifon of fort St. Jofeph, called Dioniz, where at our arrival he told us ftrange news.

He affured us that all Louifiana was evacuated by the French; that a large veffel of that nation had appeared at the Inand aux Vaiffeau, and had taken on board the governour, directors, and all the officers; that after their departure, the Indians had maffacred all the reft of the inhabitants and foldiers, except a fmall number who had efcaped on board of two coafters; that being in want of provifions, they had gone to the bay of St. Jofeph; that thofe who came firft had been well received, but that the others were not fuffered to land, for fear left fo many French in one body, might be tempted to make themfelves mafters of that poft, which we had formerly occupied.

This whole account carried fo little probability in it, that I could not poffibly believe it, but was fo well circumflanced, and told by people who had fo little intereft in deceiving us, and who being at only feven leagues diftance from St . Jofeph, might have daily intelligence from thence, that it feemed hard to get over allowing it had fome foundation. Moft of our people were in great confternation at it; and I even felt that thefe general panicks touch the heart in fpite of all our endeavours and underftanding, and that it is impoffible not to feel fome fear amidft a number of perfons who are feized with that paffion, or to help lamenting with thofe who fhed tears. I could by no means credit what they told me, but for all that, I had very little confidence that it was not fos vants of Don Dioniz very obliging, made good cheer all the reft of the night: next morning our guides took their leave of us, according to their orders. We had now no need of them, for befides the impoffibility of lofing our way to St. Jofeph, we met at the houfe of Don Dioniz, a Frenchman who was a foldier in his company, and formerly a deferter from the Maubile, who was grown weary of the Spauifh fervice, where he was dying of hunger, as he fid, tho' he had good enough pay: we ha? no great difficulty to prevail with him to accompany us to St. Jofeph, and from thence to Louifiana, provided he were able to obtain his difcharge.

However, our crew, in fpite of their defpair, finding plenty of provifions, and the domeftic fer$\mathrm{Z}_{4} \quad$ vants

We arrived at five in the evening at St . Jofeph, were we were perfectly well received by the governor. Here we met with two large fhallops from Biloxi with four French officers, who had come to claim fome deferters, but found them not. We had feen them on the day of Peritecofte, in a fmall veffel which was under fail, and went clofe by us, They did not probably touch at St. Jofeph, and in order to conceal their being deferters, had given out the news which had alarmed us fo much the evening before. Two Francifcans who officiated in the chapel of the fort, being informed of my arrival, came to offer me a bed in their houfe, which I thankfully accepted.

Moreover, I do not believe there is a place in the known world, where one would think there was lefs likelihood of meeting with men, efpecially Europeans, than at St. Jofeph. The fituation of this bay, its fhores, the foil, every thing near it, and indeed every circumftance about it, render the reafons of fuch a choice utterly incomprehenfible,

A flat coaft, and that quite expofed to all the winds that blow, a barren fand, a country loft and hid from all the world, and without the leaft commerce, and without being fit for even an entrepot or repofitory, could only be chofen out of that jealoufy, which our fettling Louifiana has occafioned in the minds of the Spaniards. We had been guilty of this foily before them, but this lafted not long. There is reaion to believe that they too will foon repent their choice, and that after they fhall have re-eftablifhed Penfacola, they will tranfport thither every thing they have at St. Jofeph.

The fort is not even fituated in the bay, but in the bight of a crooked point in which there is an ifland. This fort is built only of earth, but that well lined with palifadoes, and defended with a numerous artillery. There is alfo a pretty ftrong garrifon, an etat major compleat, and almoft all the officers have their families with them. Their houfes are neat and commodious, indifferently well furnifhed, but in the ftreets you walk up to the ankle in fand. The ladies never come abroad but when they go to church, and that always with a train and a gravity which is not to be feen any where but amongtt the Spaniards,

Next day after our arrival, which was on the twenty ninth, there was a grand dinner at the ferjeant major's. We had feen this officer formerly at Louifiana, and had treated him magnificently, fo that he was ravifhed with this opportunity of fhewing his gratitude.

He had entered into a particular intimacy and friendfhip with Monf. Hubert, who was then commifaire ordannateur, a kind of furveyor, and who was then with us. We learnt that a daughter of his friend three years of age, and whom her father was conveying back into France, was no more than fprinkled, and he was therefore defirous the remaining part of the ceremonies of the Sacrament of Baptifm fhould be performed here, and that he fhould ftand godfather. This was performed with great ceremony, and under a difcharge of the cannon; the godmother was a niece of the governor's, who gave at night a magnificent fupper, and by an excefs of politenefs, rare enough amongtt Spaniards, would have the ladies to be prefent at it. He concluded fo many civilities with furnifhing us with provifions to enable us to continue our journey, tho' he had not as yet received the convoy which was to fupply him with provifions from the Havannah, and had for that reafon refufed any to the officers of Biloxi: but our fituation had touched him extremely.

We fet out on the thirtieth, with the two fiallops, and were faluted by the fort with five pieces of cannon. We advanced feven leagues that day, and came to an anchor at the mouth of a river which comes from a bay which opens to the foutheaft. At eleven at night the wind becoming favourable, we took the advantage of it and failed weft north weft; the whole coaft lies open to the fame winds for twenty leagues, as far as the inland of Saint Rofe; and there is not one place where you can be fheltered from the fqualls or gales of wind which fhould come large or full upon the fhore. On the thirty firft at four in the afternoon, we had failed thefe twenty leagues, and came to an anchor behind the inland, which inclofes the great bay of St. Rofe, the entry of which is dangerous when the fea is high. Had we been but a moment later later we fhould have been hard put to it, the wind changing fuddenly from north-eaft to fouth-weft, and the fea rifing fo high at the fame inftant, that it had been impoffible for us to ride it out.

On the firft of June, towards two or three in the morning, the tide beginning to flow we reimbarked, and after advancing a fhort league, entered the channel of St. Rofe, which is fourteen leagues in length. It is formed by the illand of St. Rofe which is of this length, but very narrow, appearing to be covered with fand, but for all that not ill wooded : the continent is very high, and bears trees of all forts: the foil is almoft as fandy as at St. Mark, but on digging even fo fhort a way into the ground, you meet with water. The wood here is very hard, but eafily rots. All this coaft fwarms with game, and the fea with fifh. The channel is narrow at the mouth, but grows broader afterwards, and retains as far as the Bay of Penfacola half a league of breadth ; the current here was very ftrong, but favourable for us.

Towards eleven o'clock, we doubled the Pointe aux Cbevreuils, or Roebuck point, beyond which the bay begins. Here you turn firft to the north, and afterwards to the north-eaft. The fort ftands a fhort league farther, and you difcover it from the point aux Cbevreuils. We arrived here at noon, and were much furprifed to fee it in fo bad a condition, and it appears to be pretty much neglected. The Sieur Carpeau de Montigni who commands in it, was gone to Biloxi, and we only found a few foldiers in it. The Spanifh fort which was taken two years ago by the Count de Champmêlin, was behind this, and there remains nothing of it but a very fine ciftern, which is faid to have coft fourteen thoufand piaftres building. Both of them ftand on the ifland, almoft clofe to the main land, and not above fifteen toifes long; and the foil of which appear to be none of the beft.

The bay of Penfacola would be a very good port, were it not for the worms which eat thro the bottoms of hips, and if its entry had a little more depth of water. But the Hercules, on board of which Monf. Champmêlin was, ftruck upon it. This entry is directly between the weftern extremity of St. Rofe, where the Spaniards had alfo built a fort, and a reef of rocks. It is fo narrow that one fhip only can pafs at a time: its opening lies north and fouth. Beyond the reef is another pafs, where there is only water for fmall veffels, and which opens to the fouth-weft. This is alfo very narrow. The anchorage of fhips in the bay of Penfacola, is along the inland of St. Rofe, and is very good holding ground.

We fet out from Penfacola at midnight, and about four in the morning we left on our right the Rio de los Perdidos: this river was fo named, becaufe a Spanifh fhip was caft away in it, and all the crew loft. The ifland Dauphine is five leagues farther on the left, and is five leagues long, but very narrow. Here is at leaft one half of this inland without a fingle tree on it, and the other is not a whit better. The fort, and the only human habitation remaining on it, are in the weftern part of it. Between this, and the IJe a Corne, which is about a league diftant, there is fcarce any water. At the end of this, is another very fmall one called $p$ ifle Ronde, on account of its figure. We paffed the night on this laft.

Oppofite, is the Baye des Pafcagoulas, where Madame de Chaumont has a grant, which is not likely very foon to repay the money advanced on it. There is a river of the fame name which comes from the north, and difcharges itfelf into the fame bay. Next day about ten o'clock, one of our failors died of a quinfey. This is the only man we loft in our tirefome and dangerous paffage. An hour after we came to an anchor at Biloxi, where every body was aftonifhed to fee us. I went immediately to celebrate the Holy Mafs, to render thanks to Almighty God, for having fupported us amidft fo many fatigues, and delivered us from fo many dangers.

I am, $\mathrm{E}_{\mathrm{c}} \mathrm{c}$.

LETTER XXXV.

Voyage from Biloxi to Cape François in St. Domingo.

Cape François, September 6, 1722.
Madam,

TDid not venture to tell you in my laft letter what I had informed you of in my former, that you fhould hear no more from me, till I fhould arrive at Cape François, for fear I fhould not be able to keep my word, and indeed my apprehenfions were very near being juftified by the event. I am, however, at laft arrived at this fo long defired harbour, having entered it at a time when we had almoft loft all hopes of ever feeing it. But before I enlarge upon the adventures of this voyage, I muft refume the courfe of my journal.

The firft news we learned upon our arrival at Biloxi was, that a peace was concluded with Spain, and a durable alliance agreed on betwixt the two crowns. One article of the peace was, the reftitution of Penfacola, the news of which was brought to Louifiana by Dom. Alexander Walcop, an Irifhman, and captain of a veffel in New-Spain. He had embarked at la Vera Cruz on board a brigantine, commanded by Dom. Auguftin Spinola, and carrying one hundred and fifty men, and mounting fourteen pieces of cannon. It is given out here, that the Spaniards intend to make a great fettlement at Penfacola, and to tranfport thither the garrifon with the whole inhabitants of St. Jofeph ; and that D. Alexander Walcop is to be the governor, who is a man of an exceeding good appearance, great piety, and extreme good fenfe.

$$
\left.35^{\circ}\right)
$$

D. Auguftin Spinola is a young man full of fire, and of a very amiable character; his fentiments and behaviour fufficiently declare his high birth, and are every way worthy of the name he bears. He is lieutenant of the veffel, and has engaged to ferve three years in Mexico, after which he propofes to return to Spain, and there to fettle. He was a good deal chagrined on being informed, that an Englifh interloper called Marfhal, had juft left the road of Biloxi, where he had been carrying on a confiderable trade with the French as he left it. This man would not have gone, faying he was not afraid of the Spaniards, had not M. de Bienville obliged him to it, not chufing to be fpectater of a combat, which our officers imagined would not end in the favour of the aggreffors though fuperior in force. We fhall foon fee if they were miftaken in this advantageous idea they had conceived of Marhal.

Notwithftanding fome of the company's thips had brought in fome provifions to Lonifiana, yet the fcarcity there was ftill very great, and the difcontent of the inhabitants encreafed every day fo much, that in fpite of all the care M. de Bienville took to make them eafy, nothing was heard of but fchemes for deferting. Befides, the floop which we had met on the route from St. Mark to St. Jofeph, all the Swifs, who were at Biloxi with their captain and officers at their head, having been ordered for New Orleans on board a coafter, which had been extremely well victualled and fitted out on purpofe for them, inftead of fteering for the Mififif fippi, had been feen with their colours flying, ftanding for the eaftward; and it was not doubted, in tended for Carolina, as being all proteftants, there was no probability of their ftopping any where among the Spaniards*。

Finally, I difcovered on the 8th of June a confiracy formed to carry off the Spanifh brigantine. About feven o'clock in the evening, I got fecret information of it, and was affured that before nine o'clock it would be put in execution, the commander of the brigantine not being ufed to go on board before that time. The confpirators were to the number of an hundred and fifty, and their intention was, if they fucceeded in their enterprize, to turn pirates. I immediately fent to give notice of it to M. de Bienville, who was then at table with D. Augutine Spinola, who rofe up that inftant and went on board, and the major of Biloxi had orders immediately to go the rounds.

From thefe different movements the confpirators perceived their defign had taken air, and the major could not obferve above four or five men together, who making off as foon as he faw them, he was not able to lay hold on any of them, fo that it was believed I had given a falfe alarm; but befides that for fome time after, the foldiers and inhabitants were every day difappearing, fome of thefe

[^8]deferters being retaken, confeffed the confpiracy of which 1 had given information.

On the 12 th, one of the chiefs of the Tchactas came to inform M. de Bienville, that the Englifh had made them great promifes, to bring them over to their intereft, and to engage them to have no more commerce with the French, On this occafion the commandant gave a proof of his great dexterity in managing the Indians. He fo well cajoled this chief, that, by means of a few inconfiderable prefents, he fent him back extremely well difpofed to remain firm in our alliance. This nation would have occafioned us great trouble, had they declared againft us; the Chicachas, Natchez, and Yafous would have immediately joined them, and there would. have been no longer any fafety in our navigating on the Miffifippi; even though thefe four nations had not carried all the reft along with them ; which, however, in all probability, would have been the cafe.

About the end of the month, an inhabitant of the country of the Illinois, who had been trading at the Miffouri, arrived at Bloxi, and gave an account, that he and one or two Frenchmen more, having penetrated as far as the Octotatas, who in 1719 defeated the Spaniards, in the manner already mentioned, had been very well received by them; and that the goods they had carried along with them, had produced feven or eight hundred franks of filver, partly wrought, and partly in ingots; that fome of thefe. Indians had accompanied them as far as the Illinois, and had affured M. de Boiforiant, that the Spaniards, from whom they had taken that money, got it from a mine at no great diftance from the place, where they encountered with them ; and that they had offered to conduct the French thither, which offer the commandant had accepted. Time will inform us, whether thefe Indians have been more fincere than many others, who for a long time had been endeavouring to draw the French amongft them, with this bait of their having mines, all which have hitherto proved only imaginary *.

(355)

On the 22d, I embarked on board the Bellona, which fet fail on the 3oth. On the fecond of July, we reckoned ourfelves north and fouth of Penfacola, from whence we thought it beft to depart; becaufe the longitude of the mouth of the Miffifippi is not, as yet, well determined. Since that time till the twentieth, nothing remarkable happened. We had then the fun directly above our heads, and in our voyage from the Martyrs to Biloxi, had laboured under the greateft heats of the folftice, without being able to defend ourfelves againft them in any fhape, no more than againft the dews which fell during the nights in great abundance. Yet, would you believe it, Madam, we fuffered much lefs from the heat in this feafon, than we had done in the month of April, before our fhip-wreck.

Nothing is, however, more certain, and I then called to mind, that I had been often much furprized to fee perfons born within the tropicks complaining heavily of the great heats in France. We were in the fame fituation in the month of Aptil, we then experienced the fame heats which [^9]are felt in France and even in Italy; in the month of July, during the dog-days, we had the fun above our heads, and the heat was certainly much greater, but more fupportable. This difference does not arife from the winds, for we not only had them, but always have the fame in both feafons. Neither was it owing to their being more accuftomed to them, for we were not lubject to thofe continual fweats which had been fo troublefome to us in the month of April.

We muft therefore fearch for fome other reafon, and this readily prefents itfelf to me. In the fpring, the air is ftill full of thofe vapours which have been collected during the winter. Thefe vapours, at the approach of the fun, are at firft fet on fire, and this is what occafions thofe unfufferable heats and profufe fweats with which we were oppreffed in the month of A pril ; we were almott always as it were in Balneo Mariae. Thefe vapours are dif, fipated in the month of July, and though the fun was much nearer us, the leaft air of wind was fufficient to refrefh us, by blunting the vigour of his rays, then almoft perpendicular over our heads; whereas in France the fun never thoroughly diffipates the vapours, as he does between the tropicks, at leaft they are here not near fo grofs, which is the caufe that produces, not only the difference of heat, but likewife of the fenfation of that heat.

On the twentieth, we difcovered the fame land of Cuba which we had feen feven days, three months before. Two things occafioned this delay. The firft was, the not being able to depend upon an obfervation, when the fun is fo high, becaufe at that time his rays make no fenfible angle : on which account, when there is the leaft fufpicion of being near the land, failors dare not carry much fail in the night-time. The fecond was, that the captain of the Bellona was refolved to touch at the Havannah; and, being perfuaded, that the currents fet to the eaft, he made as much werting as he thought neceffary, not to overfhoot his port.

He was, however, very near paffing by the Havannah, without knowing it. 1 was told, early in the morning, that they faw land; I afked how it appeared, and from the defcription he gave me, I was certain, that it was Cape de Sed. They laughed at me, and two officers of the Adour, who were with us, were the firft to maintain that I was miftaken. I got upon deck and ftill perfifted in my opinion contrary to that of the whole crew, our pilots affuring us, that we were fixty leagues farther to the weft. At fun-fet I perceived the table of Marianne, but I was ftill fingular in my opinion ; in the meantime we had a contrary wind, which obliged us to tack all night, ftanding out to fea-wards, and then afterwards, in towards the fhore.

On the morrow, at mid-day, we were ftill in fight of the two lands which had been the fubject of our difpute, when drawing nearer the fhore, we perceived the Havannah before us, which gave great joy to the captain, he having a large private adventure, which he expected to difpofe of to advantage among the Spaniards. His intereft did not concern me; but if we had been farther out at fea, and had not had contrary winds during the night, the miftakes and obftinacy of our pilots and officers had coft us dear. The wind was fair for the Havannah, and about five in the evening we were about a league from it, when we fired two guns, one upon hoifting our colours, and the other after we had made a fignal with the enfign, for a pilot from the fort.

None appearing, it was refolved to fend the canoe to afk leave to go in; but it being now late, this was deferred till next day, and the whole night was fpent in tacking. On the twenty-third, an officer of the Bellona went afhore, in order to afk the governor's permiffion to water and purchafe provifions in his harbour; becaufe we had not been able to lay in a fufficient quantity at Biloxi. This was only a pretence, which I did not then know, and the captain defiring me to accompany his officer, I thought myfelf obliged to comply with his requeft.

The entrance of the port of the Havannah lies north-weft quarter weft : on the leff-hand, on going in, is a fort built upon a rock, at the foot of which all veffels muft pafs: it is called the fort $d u$ More. It is a folid building, and has three good batteries of brals cannon, one above the other. On the right-hand is a row of baftions, which feemed to me to be newly finifhed, or but lately repaired. The entrance is in this place but five or fix hundred paces in breadth, and is fhut up with an iron chain, which would ftop a fhip for a confiderable time, till having fhatered it with cannon-fhot they fhould be able to break through it.

The paffage grows afterwards a little larger, till you come to the town, which is about the diftance of two or three hundred paces. The channel torns from thence to the left beyond the town, which lies upon the right, and this is all I can fay of it, having been no farther. The town takes up the point of a peninfula; and the land fide, which is its whole length, is defended by a good wall with battions. It has a very agreeable profpect, after you have paffed the fort du More. The ftreets are well laid out, the quay large and in good condition, and the houfes, for the moft part, well buiit ; the churches are pretty numerous, and fome of them make a good appearance, but 1 did not vifit any of them. In a word, a town in which there is twenty thoufand inhabitants does not make a finer fhow, but the Havannah, as I have been told, has not near that number.

On my landing, I met with feveral failors who had belonged to the Adour, and of thofe who had gone both in the fhallop and in the canoe. The firft informed me, that they had been five days in making this port, from the place where they were caft away, having been almoft the whole time in the moft immediate danger of perifhing. I had not time to learn, by what means the fecond had got there. But the furgeon who went on board our canoe at fort du More as our guide, took great pains to fhew me Marfhal's brigantine, mentioned in the beginning of this letter. He had caft anchor along- fide of a floop fo very fmall that it could not contain above fifteen or twenty men, who, however, carried her by boarding. It muft be confeffed, that the crews of the armed veffels belonging to Cuba and the neighbouring iflands are very brave, our buccaneers having been enured to war: but confidering the difproportion of force, the valour and cannon of the Englifh, thefe laft muft needs have been furprized.

The governor received us coldly, and after having heard us, told us, that he fhould have been very glad to have granted our requeft, but that the King his mafter had tied his hands, in particular, exprefsly forbidding him to receive into the harbour any veffel coming from Louifiana. He added, that there were feveral places on the fame coaft, where we might ftop without any danger, and furnifh ourfelves with what refrefhments we ftood in need of. We were obliged to reft contented with this anfwer, and after paying a vifit to the rector of the jefuit's college in this, city, I returned on board.

Next day being the 24 th, we were north of the Pan of Matanzas, and at half an hour after eleves oppofite to the Rio de Ciroca, where there is a Spanifh fettlement. But as the captain was refolved to try if he could fucceed better at Matanzas than he had done at the Havannah; and we were ftill at the diftance of feven leagues from it, he turned to and fro during the whole night; and, on the twenty fifth, at break of day we found ourfelves at the entrance of the bay, which is two leagues over.

But, before you go in, you muft firft double a point which does not advance very far into the fea, then make a weft courfe for the fpace of a league, after after which you perceive on the fame hand, being the right, another point, behind which lies the fort, and a large quarter of a league farther than the town of Matanzas, between two rivers which walh its walls on each fide. About ten o'clock an officer was fent to the fort in a canoe, who did not find the commandant at home. He informed the lieutenant of the pretended neceffity we were in; but this officer told him, he could not take it upon himfelf to grant him the permifion he demanded; that all he could do was to fend a courier to the Havannah, to know the intentions of the governor of that city, who was his general; and that if this fuited us, we might wait at anchor on the other fide, where we fhould be in more fafety.

This anfwer, together with the declaration which the pilots then thought fit to make, that they could not undertake to carry the veffel into the bay of Matanzas, by reafon they were not fufficiently acquainted with it, at laft determined the captain to continue his courfe, with all his adventure on board, for the fake of which he had made us lofe at leaft fifteen days of our moft precious time. The next day at fix in the morning, we had fill behind us and within fight the Pan of Matanzas, from which we reckoned ourfelves diftant from 12 to fifteen leagues; and, on the 27 th, at five in the morning, we difcovered the land of Florida, from the matt-head.

Upon feeing this, we fteered north-north-eaft ; two hours afterwards, we fteered a little more eaftward, but at nine o'clock kept our former courfe, and found ourfelves in the real current of the gulph; for we went like an arrow out of a bow. At this time we faw the Adour from the maft-head, whofe hull was almoft entirely under water, and now perceived that fhe was not caft away at the northernmoft of the Martyrs, as fome had believed; for we were abreaft of her at half an hour after ten, and half an hour after one, the laft of thefe iflands was ftill to the northward of us.

About three o'clock, we faw from the tops a breaker, clofe along-fide of which our courfe lay, and fomewhat farther a fhoal, which run out into the offing. This fhoal feemed to be the end of the Martyrs, and in order to clear it, we fteered the remaining part of the day fouth and by eaft, the current ftill carrying us to the northward, and about evening we made a north-ealt courfe. On the twenty eighth at mid-day, the pilot reckoned himfelf at the entrance of the gulph, being in twenty-five degrees thirty minutes; but, at half an hour after feven, fearing he was too near the land, he turned her head fouth-fouth-eaft till mid-night with a very good wind. At mid-night he continued his former courfe; and on the twenty ninth we were out of fight of land. At fun-fet we reckoned we were out of the gulph, but for the greater fafety we fteered north-north-eaft, till ten o'clock.

During all the reft of our voyage, till our arrival at cape François, we had light winds and frequently calms. From time to time there arofe ftorms, when the fky and fea were on fire, and the veffel lying along on one fide, went like the wind; wind ; but this did not laft, and rain of a quarter of an hour's duration cleared the fky and laid the waves of the fea; which greatly refembled thofe perfons, who are of a foft and mild temper, but are fometimes liable to violent fits of paffion, which, however, are foon appeafed. I imagine that the currents contribute to calm the fea fo fpeedily after thefe violent agitations. They are indeed very fenfibly felt throughout all this paffage, and, befides, with their continual variation, difconcert the moft expert pilots.

After leaving the gulph of Florida, the ftreight courfe for St. Domingo would be fouth-eaft; but the winds, which almoft conftantly blow from the eaftern quarter, prevent this courfe being fteered, fo that it is neceffary to go as high as Bermudas, which it would even be convenient to make, if poffible, in order to be certain of the longitude. For want of this, veffels are fometimes obliged to go as far to the north-ward as the great bank of Ne.wfoundland, that they may be fure of being far enough to the eaftward to avoid all thofe rocks which lie to the northward of St. Domingo,

This great circuit, however, has not always been taken in going from the gulph of Mexico to this ifland. At the firt difcovery of the world, after coafting along the northern fide of Cuba, as far as point Itaque, which is its eaftern extremity, about fourteen leagues from Matanzas, they turned to the right, leaving on the left all the Lucayo inlands, of which Bahama is the chief, This is what is called the old ftraits of Bahama, in which there is water for the largeft flip', but fo full of rocks and foals, that at prefent it is only ufed by fall veffels.

After having made the latitude of thirty degrees and a half, our pilots reckoned themfelves far enough to the eat to fleer fouth, without fear of falling upon any of thole foals I have mentioned. They therefore fleered boldly to the fouth, and in a few days made great way, failing continually upon a fine fa, and carried along by the trade winds. On the twenty feventh of Auguft the man who was looking out at the matt-head, cried out Land, which occafioned a great joy, which, however, was but fort; for on his coming down and being afked if it was high land, he anfwered that it was very low, confequently could be no other than one of the Caicoes or Turk iflands.

We were very lucky in feeing them by day, for had we fallen in with them in the night, we mut have been infallibly fhip-wrecked and every perfon loft; for there inands have no banks, molt of them are furrounded with reefs of rocks, which run far out to fa, between which there are fall channels, where there is not water enough for a shallop. Befides, they are fo very low, that they are not feen in the night-time, till one is upon them.

But our having difcovered our danger did not fave us; the land which we haw before us feemed a pretty large ifland and well-wooded in feveral places, which made us conclude it was the Grand Caicos, and confequently that we were forty or fifty leagues too far to the weftward. To gain our longitude, we mult, perhaps, have been obliged to fteer two or three hundred leagues to the northward, and laid our account with a voyage of five or fix weeks. But this was impracticable; for we had fcarce water and provifions for fifteen days, with the greateft ceconomy. The captain was prodigioully embarraffed, he faw his pilots in the fault, he had reafon to reproach himfelf with having repofed too much confidence in them, and not having taken an obfervation himfelf, and with having conftantly preferred the opinion of the fecond pilot, a young blundering prefumptuous fellow, to that of the firt, who was a much abler and more experienced feaman, and never had approved their management.

It was, in the mean time, neceffary to take a refolution on the fpot: had we met with a gale of wind at north, it would have thrown us upon thefe low lands, where we muft all have infallibly perifhed. But as no meafure could be pitched upon which had not its inconveniencies, the captain refolved to have the advice of all the people. One propofed a fafe expedient, which was to bear away before the wind for Carolina, where we could arrive in ten or twelve days, and there purchafe provifions. This advice was rejected and another followed, which put all to the hazard, and feemed to me to be folely infpired by defpair; and this was to coaft along the grand Caicos, till we came to the opening between all thefe rocks and the Bahama iflands.

This is the paffage for all the veffels which return from St. Domingo to France, but then there is nothing to fear, for they can take their own time to enter the flraits, and this paffage lying open to the north-weft, they are almoft certain of having good weather to carry them through it. But in order to enter on the fide in which we were, we muft reckon on the northeaft, and it is a great chance to find the wind on that point. Thus none that we know of have as yet attempted this paffage. In fhort, we were refolved to run all hazards, and drew_near the grand Caicos.

Two hours after mid-day, we were no more than a cannon-fhot from it, and, perhaps, we were the firft, who without an indifpenfable neceffity had ventured fo near it in a thip. The coaft is, however, very clear, and about feven or eight foot high, fometimes a little more, but fteep and without any beach. The foil has not every where the appearance of barren. Geographers place this inland directly under the tropick, which was a point we could not examine into, it being then hazy weather; but I believe it lies a little farther to the fouthward, for there certainly is not three degrees difference of latitude, between this ifland and cape François.

We coafted along the grand Caicos till four o'clock in the evening, having both wind and currents in our favour. Then fending a man up to the maft-head to obferve what was before us, he foon cäme down, telling us that he had feen the extremity of the inland; but that beyond it he could difcover nothing but low lands interfected with channels in which the water appeared entirely white. Upon hearing this, we thought proper to tack, and lay the veffel's head north-north-eaft. At mid-night we lay fouth-fouth-eaft, and it feemed as if the wind turned about at our pleafure; but it was very weak and the currents carried us with grear violence to the weftward; fo that at break of day the low lands and fhoals which we the evening before faw fo far a-head of us, were now almoft as far behind us, and the paffage we were in queft of began to open.

( 367 )

The moment now approached which was to decide our fate, and what gave us great hopes was, that the wind by degrees veered about to the north-eaft. At eleven o'clock we lay fouth-eaft one quarter fouth, and foon after fouth-eaft; but the currents made us fall fo faft to leeward, that we fcarce made a fouth courfe. At noon we had no obfervation, and the weftern point of the Caicos lay north quarter north-ealt. At laft, in an hour's time we were got into the pafiage; and I cannot better explain to you what appeared on the faces of all, in proportion as we advanced in the channel, than by comparing it to what happens to thofe animals which are put into the receiver of an air-pump, and lie as dead when the air is almoft all extracted out of it, but are reflored to life by degrees, when it is fuffered flowly to enter again.

( 368 )

We durft not, however, flatter ourfelves with being able to make cape François, which lay to the windward, but we could not mifs Port de paix, or at leaft Leogane; and after the extreme danger we had juft efcaped, we thought ourfelves very lucky, provided we could get into any harbour. At mid-night, we had a pretty violent gale of wind at fouth, but of fhort duration; and next day about nine o'clock in the morning, we perceived the land of St. Domingo, but could not diftinguifh what part it was all that day, it being very foggy. A veffel, which we reckoned from her appearance might be a privateer, took us up good part of the afternoon: we prepared ferioully for an engagement, or rather to defend ourfelves in cafe we fhould be attacked; for we did not change our courfe to give chace.

At laft we difcovered, fhe was only a fmall veffel, a hundred and fifty tons burthen at moft, and was probably more afraid of us. By her courfe we imagined the had come out of Cape François, and feemed to be deep loaded. The whole night we made tacks to the north-eaft, with a litcle variation, which gained us ground, and as foon as it was day, we perceived to our great joy, that we were to the windward of cape François. We had a full view of it, and were almoft clofe in with it, but there was fo little wind, that we could not get in before the firlt of September, at four o'clock in ( $3^{69}$ ) the evening. Since that time I have not had as yet a moment to myfelf to give you an account of this country; and this letter is afked from me to put on board a veffel which is bound for Nants. I intend to depart myfelf in fifteen days for Havre de Grace, from whence I Thall have the honour to write you once more.

Abstract

I am, &c.

Vol. H, Bb LETTER

LETTER XXXVI.

Defcription of Cape François in St. Domingo. Return to France, and the Autbor's toucbing in England.

Rouen, fanuary 5, 1723.
Madam,

IStaid but a day at Havre, not caring to mifs the Rouen coach, and am come here to refrefh myfelf after the longeft and fevereft voyage I have ever as yet made at fea. I am now entirely recovered, and fhall make ufe of the fhort leifure my waiting for the Paris coach affords me, to finifh the account of all my adventures for thefe laft two years and an half I have been rambling over the different parts of the world.

Cape François in St. Domingo, is the harbour where the French carry on the greateft trade in all America. Properly fpeaking, it is only a bay, not quite a league in depth, the entrance of which

$$
\text { B b } 2 \text { is }
$$

( 372 )

is very wide: but this entrance is encumbered with reefs, in failing betwixt which too much precaution cannot be ufed. On going in, you muft keep on your right along a point on which is a redoubt mounted with cannon; but it is cuftomary before engaging in thefe narrow paffes, where two fhips cannot go a-breaft, to get a pilot from the fort; and in order to prevent the defire of faving a piftole, which is his fee, from occafioning people to rifk the lofing their veffels, it is very wifely ordered, that this fum fhall be paid, even fhould they come in without his affiftance.

The town ftands in the bottom of the bay, upon the right fide. It is not very confiderable, becaufe almoft all but thofe who are tradefmen, fhop-keepers, foldiers, or inn-keepers, refide in the plain, as much as their duty will fuffer the officers; the exercife of juftice, the magiftrates; and the affairs of trade thofe who are concerned in it, that is to fay, almoft all thofe who are reckoned here people of credit: fo that, in order to fee genteel company, you muft go to the country. Thus nothing can be more charming than the plain, and the vallies betwixt the mountains with which it is furrounded. The houfes are not magnificent but decent and convenient, and the roads are in a ftreight line, of a good breadth, bordered with hedges of citrons, and fometimes planted with large trees, and cut from fpace to fpace with rivulets of a clear frefh water. All the plantations feem very well cultivated, and are indeed very fine pleafure-houfes: an air of eafe is every where to be feen, which gives a great deal of pleafure.

This

This plain is the north-weft extremity of that famous Vega Real, fo much fpoke of in the Spanifh hiftories of St. Domingo, and faid to be eighty leagues in length, and by the famous bifhop of Chiappa, Bartholomew de las Cafas, to be watered by five and twenty thoufand rivers. But founding names coft the Spaniards nothing; thefe pretended rivers are, for the moft part, nothing but fmall brooks, the number of which is indeed incredible, and would render this royal plain fomething more delightful and charming than the valley of Tempé, fo much boafted of among the Greeks, if it did not lie within the torrid zone. There are even places where the air is extremely wholfome, and heat fupportable, fuch as that where the town of St. Fago de los Cavalleros has been built; and the fame thing may be faid of the vallies between the mountains, with which the plain of the Cape is bounded to the fouthward. They are beginning to be peopled, and will be foon more fo than the plain itfelf, on account that there are few fick people there; and that thofe who come from other places foon recover of their diftempers, after all other remedies have failed of fuccefs.

I was in all the plantations near the town, but had not leifure to make many obfervations on them. Befides, in the day-time it was extremely hot; and in the evening after fun-fet, mufkettoes and other fuch like iniects prevented me from walking far. Thefe infects fix particularly upon new comers, who have a tenderer fkin and frefher blood. I have been informed, that in the Spanifh part of this ifland, they are free from this inconvenience; but in recompence we have no venomous ferpents, of which they have great numbers. B b 3

It

It has likewife been obferved to me, that all garden ftuff, except lettuce, muft in this ifland be renewed every year with feed from Europe.

The moft curious things I have feen here are the fugar-mills; but I fhall fay nothing of them, as father Labat has treated of them in a much better manner than I can pretend to do. Next to the fugar, the greateft riches of this colony confifts in the Indigo, which the fame author has likewife handled very learnedly. This plant has an irreconcileable enemy, which makes as great havock amongft it, as dárnel does among our corn. It is an herb called Mal.nommée, and in fpringing from the earth carries a feed which fpreads every where. It grows in a tuft, and by its bulk, and prodigious fruiffulnefs, ftifles the Indigo in fuch a manner that it kills it; fo that if it makes the leaft progrefs in a field, it is entirely loft.

The coafts of St. Domingo are not very plentifully fupplied with fifh; but a little out at fea, all forts of them are to be found. Coming from Louifiana, we caught, in particular, a great many gilt-heads or bonettas, upon which filh our feamen pretend to have made a very fingular obfervation. Which is, that when this fifh is catched before the moon comes to its height, its fleh is firm and of an exquifite tafte, whereas when it is taken in the wane, it is infipid, of no confiftence, and looks like flefh boiled to rags. It is true, that we experienced both the one and the other, in the two feafons; but that this always happens, and that the moon is really the caufe of it, is what I cannot take upon me to affirm.

We departed from cape François in a merchant fhip belonging to Havre called Louis de Bourbon, and commanded by one of the ableft navigators I have known : but we were fcarce out at fea when we perceived that fhe made water in two places, fo that during the whole paffage, which lafted for ninety two days, they were obliged to pump morning and evening, which together with the fcarcity of provifions, which, indeed, had been laid in, in abundance, but had been by no means managed during the firft month, occafioned our captain to be frequently upon the point of touching at the Azores. We fhould have been reduced to greater inconveniencies, ftill, had we fallen into the fnare which a captain of an Englifh fhip laid for us, whom we fell in with about half way.

He had left Jamaica, in company with a fleet, of which, as he faid, he had been at firft the beft failor; but in loading his fhip, having been fo imprudent as to ftow all his provifions in the fame place, it happened, that in proportion as thefe were confumed, his veffel loft her trim, and by degrees that advantage he had over the reft, fo that at laft he was left behind by the whole fleet: we met him, indeed, alone and going fo fowly, that compared with him our veffel, which was by no means a flyer, went like a bird; and he was afraid that his provifion fhould entirely fail him, before he could reach England. He told us his uneafinefs at this, and to explain himfelf better, invited himfelf to dine on board us. He was anfwered, that he fhould be very welcome, and our captain Shortened fail to wait for him.

B b 4
During

During đinner-time the converfation turned upon our courfe, and he afked us where we believed we were. The captain fhewed him, at which he appeared furprized. He affured us afterwards that we were at leaft two hundred leagues farther advanced than we thought we were; which he endeavoured to prove by the laft lands he had obferved. This gave great pleafure to the moft part of our people, who were already very uneafy at fo long a paffage, and at being obliged to ftruggle continually againft boiftrous winds and a tempeftuous fea, in avery crazy veffel. But 1 had fome fufpicion'that the Englifh Captain only faid we were fo far advanced, in order to induce us to part with fome of our provifions. I communicated my fufpicion to our captain, who told me he was of the fame opinion, and contented himfelf with treating our gueft genteelly and evading his demand. He continued his courfe upon his own reckoning, which he found fo juft, that he entered the channel the fame day, and almoft the fame hour, he had faid fome time before he would do.On the fecond of December, without any apparent neceffity, we went into Plymouth harbour, but our captain had certainly fome bufinefs there. We found there la T'betis a King's frigate, which a gale of wind had entirely difabled, though it was her firft voyage from Havre de Grace, where fhe had been built. She was under the command of the Chevalier de Fontenay, who was bound for the Amcrican inarids againft the pirates, who had lately takir a great many veffels. As foon as he knew I was in the harbour, he did me the honour of paying me a vifit, before I could have the opportunity of paying my duty to him, and carried me on board his veffel, where I fpent in a very agreeable agreeable manner, all the time I was in this port.

( 377 )

Plymouth is one of the five large ports of ${ }^{-}$ England, and one of the fineft in Europe. It is a double one, and before you enter it you muft pafs under the cannon of the citadel. From thence you turn to the right, in order to go into the town harbour, which is the fmalleft, and there the Thetis lay at an anchor. You turn to the left, in order to enter the other harbour, where the King's veffels are laid up oppofite to a magnificent arfenal. This harbour is of great extent, and we anchored at its mouth, becaufe the wind was then fair to go higher up the channel.

The town of Plymouth is of no great confequence, but the country about it where I frequently amufed myfelf with walking, is very agreeable. I have not feen a richer country: the weather was very mild, the fields as green as in fpring; and I faw fheep of a monftrous fize feeding upon them. Their wool is very good, but their flefh being too grofs has a bad relifh; their beef, on the other hand, is excellent, becaufe it is very fat.

On the eve of the Conception and all the day of the feftival, they never ceafed ringing in one of the two belfreys which are at Plymouth; and though there were but two bells, I never heard ringing which gave me greater pleafure. I afked in whofe honour this was done; for I fufpected that it was not done in honour of the holy virgin, and was told that it was a cuftom in this country, when any one makes a great entertainment tainment, to pay the ringers for their trouble. I likewife obferved juft upon the harbour, and not far from the town, a large and very ancient building, which was made ufe of for an inn, but did not feem to have been built for that purpofe; I was told, that it was the remains of a celebrated abby of the Benedictines.

I fhould have been well pleared to take the tour of Plymouth and the country about it, but the Chevalier de Fontenay advifed me againft it; becaufe every thing was then fufpected in England, on account of the affair of the bifhop of Rochefter, which was fill recent. I could not, indeed, appear in my habit at Plymouth, or in places that were inhabited, without being expofed to fome infult, and it was too late to put on another drefs, feveral of the Englifh having feen me in my own, fo that I was reduced to the neceffity of walking only in fome fields near the harbour, where nobody was to be met with. I had, however, good company on board the Thetis. The Chevalier de Fontenay has been all over the world, and has befides, an underftanding extremely well cultivated. I have feen and heard of him, inftance ${ }^{s}$ of a generofity truly heroick. But what crowns all thefe eftimable qualities, is a great fund of religion and fincere piety. He feems to have communicated his fentiments to his officers, whom I faw almoft all of them prefent at the facraments, and nothing can be more edifying than his whole crew, by whom he is adored.

At laft, on Chriftmas night, after I had celebrated three maffes, we fet fail, and the whole day had a fair wind. Two frigates of fifty guns each had weighed anchor two hours before us, which we foon came up with. This furprized me, becaufe we did not fail very well ourfelves; but what aftonifhed me ftill more, was to fee thefe veffels under fail, which, if I had not feen them get under way, I fhould not have believed to be the fame, which appeared to be fo large in the harbour ; on which I was told this was owing to a particular conftruction, and manner of rigging, contrived on purpofe to draw the pirates into a fnare; and that on this account they are called in the fyle of failors des Attrapes Lourdeaux. In effect, it is faid, that the pirates feeing them, and judging them from their appearance to be merchantmen, bear down upon them, as to a certain prey. But when they are engaged in fuch a manner as not to be able to extricate themfelves, they find whom they have to deal with, and are taken in the trap without being able to make any refiftance; fo that of all the nations of Europe, the Englifh are thofe whom the pirates ftand moft in fear of, and whom they ufe wortt when they can get them into their hands.

The night following, we met with as terrible a ftorm, as I have feen for a long time in the Channel. The next day in the morning, though the wind was almoft entirely fallen, the fea was ftill in fuch agitation as to terrify the boldeft; we even fhipped fome feas which put us in great danger ; one, in particular, came into the cabbin, when I was beginning to fay mafs, which prevented me from going on; and when about noon we got into Havre de Grace, every one afked us how we had been able to bear up againft the tempeft, which had made its effects be felt even in the harbour.

But they might have been ftill much more furprized how we came to fland it out, when two days after, our veffel being hauled afhore, fell to pieces through rottennefs. This was the firft news I heard after my arrival here. Judge you, Madam, on what tenure we held our lives on board fuch a veffel, during a voyage of eighteen hundred leagues, in a feafon when the fea is always in a fury; and what thanks we ought to render to Almighty God, not only for delivering us from fo imminent a danger, but likewile for keeping it from our knowledge, which alone would have been fufficient to make us die a thoufand times, through mere fear.

$$
1 \mathrm{am}, & \mathrm{c} .
$$

$$
F \quad I \quad N \quad I \quad S
$$

BOOKS Printed for R. and J. DODSLEY,

 at Tully's Head, in Pall-mall.Fuft publifed, in two large Volumes, Octavo, illuf. trated weith Maps and ujeful Cuts, Price 12 s .

A Practical Book for the Use of Schools,
Approved and made Ufe of by the mof eminent Mafters, entituled, 1. THE Preceptor. Containing a General Courfe of Education. Wherein the firft Principles of Polite Learning are laid down in a Way moft fuitable for trying the genius and advancing the Inftruction of Youth.

In Twelve Parts, Viz.

1. On Reading, Speaking, and Writing Letters.
2. On Geometry.
3. On Geography and Aftronomy.
4. On Chronology and Hiftory. 5. On Rhetorick and Poetry. 6. On Drawing.
5. On Logick.
6. On Natural Hiftory.
7. On Ethicks or Morality.
8. On Trade and Commerce.
iI. On Laws and Government.
9. On Human Life and Manners.

The feveral Parts of this Compendium of Polite Learning, are executed in fo judicious a Manner, as to render them, not only neceffary for Youth at Schools, but of Service to Gentlemen, who would either retain what they have formerly learned there, or acquire what has hitherto been feldom there taught.
2. Polymetis: or an Enquiry concerning the Works of the Roman Poets, and the Remains of the Ancient Artifts. Being an attempt to illuftrate them mutually from one another. By the Rev. Mr. Spence. Folio. Alfo, an Effay on Mr. Pope's Trannation of Homer's Odyffey. In five Dialogues. By the fame Author. Second Edition Price bound in $\mathbf{1 2} 2 \mathrm{mo} .{ }^{\prime} 3 \mathrm{~s}$.

BOOKS Printed for R. and J. Dodsley:

3. The Letters of Pliny the Conful: With Occafional Remarks. By William Melmotb, Efq; in Two Volumes Octavo. Price bound 8 s. 3 d Edition.
4. The Letters of Sir T'bomas Fitzofborne, on feveral Subjects. By the Tranflator of Pliny's Letters. Third Edition. Price bound 5 s .
5. The Letters of Marcus Tullius Cicero, to feveral of his Friends. With Remarks. By William Melmoth, Efq; 3 Vol. 8vo. Price 15 s.
6. An A pology for the Life of Colley Cibber, Comedian and late Patentee of the Theatre Royal, with an Hiftorical View of the Stage, during his own Time, written by himfelf. The 3 d Edit. to which is added, a fhort Account of the Rife and Progrefs of the Englifh Stage: Alfo a Dialogue on old Plays and Players, 8vo. Price bound 6 s .
7. The Memors of the Duke de Sully, Prime Minifter of Henry IV. King of France. Tranflated from the French. 3 Vols. Quarto. Price 21. 2 s .
8. The Commentaries of Cefar, tranflated into Englifh. To which is prefixed, a Difcourfe conr cerning the Roman Art of War. By William Duncan, Profeffor of Philofophy in the Univerfity of Aberdeen. In one large Volume, Folio, illuftrated with a great Number of Cuts, being the fame Plates which were engraved for Dr. Clarke's Edition of the Latin. Price 31.3 s. This Tranflation of Cafar, without Cuts, is allo printed in 2 Vols. 8 vo. Price 10 s .
9. Travels

BOOKS Printed for R. and J. Dodsley.

9. Travels through Ruffia into Perfia ; and back through Ruffia, Germany, and Holland, including an hiftorical Account of the Britifh Trade over the Cafpian Sea. To which are added, the Revolutions of Perfia, and a particular Hiftory of the great Ufurper Nadir Kouli. Illuftrated with Maps and Copper-Plates. By fonas Hanrvay, Merchant. In 2 Vols. Quarto. Price il. io.s.
10. A Collection of the beft and moft entertaining Voyages and Travels. 7 Vols. 12 mo. Price il. is.
11. A Map of North America. By Mr. Hu/ke. Shewing the French. Encroachments upon the En$\mathrm{gli} / \mathrm{h}$, and alfo the juft Limits of the Colonies of both Nations, neatly engrav'd and colour'd. Price 5 s .
12. A Dictionary of the Englifb Language, wherein the Significations of Words are illuftrated by Examples from the beft Englijh Writers, 2 Vols. Folio. Price 4 l. io s. An Abridgment of the fame Work, in which the Examples are excluded, is printed in 2 Vols. 8 vo . Price 10 s .
13. A Map of the Middle Britifh Colonies in North-America, with a printed Analyfis of the fame. Quarto. Price 9 s . fewed.
14. The Five Books of Polybius, tranflated from the Greek, by Mr. Hampton. Quarto. Price 11. 1 s .
15. A New Hiftory of the Eaft-Indies, ancient and modern, giving an Account of the Religion, Government,

BOOKS Printed for R. and J. Dodsley:

Government, Manners and Cuftoms, Natural Hiftory, Revolutions, &cc. of thefe Countries; and alfo an Account of the Rife, Progrefs, and prefent State of the Commerce of the Europeans to the Indies, 2 Vols. 8 vo. Price io. s.
16. An Account of the European Settlements in America, 2 Vols. 8 vo . Price 8 s.
17. Conjunct Expeditions: or Expeditions which have been executed jointly by the Fleet and Army, from the Time of Cafar, to the Affair of Rochfort, &c. inclufive, by Thomas More Molyneux, Efq; Price bound 7 s .6 d .
18. Davila's Civil Wars of France. Tranfated from the Italian, by Mr. Farnworth, 2 Vols. 4 to. Price bound il. 15 s .
19. Travels into Rgypt, Palafine, or the HolyLand, Syria, Mefopotamia, Cyprus, and Candia, &c. By Ricbard Pococke, L. L. D. F. R. S. now Lord Bifhop of Ofory. Illuftrated with a great Number of fine Cuts, 2 Vols. Folio. Price bound 31. 3 s .
20. Mifcellaneous Tracts, relating to Natural Hiftory, Hufbandry and Phyfick. Tranflated from the Latin, by Mr. Stillingfleet. 8vo. Price fewed 3 s .
21. The Works of Tacitus, with Political Difcourfes upon that Author. By T'bomas Gordon, Efq; 5 Vols. 12 mo. Price bound 15 s.

$\begin{array}{lllll}I & N & \mathrm{D} & \mathrm{E} & \mathrm{X}\end{array}$ OF THE   PRINCIPAL MATTERS,   PRINCIPAL MATTERS,  Contained in thefe two Volumes.  N. B. The Letters mark the Volume, and the Figures the Pages.

A.

Aenaquis. Of the village of thefe Indians at Beckancourt, i. if6. Of the Abenaquis village of St. Francis, i. 190. Of the Abenaquis nations, i. 283.
Adour. The company's fhip, the author goes on board her, ii. 312. This veffel ill commanded, ii. 3 13, 314. She fets fail, ii. 315,316 . Bad management on board this veffel, ii. 318 . She is call away, ii. $319, \sigma^{\circ} \mathrm{c}$.
Akanfas. An Indian nation. Defcription of the river of Akanfas, different tribes of that people, ii. 245, 246. Mortality amongft thefe Indians, ii. 247.
Algonquins. Of the Algonquin language, i. 283. The inferior Algonquins, i. 284. The fuperior or true Algonquins, i. 285. Character of the Algonquin language, i. 300. Particular properties of that language, i. 30 I , 302. Difference between the Huron and the Algonquin nations, i. 303. Origin of the war between the Algonquins and Iroquois, i. $304, \delta^{\circ}$ c. Confequences of that war, i. 308, 309 .
Ambaffadors. The manner of their reception amongft the Natchez, ii. 27I, E'c.

- Anericans. Differtation on their origin: opinions of feveral learned authors who have handled this fubject at Vox. II. C c large, large, i. 1, E'c. To what this queftion may be reduced and how it may be anfwered, i. 47, $\xi^{\circ} c$.

I N D E X.

Anticofti, Ifland of, its defcription, i. 88.
Apalaches; an Indian nation, ii. 339.
Arms, offenfive and defenfive of the Indians, i. 337, $33^{8 .}$ Afa/fration; in what manner it is punifhed amongft the Hurons, i. 33.
A friniboils. Indians, their character, of the lake of the Affiniboils, i. $28 \mathrm{I}, \Xi^{\circ} \mathrm{c}$.
Autmoins. Jugglers of Acadia, ii. 178.
w木tkameques 1,284 .
B
Babama, opening the gulph of Bahama, ii. 361-2. Courfe from thence to St. Domingo, ii. 363 . Old Straits of Bahama, ii. 364.
Balize, Ifland of, ii. 293, $294 \cdot$
Bay, St. Bernard, ii. 309.
Bay of Mutanzas, its defrription, ii. 360 .
Bay, Hudfon's: the nations in its neighbourhood, i. 276, छ゙c.
Bay of the Tfonnonthouans, its defcription, i. 340.
Bay of the Noquets, ii. 60.

- Bay of the Stinkards, or fimply the Bay: Yort and miffion there, ii. 62. . The Indians of this bay dance the dance of the Calumet, ii. 70.
Bayagoulas, an Indian nation, ii. 284.
Bank, (Great) of Newfoundland. Its defcription, i. 68, Eoc. Caufes of the winds and fogs which prevail there, i. $70, \mathrm{E}^{\circ} \mathrm{c}$.

Beaver. See Caftor.
Beckancourt, its fituation, i. I73. River of the fame name, whence it has got that of the finking river, i. 174-5.
Bellona. The company's veffel, the author embarks in her, ii. 355. The governor of Havannah refufes her entrance into his port, ii. 360 . Miftake of her pilots in their reckoning, ii. 364 . Their confufion in difcovering land; what refolution they take, ii. 366. Its unexpecied fuccefs; arrival at Cape François, ii. 367, 368.
Biloxi. Arrival at Biloxi, ii. 304. Defcription of the coaft and road of Biloxi : origin of that name, ii. 304, 305.

I N D E X.

Climate of Biloxi. Departure from thence. Remarks on its coaft, ii. 310, 31 r. Return of the author and crew of the Adour to Biloxi, ii. 349. Second departure from thence, ii. 355 - Buffaloe, of the hunting of the Buffaloe in Canada, i. 203. Defcription of this animal, i. 204.

Buffaloe, Mufked, its defcription, i. 205.
Birds. Of the principal kinds of birds in Canada, i. 238, E\%c.
Bears: Superftitious preparations of the Indians for hunting that animal, i. 181, $\vartheta^{\circ} c$. He paffes fix months without eating, i. 183. Manner of hunting the bears, ridiculous ceremony when one of them is killed, reception of the hunters at their return, i. 184,185 . Some particulars relating to this animal; i. 186.

C

Caicos. Defcription of the great Caicos, ii. 366.
Calumet. Of the Calumet of the Indians and its ufe, i. 320, 32I. Of its origin, i. 322, 323. Defcription of the dance of the Calumet, ii. 67 . Of the treaties made by means of that dance, ii. 70.
Canada; falfe notions entertained of it in France, i. 121, 122. Faults which have been committed in its fettlement, i. 125, E$^{\circ} c$. Bad conduct with refpect to the fur trade, i. $125, \mathfrak{E}^{\circ} c$. Of the licences and their abufe, i. 127, E\%c. Alterations made in their money, i. 146. Difference between the Beaver of Canada and that of Europe, i. 151, 152. Lordflips of Canada: commerce allowed to the gentlemen of the country, i. 172, 173. It is only known in France by its worft fide, exceffive cold which prevails there, i. $253, \mathcal{E}^{\circ} c$. Happy condition of its inhabitants, i. 263. Its extent, i. 279. Of its vines, i. 312. Why the trees have not leaves as yet in the month of May; i. 315 .
Canadians. Creols of Canada; their happy condition, i. 263. Many of them know not how to profit by it, i. 264. Good and bad qualities of the Creols, i. 264, $\xi^{\circ} c$.
Canes in Louifiana, ii. 239.
Canoet of bark, their defcription, i. 294, 295.
Carcajou; how it hunts the Elk, i. $201,202$.

1 N D E X.

Cardinals, a bird in Canada, i. 240.
Caribou, defcription of that animal, i. 202.
Cape François of St. Domingo, its defcription, ii. 37 I, 372. Of the plain of the Cape: obfervations on that colony, ii. 373. Departure from the Cape, ii. 375 .
Calina, or Apalachina, a fhrub, virtues of its leaves, ii. 305,306 .

Cafor, or Beaver, difference betwixt the leaves of Canada and that of Europe, i. 151, 152. Of the 1kin of the Beaver, i. 152, 153. Its Anatomical defcription, i. 153,154 . Of the green Beaver, and the dry Beaver, i. 157. Different ufes made of the fkin of the beaver, i. 158. Of the induftry and labours of the beaver, i. $159, \mathcal{E}^{\circ}$. Their forefight, i. 16I, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ} c$. Of the land Beavers, i. 163. Hunting of thefe animals, i. 164, E$^{\circ}$. Some remarkable particulars of thefe amphibious creatures, i. 166, 167.
Cafor. Of the inlands and nation of the Caftor, ii. 47.
Caforeum. What it is, i. 156 .
Catarocouy. Reflection on the fort of Catarocouy, and on the way that is taken to it, i. 292, 293. Defcription of the fort, i. 297. Route from that place to the Anfe de la Famine, or Creek of Famine; defcription of the country, i. 312, E® $^{2}$.
Ccdars. Two forts of in Canada, i. 247. White and red cedar, ii. 4 .
Cbambly, fort of, its fituation, i. 252.
Charlevoix. (Father) Auther of this journal, his journey from Paris to Rochefort : his danger on the Loire, i. $6_{3}, 64$. He embarks and fets fail, i.-68. Meets with a ftorm, i. 72, 73. His reception amongft the Poatewatamies, ii. 12. His departure from the Narrows for Michillimakinac, ii. 39. His adventure on the river St. Jofeph, ii. $9^{3}$. His departure from fort St. Jofeph, ii. 184. The news which he hears at Pimiteouy, he finds bimfelf between four parties of the enemies, ii. 205, 206. He is greatly embarraffed, ii. 207. Solicitude of the chief of Pimiteouy for his fafety, ii. 210, 211. He baptizes the chiefs daughter, ii. 212. His departure from the Natchez, ii. 270. He embarks on board the Adour, ii. 312. He arrives at Havre de Grace, ii. 379.
Cats, wild of Louifiana, ii. 242.

I N D. E .

Chaouacheis, an Indian nation, ii. 292.
Cbapitoualas, an Indian nation, ii. 287.
Chetimachas, an Indian nation, ii. 284.
Cbicāchas, an Indian nation, ii. 243. River of the Chicachas; ii. 24.4.
Cbiefs, of the Indians: remarks on their names, ii. 23. Of the order of fucceffion and election of thefe chiefs: of their power, iî. 23, 24. Of the war-chiefs, ii. 25.
Citrons, of the narrows, ii. 17.
Colapiffas, an Indian nation, ii. 285 .
Collars, of Porcelaine or Wampum: their ufe amongft the Indians, i. 319, 320.
Cotton, on a tree of Louifiana, ii. 253. Obfervation on the root of that tree, ii. 283.
Council, held by three Indian nations, with the commandant at the Narrows : refult of it, ii. $8, \mathcal{E}^{\circ} c$. Of the affiffants or counfellors at the Indian councils, ii. 24. Wifdom of thefe councils; of the orators who have right to fpeak in them, ii. 26, 27.
Currents. Obfervation on thofe in the lakes of Canada, ii. 78. Great currents between the Martyrs and the Turtle iflands, ii. 334.
Cuba. Defcription of the Northern coaft of that inland, ii. 317.

Cyprefs of Louifiana : obfervation on its virtues, ii. 283.
Cows, fea; their defcription, and fifhery of them, i. 226.
Cold. Exceffive in Canada, i. 254, 255. Inconveniencies occafioned by it, i. 256 . Reflections on the caufes of this great cold, i. $257, \xi^{\circ} c$.
Compafs, Obfervation on its variations, i. 96 .
Corn putrified; ufe made of it by the Indians, ii. 124.
Crew of the Adour; meafures they take for their-lafety, ii. 32 r . Are fufpected by the paffengers, ii. 323, 324. Their diforder, ii. 325. Diffention which follows; refolution of the officers, ii. 327. An Englifh Mhip endeavours in vain to affift them, ii. 328. Deliberate what to de, they divide; greateft part return to Biloxi, ii. 332, 333. Their defpair, provifions fail them, ii. 334, 335. Meet with fome fhipwreckt Spaniards; danger of being utterly loft, ii. 336,337 . Arrive at St. Mark of Apalache, ii. 338, 339. Departure from that place, ii. 341. Are falfely alarmed, ii. 343. Arrive at St. Jofeph, ii. 344. Departure from thence, C c 3

I N D E X.

ii. 346. Arrive at Penfacola, ii. 349. And at Biloxi, ii. 348.

Cod. And its fifhery, i. 73, Ec.

D.

Dance of fire; amongt the Indians, its defcription, i. 347. Story on that fubject, i. 348.

Dance, of the Calumet, its defcription, ii. 67, - $0^{\circ}$. Of the treatifes made by means of that dance, ii. 70. Other dances, ii. 7 I. Dance of the Buffalo, ii. 72. Dances prefcribed by the phyficians, ii. 72 .
Deluge. Tradition of a deluge among the Indians, ii. 228.

Defcription of the great bank of Newfoundland, i. 68, E\%c. Of a florm, i. 72, 73. Of the ifland of Anticofti, i. 88. Of Quebec, i. $99, \varepsilon^{\circ}$. Of the miffion of Loretto, i. ir6, ${ }^{\circ} \mathrm{c}$. Of the town of the Trois Rivieres, i. 178. Of the Elk, i. 197, 198. Of the wild Buffalo, and the mukk Euffalo, i. 204, 205. Of the ifland and city of Montreal, i. 213.214. Of the fea-wolf, i. 222, 22 3. Of the Rapides in the river St. Lawrence, i. 2,92, 293. Of the bark canoes, i. 294, 295. Of the fort of Catarocouy, i. 297. Of the fouthern coait of lake Ontario, i. 326, 327. Of the Snow-Shoes and carriages for baggage, i. $335,33^{6}$. Of the river of Cafconchiagon, i. 339. Of the bay of the Tronnonthouans, i. 340 . Of the river of Niagara, i. 341. Of the country in the neighbourhood of that river, i. 345, 346. Of the fire-dance, i. 347. Of the falls of Niagara, i. 353, $\sigma^{\circ}$ c. Of lake Erie, ii. 2. Of lake Superior, ii. 43. Of the dance of the Calumet, ii 67 , छvic. Of the Feftival of dreams, ii. 159, E $\overbrace{1}$. Of the Theakiki, ii. 197, 198. Of Kafkafquias, ii. 221. Of the Miffirippi above the Illinois, ii. 224, छ\%c. Of the country of the Natchez, ii. $252, \mathcal{E}^{\circ} \%$. Of the great village and temple of the Natchez, ii. $253, \mathcal{E}^{\circ} \mathrm{c}$. Of a feftival among the Natchez, ii. 266. Of new Orleans, ii. 275, 276. Of the river and village of the Tonicas, ii. 279, 280. Of the mouths of the Mifffippi, ii. 294, छ'c. Of the coaft road and port of Biloxi, ii. 304. Of the northern coaft of Cuba, ii. 317. Of the iflands of the Martyrs, ii. 329. Of the country of Apulache, ii. 339. Of St. Jofeph, ii. 344. Of the bay of Penfacola, ii. 348. Of the port of Havanna, ii. 358, 359. Of the bay of Matanzas, ii. 368. Of the grand Caicos, ii. 366. Of Cape François, ii. 372. Of the harbour of Plymouth, ii. 377 .

I N D EX.

Defertions frequent in Louifiana, ii. 352.
Doradoes, or Giltheads, a filh; obfervation on them, ii. 374.

Don Diepo, Cacique of the Indians of the Martyrs, pays a vifit to the French fhipwreckt in the Adour, ii. 330. Aus His authority; he refufes the French guides to St. Auguftin, ii. 331.
Death. What paffes at the death of the Indians, ii. 185, 186. Their generofity with refpect to the dead: funerals, tombs, apparitions, ii. 186, $E^{\circ} \mathrm{C}$. Different cuftoms with refpect to the dead, ii. 189. What paffes after burial; of their mourning, ii. 190. Notions of the Indians about thofe who die a violent death, ii. 192. Of the feftival of the dead, ii. 193. Manner of lamenting the dead amongft the Illinois, ii. 210.
Dreams, Of their nature according to the Indians, ii. 156. Story on that fubject, ii. 157, 158. Manner in which they difengage themfelves from a dream, when it would be too troublefome to fulfil it, ii. 158, 159. Of the feftival of dreams; defcription of one of thofe feftivals, ii. 159, ®' $^{\circ}$.

E.

Eclipfes. The Indians opinion of them, ii. 23I.
Erié. Defcription of lake Erié, ii. 2. Of the northern coaft of that lake, ii. 3 .
ERimeaux, Indians; their character and cuftoms, i. 273. छ\%.
Eagles of two kinds in Canada, i. 237.
Elk; defcription of that animal, i. 197. When it ought to be hunted, i. 199. Different methods of hunting it, i. 20, 21. How the Canajou hunts it, i. 201, 202.
Eels; of the fifhery of eels in Canada, i. 261, 262.
Englifb. Difference between the French and Englifh colonies, i. 113. Fruitlefs oppofition of the Englifh to a fet-tlement on the river Niagara, i. 344, 345. Englifh fhip attempts in vain to affilt the crew of the Adour, ii. 328 . Englifh interloper at Biloxi; his. fate, ii. 352. They endeavour to draw our allies from us, ii. 354. Rencounter with an Englifh captain, his cunning, ii. 375. Artifice of the Englifh to furprize pirates, ii. 379 .

I N D E X.

$$
\mathrm{F}
$$

Famine. Route from Catarocouy to the Anfe de la Famine, or Creek of famine, i. $312, \xi^{\circ} c$. Defeription of that place, i. 312, Eo'. Feftival of the dead among the Indians of Canada, ii. 192, Ec. Feftival of the Natchez, ii. 266.
Fire. Defcription of the fire-dance: ftory on that fubject, i. 347. Religion of fire throughout Florida, ii. 273.

Florida. Inconveniencies of the coaft of Florida, ii. 335.

Fountains, fingular, i. 340.
Forefts of Louifiana, ii. 245 .
French. Difference between the French and Englifh colonies, i. 113 . French deftitute of fpiritual fuccours among the Natchez, ii. 278. Their frequent defertions in Louifiana : confpiracy of fome of them difovered, ii. 352,353 .
Funerals, of the Indians of Canada, ii. 187.
Fafts, of the Indians, ii. 148.
Fall of Montmorency, i. 100.
Fall at the Recollet, i. 217.
Foll ' of St. Lewis: Iroquoife village at that fall, i, 218. Origin of that fettlement, i. 269, 270. Religious zeal of its firft inhabitants, i. 27 1.
Fijh. Of thofe that are found in the gulph and river of St Lawrence, i. 233, Eoc. Fifh peculiar to Canada, i, 237. Finh armed; its defcription, how it hunts birds, i. 234, 235.
Furs. Bad conduct with refpect to the Fur-trade, i. 124, ${ }^{-} E g^{\circ} c$. Of what is called the fmall furs or Peltry, i. 208, E\%
G. Ga/pey.

I N D E X.

G.

Gafpey. Bay and point of that name, i. 86.
Genii, good and evil according to the Indians, ii. (44.
Difpofitions required to have a tutelary genius, ii. $145 \cdot$
The Indians change fometimes their tutelary genius; and why, ii. 147. of evil Genii, ii. 165.
Gin-Seny. Of that of Canada, ii.-99. Gulph in the place of a mountain rooted up, i. 93. Gulph in the river Miffifippi, ii. 252.
Games. Of the game of the Platter or the Bones, ii. 13. Superftitious ufe of this game for the cure of the fick, ii. 15. Game of the ftraw, and other games ufed by the Miamis, ii. 102, Eic.
Ghofts. From what reafon the Indians believe in them, ii. 188.

H.

Havanna. Defcription of the harbour of Havanna, ii. 358, 359. The governor of that place refules a French thip the liberty of entering his port, ii. 360 .
Hebrews. Refemblance of the Indians to the Hebrews, ii. 150 .

Hontan, (Baron de la) Ly, which he tells on account of the fair of Montreal, i. 200.
Horun, (George de) His opinions about the origin of the ramericans, 32, E'c. $^{\circ}$.
Hurons. An Indian nation: of the people of the Huron language, ii. 288. Character of the Huron language, i. 299. Remarkable things of that language, i. 300. Difference between the people of the Huron nations, and thofe of the Algonquin nations, i. 303. Original of the war betwixt them and the Iroquois, i. 304, Esc. Confequences of that war, i. 307, E'c. Extraordinary diftempers of a Huron woman: ridiculous methods ufed for her cure, i. 349, $E^{\circ} c_{0}$. In what difpofition the author finds the Hurons of the Narrows, ii. 1 I. In what manner they punifh affaffination, ii. 33.
Hair. Why the Indians have no hair on their bodies, ii. 9 I.

I N D EX.

I.

Fefuits. Defcription of their college at Quebec, i. 106, 107.

Illinois, an Indian nation; their origin appears to be the fame with that of the Miamies, i. 287. River of the Illinois, ii. 199. Reception they give to prifoners, ii. 201, E'c. Manner in which they burn them, ii. 203. Remarks on their parties of war, ii. 203. Mournful fongs of thefe Indians, ii. 204. Remarkable ftory of one of their chiefs, ii. 208, 209. Manner of lamenting their dead, ii. 210 . Different tribes of thefe-Indians, ii. 227, 228. Ufefulnefs of the port of the Illinois, ii. 235, 236. Diftinguifhing marks of the Illinois warriors, ii. 243.
Indians. Devotion of the chriftian Indians of Loretto, i. 117, 118. Preparations and fuperfitious practices of the Indians, for hunting the bear, i. $180, \mathcal{E}^{\circ} c_{c}$ Manner of their hunting that animal: ridiculous ceremony when they have killed a bear, i. 184, 185. Reception of the hunters at their return, i. 185 . Of their hunting dogs, i. 187 . They marry the net before they ufe it, i. 236. Character of the Indians about Hudfon's bay, i. $276,8 \mathrm{cc}$. Of the northern Indians of Canada, i. 284. Of the other Indians of Hudfon's bay, i. 286, 287. Manner of declaring war among the Indians, $i .315 ; 3 \times 6$. Motives which engage them to war, i. 327, 328. See War.
Indians. Their notion of courage, i. 332. Caufe of the barbarity they exercife towards their prifoners of war, i. 375. Their dexterity in negotiation, i. 380, Ecc. Indians of Canada, why more eafily converted than civilized nations, ii. 20. General idea of their government, ii. 21. Divifion of the nation into tribes, ii. 21, 22. Obfervation on the names of the chiefs: of the fucceffion and election of thofe chiefs and their power, ii. 23, 24. Of the affiftants or counfellors of the body of the elders of the war chiefs, ii. 24, 25. Power of the women in fome nations, ii. 25,26 . Wifdom of their councils: their orators, ii. 26, 27. Of the government of villages; its defects; their caufes, ii. 29. Of their fenfibility of the point of honour, ii. 36. Care of the young Indians in adorning themfelves, ii. 40, 4I. Indian fable about lake Superior, ii. 44, 45. Their traditions about Michillimakinac, ii. 45. Their Marriages, ii. 48, &c. Jealoufy of the Indians, ii. 50. Of the impofing this name amongft them : remarks upon it, ii. 55, 56. The Indians of the bay dance the Calumet, ii. 67. Superftition of the Indians bordering on the bay, ii. 73, 74. Different nations to the northward and the weftward of Canada, ii. 74,75 .

Indians of Canada; their perfonal appearance; their ftrength; their vices, ii. 78, 79. Why they do not encreafe; advantages they have over us, ii. 80, 81. Their eloquence, ii. 83. Their memory, penetration, and judgment, ii. 83, 84. Their greatnefs of foul, ii. 84. Their conftancy under pain; their valour, ii. 84, छ'c. Their regard for one another, ii. 86, 87. Their fiercenefs and other faults; of the qualities of the heart, ii. 87,88 . Inftances of the little natural affection children have for their parents; particular focieties amongft them, ii. 89,90 . Of their colour; why they have no hair on their bodies, ii. 90, 91. Their fecrefy with refpect to the fimples and mines of their country, ii. 101. Dreadful confequences of drunkennefs amongft them, ii. 105, 106. Their happinefs, ii. 107. Contempt of our manner of life, ii. 108. Care the Indian mothers take of their children; ridiculous fhapes which fome of them give them, ii. $109, V_{c}$. What ftrengthens and renders them fo well made ; their firf exercifes and the emulations amongft them, ii. 114. To what the education given them may be reduced to, ii. 114, 115 . Their paffions, ii. 115. Their drefs, ii. 116, 117. In what manner they prick their whole bodies', ii. n18. How and for what purpofe they paint their faces, ii. 119 . Ornaments of the men, of the women, ii. 119, 120. Their occupations; of the culture of the land; of feed-time and harveft, ii. 121, 122. Of the different grains and pulfe they cultivate, of their manner of dreffing them; of their other victuals, ii. 123, 124. Labours of the men and women, ii. 125, 126. Their utenfils; form of their villages, ii. 126, 127. Their manner of fortifying them, ii. I28. Of their winter encampments, and what they fuffer in them, ii. 129, $\varepsilon^{\circ} c l$ Their naftinefs, ii. I33. Ineonveniences which fummer occafions them, ii. 134. Their character in brief, ii. $136, \varepsilon^{\circ}$. Origin of mankind according to the Indians, ii. 14I, $E^{\circ} c$. Their notion of fpirits, ii. 143, 144. Their facrifices, ii. 148. Their fafts and vows, ii. 148, 149. Refemblance of the Indians to the Hebrews; their priefts, ii. 150, 151. Indian veftals, ii. 15 I. Their opinion of the immortality of the foul, of what becomes of it after it is feparated from the body: why they carry victuals to the tombs, ii. 152, 153. Prefents which they make to the dead, ii. 153. How they pretend to merit eternal happinefs, ii. 154,155 . Their notion of the fouls of beafts, ii. 155 . Of the nature of dreams according to them, ii. $156,8^{\circ} \mathrm{c}$. Ordinary difeafes amongft thefe people, ii. 176, \&cc. Ufe they make of their fimples, ii. 173 . Divers other remedies they ufe, ii. 174, 175. Principles on which their medicine is founded; their extravagant notion of difeafes, ii. 176, 177. What paffes at their death, ii. 189 . Their generofity to the dead of their funerals and tombs, ii. 186, 187. Their notion of ghofts, ii. 188. Their different practices with refpect to the dead, ii. 189. Their notion of thofe who die a violent death, ii. 192. The pains they take to furprize their enemies, ii. 216. Traditions of the fin of the firft woman, and the deluge amongft the Indians, ii. 228, 229. Their notion of the ftars, how they know the north when the fky is overcaft, ii. 230. Their notion of eclipfes and thunder, ii. 231. Their manner of dividing time, ii. 232, 233. On the iflands of the Martyrs; what paffes between them and the French that were fhipwrecked, ii, 322. Embarraffment on their part, iii. 32.5 . Who thefe Indians were, ii. 326.

I N D E X.

Indigo of Loulfiaha, ii. 255.
Iroquois of the Fall of St. Lewis and the mountain ; diforders among them occafioned by brandy, i. 219. Origin of their fettlement at the Fall of St. Lewis, i. 269, 270.

IN DE X.

Religious zeal of the fire inhabitants of that colony, is 27 I . Policy of the Iroquois, ii. 28.
Island of Birds, i. 85.
1 Re aux Coudres, its fituation, i. 93.
Isle of Orleans, i. 97.
J les of Richelieu and St. Francis, i. 189, 190.
Inge of fetus, i. 216.
1 les of St. Peter, i. 83.
'Jugglers of Canada, ii. 167, 168. Their tricks, ii. 168.
$\mathrm{E}^{\circ} \mathrm{C}$. Inftallation of the Jugglers, ii. $\mathbf{1 7 1}$. Impostures of the Jugglers, their cruelty to fisk perfons when given over, ii. 177. Jugglers of Acadia called futmains, ii. 178. Jugglers of the Natchez, ii. 270.
K. .

Kafkäfuias, defcription of it, ii. 221, 222.
Kicapous, an Indian nation, i. 287.

L.

Lakes of Canada, observation on their currents, ii. 78.
Lake of Pontchartrain, ii. 312.
Lake of St. Peter, i. 177.
Lake of the Affiniboils, i. 282.
Lakes, flux and reflux of thor of Canada, i. 314.
Lake Superior, its defcription, ii. 43, 44. Indian fable about that lake : mines of copper on its banks, ii. 44, Laït, (John de) what he thought of the opinions of $45 \cdot$ the Acofta, Lefcarbot, Brerewood, and Grotius, of the origin of the Americans, i. 11, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ} c$. His quarrel with Grotius on that fubject, i. 16, sic. His own opinion, i. $27, \mathcal{E}^{\circ} c$. What he fays of that of Moraëz, i. 3 I.
Languages of Canada. The Huron language; the Algonquin language : character of thole two languages, i. 299, छॅс.
Law, (M.) his grant at the Akeonfas, ii. 247.
Loretto, village in Canada; defcription of his miffion in that place: zeal of the Indians in that place, i. 116 , $\varepsilon^{\circ} c$.

Louifana.

I N D E.

Louifiana. Fruit trees of that country, ii. 223. Its forefts, ii. 345. Where the fettlements ought to be placed, ii, 298. Caufe of the unjuft notion entertained of it in France, ii. 300. Defertions frequent in Louifiana, ii. 353.
Licenfes, abufe of, i. 127.

M.

Maïz. The corn of Canada, ii. 122. Of Maïz bread, ii. 124.

Maladies, the ordinary, amongft the Indians, ii. 172. Their extravagant notions about them, ii. $177 \cdot$ Magdalen, Cape of, i. 79.
Magicians, their punifhment amongf the Indians, ii.
Malbomines, or wild-oat men, an Indian nation, ii. 6r.
Marameg, river; its mines, ii. 219.
Marriages; of the Indians, of the plurality of wives and hufbands, ii. 48, 49. Particular laws relating to marriage, ii. 49 . In what manner marriages are contracted, ii. 50 . Ceremonies ufual in it, ii. 52.
Mar/hal, Englifh interloper at Biloxî, ii. 352. His fate, ii. 359 .

Martyrs. Indians on the Jflands of Martyrs, ii. 322. Defcription of thefe iflands, ii. 329. Great currents between thefe iflands and the Tortugas, ii. 334.
Matanzas. Defcription of the bay of Matanzas, ii. ${ }_{3} 61$.
Maubile, river of, ii. 308 :
Mafcoutius, an Indian nation, i. 287.
Medicine, principles upon which that of the Indians turns, ii. 179 .

Miamis, Indians, feem to have the fame original with the lllinois, i. 287. Cuftoms peculiar to them in preparing for war, i. 334. Games ufed amongft them, ii. 102, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ} c$.

Michigan, lake, danger of the navigation on it: obfervation on the rivers which run into it from the Eaft, ii. 94.

Micbillimakinac. Situation of that poft, ii. 43. Traditions of the Indians about Michillimakinac: plentiful fifhery in that canton, ii. 45, 46.

I N D E X.

Mifrisppi. Entrance into that river by that of the Illinois. ii. 217. Confluence of the Miffouri and Miffifippi, ii. 218. Defcription of it above the Illinois, ii. 224, E\%c. Manner of failing on it, ii. 237. Changes which have happened at its mouth, ii. 291. Of its channels, ii. 293. Of its principal mouth; other channels, ii. 204, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ}$ c. Its breadth between the channels, ii. 297. Difficulty of the navigation, ii. 299, 312. Obfervation on the water of the Miffifippi, ii. 316.

Miflinnaries at the Natchez, ii. 277.
Miflouri, the Indians of Miffouri, defeat a Spanifh party, ii. 64. Miffouri river, of its confluence with the Miffifippi, ii. 218. Nations fettled on its banks, ii. 224.

Mines. Secrefy of the Indians with refpect to their mines," ii. ior. Mines of the river Marameg, ii. 219. Mines of iron, ii. 241.
Money, changes made in that of Canada, i. 146.
Montreal. Difference between the country of Quebec and that of Montreal, i. 212. Defcription of the ifland and city of Montreal, i. 213 , $\sigma^{\circ} \mathrm{c}$. Of the environs of that inland, i. 217. Of the fair of Montreal, i. 220, 221.
Mourning, of the Indians of Canada, ii. 191. That of the Natchez, ii. 27 I .
Men, their origin, according to the Indians, ii. 141, $\xi^{\circ} c$.

N.

Natchez, an Indian nation, defcription of their country, ii. 252 , \&c. Defcription of their grand village and their temple, ii. 255 , \&c. Remarkable particularities of that nation, ii. 259, 260. Of their grand chief, and the woman chief, what happens at their death, ii. $260, \vartheta^{\circ} c$. Their manners and cuftoms, ii. 264, छ${ }^{\circ} c_{\text {. }}$ Defcription of one of their feftivals, ii. 266. They offer the firft fruits in their temple : their marriages, ii. 266, 267. How they levy foldiers; of provifions; of their marches and encampments, ii. 267, 268. How they treat their prifoners; change of name in their warriors for a reward of their exploits; their jugglers, ii, 269,270 . In what their mourning con6 fifts;

$$
I N D E X .
$$

fifts ; their treaties; audience given to embaffadors; ii. 271, E'C. $^{\circ}$
Niagara, River; its defcription, i. 341. Project for a fettlement on that river; fruitlefs oppofition of the Englifh, i. 343. Defcription of the country of Niagara, i. 345. Defcription of the falls of Niagara; obfervations on, i. 352, E`c.
Name, obfervation on the names of the Indian chiefs, ii. 23. Of the ceremony of impofing names among thefe people: obfervations on that fubject, ii. 55, 56.
Noquets, Indians; bay of the Noquets, ii. 60.
Newfoundland. Of the inhabitants of that ifland, i. 273.

O.

Obfervations on the heat and on the latitudes, ii. 355, 356. Obfervations on the colony of Cape François, in St. Domingo, ii. 373.
Oijeau Mouche of Canada, in what it differs from the Colibry of the illands, i. 241 .
Ontario. Defcription of the fouthern coaft of lake Ontario, i. $326,327$.
Onnesouth. Courage of an Onneyouth captain, burnt by the Hurons, i. 377, E $^{\circ} \mathrm{c}$.
Orleans New; its defcription, ii. 273, 274. Remarks on its fituation; little depth of foil below that city, ii. 289,290 . Its condition at the departure of the author, ii. 29 I.
Onabuche river; its fituation, ii. 24 I .
Oumas, an Indian nation, ii, 284.
Outagamies, Indians, i. 287.
Outaways, Indians, in 285.
Oaks of two kinds in Canada.
$O_{y}$ ters of two forts on the coaft of Florida, ii. 336.
P.

Parrots of Louifiana, ii. 205.
Pafengers, efcaped from the fhipwreck of the Adour; what paft between them and the Indians of the Martyrs, ii. 322. They fufpect the crew, ii. 323. Several faved by interpofition of providence, ii. 324. Anxiety which the Indians occafion them, ii. $3^{2} 5$. Partridges,

$1 \mathrm{~N} D \mathrm{E}$.

Partridges, three kinds of, in Canada, i. 238.
Penfacila. Tides on that coaft, ii. 342. State of that port in 1722. Defcription of the bay of Penfacola, ii. 348. It is given up to the Spaniards, ii. 351,352 .

Pimiteony. Village of the Illinois, ii. 205. Remarkable ftory of the chief of that village, ii. 209. His follicitude for the fafety of father Charlevoix, ii. 210, 211 . His daughter is baptized, ii. 212.
Pines, red and white, ii. 97. Of two forts in Canada, i. 246 .

Plymouth; arrival at Plymouth ; defcription of that harbour, ii. 376, 377.
Pointe coupree, ii. 249. Second Pointe coupeé, ii. 282.
Poutewatamies, Indians. i. 286. Their reception of the author, ii. 12. Inlands of the Poutewatamies, ii. 60. Of their chief and orator, ii. 104.
Priefts, who are priefts among the Indians, ii. $151,17 \mathrm{r}$.
Prifoners of war among the Indians; their firf reception, i. 368. Their bravadoes, i. 369. Their fufferings on entering a village, i. 370 . Diftribution made of them, i. 37 I . In what manner their fate is determined, i: $37 \mathrm{I}, \& \mathrm{cc}$. Of thofe who are adopted : of thofe whoare condemned to be burnt, i. 373 . In what manner they receive their condemnation, i .374 . Caufes of the barbarity exercifed againft them, i. 375. Their reception amongt the Illinois, and the manner in which they are burnt, ii. 201, E'c. How they are treated among the Natchez, ii. 269.

Prıvençal. Remarkable adventure of a Provençal fhip, i. $115,116$.

Pyromancy practifed among the Indians, ii. 170.

,

2uebec. Origin of the name of that city, i. 99. Its fituation, i. 100: Defcription of that city and its principal edifices, i. IOI, $\mathcal{O}^{\circ} \mathrm{c}$, The bifhoprick, i. 103. The cathedral and feminary, i. 104. Of the fort and cape Diamond, ii. 105. Of the Recollets and Urfulines, i. ro6. Of the college of Jefuits, i. $10 \%$ The Hotel Dieu, i. 108. The hofpital general, i. 109. The fortifications, i. iro. Of the inhabitants, i. 112. Difference between the country of Quebec and that of Montreal, i. 212.

Vol. II.
D d Rafides.

R.

Rapides. Defcription of the rapides of the river St. Laurence, i. 292, 293, 296.
Rat, Mufk; its defcription, i. 168.
Race, Cape, of its fituation, i. 82.
Recollets. Defcription of their houfe at Quebec, i. 106.

Richelieu. Illands of, i. 189. Fort of Richelieu, i. $194^{\circ}$
River of Beckancourt, whence it has got the name of the Stinking River, i. 174, 175.
River of the Meadows, i. 217.
River of father Marguette, ii. 95, 96.
River of the Illinois, ii. 199, E'c. Its courfe, ii. 216, 217 . Its entry into the Miffiffippi, ii. 217.
River Onabache, ii. 240, 241.
River of the Chicachas, ii. 244.
River of the Akanfas: its Defcription, ii. 246.
River of the Yafous, ii. 249.
River, Red, ii. 281.
River of the Maubile, ii. 308.
Rivers. Obfervations on thofe which fall into lake Michigan, ii. 94.
S.

Saguenay, river, i. 91.
Sacrifices of the Indians, ii. 147.
Sagamety, ordinary food of the Indians, ii. $123 \cdot$
St. Bernard, bay of, ii. 309.
St. Mark of Apulache, Spanifh fort ; defcription of its envîrons, ii. 338, 339 .
St. Fofeph. Defcription of the bay and fort of St. Jofeph: civility of the Spanif governor, ii. 345, 346.

St. Domingo. Courfe from the gulph of Florida to St. Domingo, ii. 362 .
St. Rofe. Channel and ifland of, ii. 347*
St. Laurence. Gulph of, i. 85.
St. Laurence. River of, entrance into it, i. 86, 87. Of is tides, and the variation of the compars, i. $9^{6 .}$ Fifh

1 N D E X:

Fifh found in it, i. 233, E'c. Defcription of its Rapides, i. 292, 293, 296.
St. Francis. Inlands and village of, i. 190. Lake of St. Francis, i. 295, 296.
St. Paul. Bay of, i. 94.
St. Ptter, Inands of, i. 83. Lake of St. Peter, i. 177, 178.

Sakies. An Indian nation, iii 63 . Council held by them, and on what account, ii. 65,66 .
Saffafras. tree of Canada, ii. 100.
Seine. The Indians marry that net before they ufe it, i. 236 .

Simples. Secrefy of the Indians with refpect to the Simples of their country, ii. ror. Ufe they make of them, ii. 173.

Snake. Rattle-fnake; its defrription; remedy againft its bite, i. 243, 244.
Sioufe Indians, their manner of living, i. 280, E ${ }^{\circ} \mathrm{c}$.
Sorcerers amongft the Indians, ii. 165, 166, Sweating. Ufe made of it by the Indians, ii. 175.
Spaniards. One of their parties defeated by the Indians of Miffouri, ii. 64.
Sturgion. Manner of fißhing it, i. 236,
Sword-fifh. Defcription of it, and its combat with the whale, i. 77.
Stinkards. Indians fo called, ii. 6I. Fort and miffion of the bay of the Stinkards, ii. 62.
Spirits. What they are amongt the Indians, ii. 143. See Genii.

T.

Tactor:Sut, Harbour of, i. 92, 93.
Taïfas, an Indian nation, ii. 286.
Tamarouas, Illinois ntion, their village, ii. 218, 219.
Tempeft. Its bad conféquences, ii. 31!,
Temple of the Natchez; its defcription, ii. 255, E'c. Firft fruits offered in that temple, ii. 266, 267.
Thenkiki river ; its fource, ii. 184. Its defcription, 197, 198.

I N D E X.

Thouloufe, Ifland of, ii. 293, 294.
Thunder. Opinion of the Indians about it, ii. 23 r.
Tombs. Why the Indians carry victuals to their tombs, ii. 153 . Of the Indian tombs, ii. 187, 188.

Tinicus. Indian nation; defcription of their village; of their chief; flate of that nation, ii. 280.
Ton:bata. Ifland, its fituation, i. 296.
Tortoifes. In what thofe of Canada and Acadia are remarkable, i. 234.
Tortugus. Iflands of, great currents between them and the Martyrs, ii. 334.
Trade in brandy; diforders it occafions among the Iroquois of the fall of St. Lewis, and of La Montagne, i. 219 .

Trois Rivieres, Town of, its fituation, i. 176. Ded fcription of it, i. $1 ; 8$. Origin of its fettlement, i. 179.

Turtles. A kind of branchers; their paffage into Canada, i. 262 .

Tides in the river St. Laurence, i. 96. Sort of tide in the lakes of Canada, i. 314. Tides on the coaft of Benfac la, ii. $3+2$
Treis peculiar to Canada, i. 249. Why the trees in Canada have no leaves in the month of May, i. 315. Fruit trees in Louifiana, ii. 223. Why the leaves fall fo foon and come out fo late in Louifana, ii. $23^{8 .}$

V.

Vercberes, (madame and mademoifelle de) brave action of thefe two Canadian ladiés, i. 195.
$V$ eftals. If there are any fuch among the Indians, ii.
15 \%.
Villages. Form of the Indian ones; manner in which they are fortified, ii. 127, Efi.
Vows of the Indians, ii. 149.
Voyazes. Inconveniencies of voyages in Canada, i. 325, 326. Pleafures of fuch voyages, ii. 3 .
U. Julizes of Quebec, i. 106.

I N D EX.

W.

Wampum, or Porcelain of Canada, i. 318. Of the branches and collars of Wampum, their ufe, i. 319, 320.

War. Manner of finging the war fong among the Indians, i. 315. Of the God of war, i. 316. Of the declaration of war, i. 317. Motives which engage the Indians to make war, i. 327,328 . In what manner they refolve upon it; preparations of the chief, i. 328, 329. Deliberations of the council; meafures taken for having prifoners, i. 330. Songs, dance, and feafts of the warriors, i. $331,332$. Trials made of the warriors; precautions for the wounded, i. 333. Farewell of the warriors, i. 336, 337. Their arms offenfive and defenfive, i. 337, 338. Their care to take their Gods along with them, i. $33^{8}$. Of the march of the warriors, i. $357,358$.

Of their encampment; of the meeting of different warlike parties, i. 358. Of their entering an enemy's country ; of the approaches and attack, i. 359, 360. Their manner of fighting; their inftinct in finding out the tracks of the enemy, i. 36r. The monuments they leave of victory; precautions for fecuring the retreat and guarding the prifoners, i. 362 . How they proclaim the victory in the villages, i. 363 . Triumph of the warriors, i. 368.

Widowhood. Of widowhood and fecond marriages among the Indians, ii. 191.
Woman. Tradition of the fin of the firf woman among the Indians, ii. 228, 229. Woman-chief of the Natchez, ii. 260, Efc. Women, their power in fome Indian nations, ii. 25,26 . Advantages of the mothers over the fathers, ii. 53. Of their lying-in, and its confequences, ii. 54. Of the care they take of their children, ii. 55 .
Whale. His combat with the fword-fifh, i. 77. Of the whale-fifhery in the river St. Laurence, i. 229.
Wolf, Sea. Of its finhery, i. 222. Defcription of that animal; its different kinds, i. 223. Ufe of its flefh and fkin, i. 224. Remarkable things of that animal, i. 225, 226.

I NEX.

Wheat. Why it has not fucceeded in Louifiana, ii.
239.

Y.

Fafous. Indian nation: river of the Yafous, ii. 250. Of the fort of the Yafous, i. 250. Alligators in the tiver, i. 25 .

$$
F I N I S \text {. }
$$

-
0
2
(
(

[^0]:    * This is the name which the Indians give to the governorgeneral, it fignifies great mountain, and is derived from the Chevalier Montgnagny, who was the fecond governor of Canada.
    $\dagger$ They always call the governors and the commandants their Fathers.

[^1]:    * The black river is in 4 deg .50 min . that is in the fame latitude with the place whence the gingfeng of Corea is brought for the ufe of the emperor of China. Some of it has been fent to China, and after being prepared by the Chinefe, has been by themfold as coming from Corea or Tartary. Befides, this preparation adds nothing to its value.

[^2]:    * The poet Regnard affures us, in his voyage to Lapponia, that he has feen the fame thing done in Bothnia.

[^3]:    * This is a long fort of boat made of the trunk of a fingle tree. Canoes of bark are feldom made ufe of in thefe parts.

[^4]:    * He has in reality been fince converted.

[^5]:    * A Miamife woman who had been prifoner among the Sioux affured Father de St. Pé, at Frefent fuperior of the miffions of New-France, that the had been carried by the Sioux to a village of their nation, which was very near the fea.

[^6]:    * This project has been fince given over, becaufe they fay this wax, by being whitened, undergoes confiderable alterations.

[^7]:    Vol. II.
    Y
    which

[^8]:    * We have fince learned that they have gone there.

    Vol. II.
    A a deferters

[^9]:    - This mine has never been heard of fince that time.

